TA Students Start 70-71 Registration

Registration for the 1970-71 term started Tuesday morning at Tawas Area School.

Seventh and eighth grade students opened registration August 25-26 and are to be followed by ninth and 10th grades on August 27-28; 11th and 12th grades, August 31-September 1.

Any family which has moved into the area is urged to register immediately. Following state department of education policy, Tawas Area School requires that a student must live with his parents or legal guardian in order to register.

While enrollment of new students during preregistration is higher than anticipated, administrators said Monday night that the school could operate within limits of space at the high school. Under present scheduling, there will be only one vacant room during each hour.

Miss Clara Bolen, elementary supervisor, said that she was concerned about the high kindergarten enrollment at East Tawas. Seventy-one first year pupils have already been registered. She also pointed out that sixth grade enrollment was higher than anticipated.

Arrangements are now being made to rent two classrooms at Zion Lutheran School, which will not operate this year. A number of the Zion students have been registered in Emanuel Lutheran School.

John Alexander, high school principal, announced that staffing of the junior and senior high school faculty had been completed with hiring of mathematics and business education teachers. There are eight new members of the faculty this year, six of whom are replacements. Two additions to the staff include an assistant band director and a science teacher to handle the increased enrollment. It was reported at Monday night's board of education meeting that proposed changes in the English department and home economics would not be made for the present.

Because of the lack of flexibility in scheduling, the cooperative nursing program at Tawas Hospital will not be included in the school curriculum this year. Six senior girls had expressed interest in the program.

The proposed program would have required students to be at the hospital from 8:00 a. m. until 12 o'clock noon. Because of schedule conflicts, students would have been unable to include regular courses in their schedule.

Alexander said that the school would continue to investigate the possibility of including this program in the curriculum. Students planning to participate could begin to plan to take required credit courses during their junior year.

Tawas Area High School Yearbooks will be distributed Thursday, August 27, at the high school library. Mrs. Ruth Hess announced the hours to be from 9:00 a. m. to noon and 1:00 to 4:00 p. m. All students who ordered yearbooks are to present their receipts when picking up yearbooks.

TA Board Endorses Proposed ET Pool

Tawas Area Board of Education has endorsed a plan announced last week by the East Tawas Business Association for construction of an indoor swimming pool at the foot of Newman Street in the East Tawas Park.

A representative of the association told the East Tawas Council last week that a move was under way to finance cost of the proposed swimming pool through revenue bonds.

In other business conducted Monday night, the board began preparing for the coming school year by awarding contracts on bids.

Gase Bakery was the lone bidder on furnishing baked goods for the hot lunch program and received the contract. Nelkie Dairy received the contract for furnishing dairy products. The bid of Standard Oil Company was accepted for furnishing gasoline.

Three old school buses were sold to two persons entering bids. Bus No. 2 went to Robert Krumbach for $156, while William Wainwright received bus No. 18 for $150 and bus No. 15 for $75.

The following salary schedule recommended by the board's hot lunch committee was adopted: Head cooks, $2.15 per hour; experienced helpers, $1.80 per hour; first year helpers, $1.60 per hour.

The board authorized purchase of two pianos for the elementary department at a cost of $695 each. The purchase is financed from the elementary teacher's fund, which results from the sale of pictures from students.

Mrs. Joseph Rigg was hired as an aide for Charles Crowley, special education teacher at the high school. Mrs. Rigg completed special training in this field and completed her intern work. Her salary was set at $2.25 per hour.

Yeo and Yeo, certified public accountants, presented the annual audit of school finances to the board of education.

Because of a conflict of meetings, the September 28 meeting of the board of education has been moved to September 21.

Would Close School in Case Faculty Strikes

Currently revising and compiling all of its school policies, Tawas Area Board of Education Monday night adopted a new policy in the event the school is closed by a faculty strike.

In the event of a strike, the school would be manned 24 hours a day by administrators. School would not be in session, there would be no band practice or athletic activities and all buses would be secured in the high school parking lot.

John Alexander, high school principal, said that such a policy was necessary in the best interest of safety for the school and the children.

The board's policy committee reported that a rough draft of the compiled policies would be ready for board review on September 14. Action would be taken at the following meeting in order to begin printing the policies in booklet form.

The board gave its approval to read policies affecting the student body on the opening day of school. Alexander said there would be no changes in last year's dress code, which requires that students wear socks and shoes and keep shirt tails tucked into trousers. Girls are not allowed to wear slacks.

A new policy concerning student automobiles is to be announced on opening day.

Community Chest Board to Hear Budget Goal

There will be a meeting of the executive board of Tawas-Whitmore Area Community Chest Tuesday, September 1, 7:30 p. m., at the Tawas Chamber of Commerce office.

Albert Dequette, chairman of the budget and admissions committee, will present the proposed goal his committee arrived at after meeting with various agencies included in this year's fall campaign drive.

The executive board will be asked to give its approval or disapproval of the allocated funds for the budget and admissions has set up.

TA Teachers Hear Status of Negotiations

A special meeting of Tawas Area Education Association was held last night (Tuesday) in the high school library. The meeting was intended to brief members on the status of teacher contract negotiations for the new school year.

A fact finder assigned by the state in the contractual dispute between the board of education and teachers' association has scheduled a hearing for 1:30 p. m. Thursday, August 27. The meeting is to be held at the East Tawas Elementary Unit multipurpose room and is open to the public.

Kenneth L. Grinstead, Eastern Michigan University professor and fact finder assigned by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission, has indicated that he expects his report on Tawas Area Schools to be ready by August 31 or September 1.

Tawas Area Board of Education's negotiator, Thomas Basil of Saginaw, has declined to grant a base salary increase beyond four percent for the new year. Negotiations have narrowed the difference between the two parties to about $71,000.

Cancel Tour

A natural resources tour scheduled for Thursday, August 27, which included a stop at the Leonard Robinson farm in Reno Township, has been canceled. According to the announcement by Marvin Davenport, county agent, there was a lack of registrations. The tour is to be rescheduled in September or October.

State Police Investigate 4 Accidents

State police investigated four personal injury motor vehicle accidents from Thursday through Sunday.

Three persons received minor injuries Thursday afternoon in a four-car collision on US-23 near Townline Road. A car driven by Jasper O. Blackman, 69, East Tawas, was in the process of making a left hand turn. The rear of his car was struck by Dennis G. Swiontek, 24, Detroit. An accordion-type accident resulted when a car driven by John E. Maroley, 52, Hazel Park, struck the Swiontek vehicle and a car driven by Jennie M. Carvo, 64, Flint, struck the Maroley vehicle.

Gregory J. Reinke, 22, Tawas City, was treated at Tawas Hospital Thursday evening in a crash on McArde Road near the Meadow Road intersection. Reinke's motorbike skidded in the gravel road and tipped over.

Richard A. Nichols, 34, Flint, was injured early Saturday morning on US-23, Baldwin Township, when his motorbike hit a deer. He was treated at Tawas Hospital.

Dennis M. Remington, 27, Bay City, was treated at Tawas Hospital Sunday afternoon when he cut his ankle on the chain of the mini bike which he was operating on private property near Sand Lake.

Thomas Kennedy Named President of Booster Club

Second meeting of the Tawas Area Braves Booster Club was held Thursday night at the high school.

New officers of the club are Thomas Kennedy, president; Edward Poppe, vice president; Mrs. Dawn Rolfe, secretary, and Walter Kasichke, treasurer.

A number of projects were voted on by the members and the next meeting date was set for September 2, 7:30 p. m., at the high school.

The next meeting will consist of a special demonstration by the football team.

List Items Schools Must Furnish to Students

Free books, pencils, paper and crayons are among items students need for class work that must be provided by the schools under a new policy guideline of the Michigan State Board of Education.

Basically, the policy says that all materials used as part of the school curriculum in required or elective classes must be free to students.

As soon as cost estimates are available, the board will seek state appropriations from the legislature to help ease the financial burden on school districts.

The board said, however, that school districts may continue to charge fees for extracurricular activities when such activities carry no academic credit.

Acting superintendent of public instruction, Dr. John W. Porter, said an example might be where members of a football team participating only in interscholastic and extracurricular sports could be required to furnish their own football shoes, but the school could not charge for band instruments if credit toward graduation is given for band.

The board policy statement grew out of a July 17 ruling of the Michigan Supreme Court.

In a case brought by parents in Ann Arbor, the high court said that general student fees were illegal and also ruled that books and school supplies, being essential to school, must be provided without charge to the student or his parents under the Michigan Constitution.

After consulting with the state attorney general and numerous school authorities, the state board of education published its guidelines to help define responsibilities of the state's more than 600 districts.

Among the items covered by the state board of education policy statement:

No student should be denied even extracurricular activities because of family financial hardship.

Schools do not have to furnish free food or clothing offered in required or elective classes.

Charges for damaged or loss of school property may be imposed if the books or other materials have been provided free, and reasonable, refundable deposits may be required from those able to pay.

Adult education courses not leading to a high school diploma, and summer school classes not part of an extended school year, may charge fees.

As a means of providing examples of what schools may not (not) make charges for, the board cited: Pencils, paper, crayons, regular and supplemental textbooks, band instruments, weekly readers or other periodicals if required in the classroom, towels, locks, lockers, shop materials, drafting supplies, home economics materials, workbooks, materials in science classes, book rental, educational trips required for class and vocational or special education.

The board said school districts may charge for class or organizational dues; admission fees to athletic contests, dances or plays; student activity cards on a voluntary basis; dues for such "external" tests as National Merit or college entrance exams; damage or loss of school-owned materials; club dues; lunch; yearbooks; football shoes; gym shoes; swimming suits; bus transportation for nonresident students; sponsored trips, unless they are a class assignment; shots or vaccinations; caps and gowns; and insurance fees for interscholastic athletics in accordance with present statutes.

Court Ruling Could Help to Strengthen Tawas Band

The recent supreme court ruling is not expected to have much effect on Tawas Area School's band program, although Gene Salomony, director, told members of the board of education Monday night that this school district was in a good position to comply with the ruling and that it may even strengthen the band's position.

Stating that he had been opposed in the past to the school's practice of owning and renting some band instruments, Salomony admitted that the school was most fortunate in owning a supply of instruments which will make it easy to comply with the ruling.

In the past, the school had charged a rental fee for these instruments in order to pay for repairs. About $1,500 has been collected annually and spent on repairs. Due to the ruling, no charge may be made. In addition, the school must provide a reasonable amount of reeds for instruments.

This, he said, could work for the betterment of the program as the school could now demand progress from the students. On the negative side, Salomony believed he would be spending more time on bookkeeping.

The board of education authorized an expenditure of $4,000 to finance additional purchase of instruments and expendable items. This would be the initial purchase and the expenditure is expected to be lower next year.

At its next meeting, the board of education is to receive an analysis on additional costs in the wood shop and home economics department which will result from the supreme court ruling.

TODAY'S Meditation

From
The World's Most Widely Used
Devotional Guide

Read Hebrews 12:4-11

For the moment, all discipline seems painful rather than pleasant; later, it yields the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it. (Hebrews 12:11, RSV)

A minister visited a mother shortly after her first child, Betty, was born. Propped up in the hospital bed, she was writing.

"Come in," she said, "I'm house-cleaning today. I've had a wonderful chance to think here."

She continued, "I've always hated any kind of restraint. I always wanted to be free. God didn't mean very much to our gang when I married. Now, I see I have to houseclean my heart and my head for Betty's sake. Won't you pray for Betty, Joe and me, and our new home?"

Every generation has a tendency to rebel against the traditions they inherit and discipline imposed upon them by their parents.

But those who love and value their children do not want them to be polluted by degrading influences or lack of discipline. Many new parents begin to set up standards and disciplines so that their children may live worthwhile lives.

PRAYER

Eternal God, grant us the light to see that love lies behind law and discipline. Grant us the grace to discipline ourselves and our children in the pursuit of godly living. In the name of Jesus, we ask it. Amen.

THE BIBLE
TO YOU

Radical reliance on God's all-power which enabled Christ Jesus to heal physical, mental and social ills is attainable today by people of all nations and races and is explained in the lesson-sermon on "Christ Jesus," to be read in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, August 30.

One of the citations from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, discoverer and founder of Christian Science, reads:

"In healing the sick and sinning, Jesus elaborated the fact that the healing effect followed the understanding of the divine Principle and of the Christ-spirit which governed the corporeal Jesus. For this Principle there is no dynasty, no ecclesiastical monopoly."

The apostle Peter is quoted as authority for relying on the spiritual understanding of God taught by Jesus. "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue."

Associated With Herald Nearly 60 Years

Retired Herald Publisher Had Early Start as Newspaperman

Confined to Bed Since October Fall

Without question, the most avid reader of The Tawas Herald each week is its former publisher and editor, Percy N. Thornton, who has been confined to his home on Fourth Street since breaking his leg in a fall last October 18.

Now 79 years old, Mr. Thornton on press day is like a fire horse out of harness—he is more than willing to answer the bell but he cannot quite make it with a cast on his leg. But, he still enjoys visiting with friends or offering some friendly advice to his two sons, who took over operation of the Herald in 1956.

Mr. Thornton never really retired from the newspaper "harness" — only a broken leg could keep him away from the shop where he first started to work in 1912. He has been a newspaperman for 57 years and actually was interested in journalism before reaching his teens, having served as a special Hale correspondent for the Herald when about 15 years old.

Born in Monroe County, he and some neighbor boys at Lambertville organized a secret society, meeting above a corncrib at the Thornton home. An older boy brought a copy of the Star Monthly, probably one of the finest boy's magazines ever published in the country. A department on amateur journalism in the magazine caught Thornton's eye. Moving to Plainfield Township with his family in 1902, Thornton wrote several articles concerning life on the plains of Northwestern Iosco County and submitted them to the magazine. The articles were published and he had an early start toward a journalism career when only 12 years old.

Attending school at Hale, spare time work in the nearby lumber woods earned enough money for Thornton to purchase his first hand press, a font of type and other materials necessary for an amateur printing operation. Before he could really learn how to use the equipment, however, he had to quit school before entering his senior year and find a full time job.

Thornton went to Ypsilanti to drive a milk delivery truck for a dairy. He made friends there with the owner of a job printing shop, who agreed to print a small magazine using Thornton's copy. Several issues were published before he returned to Hale.

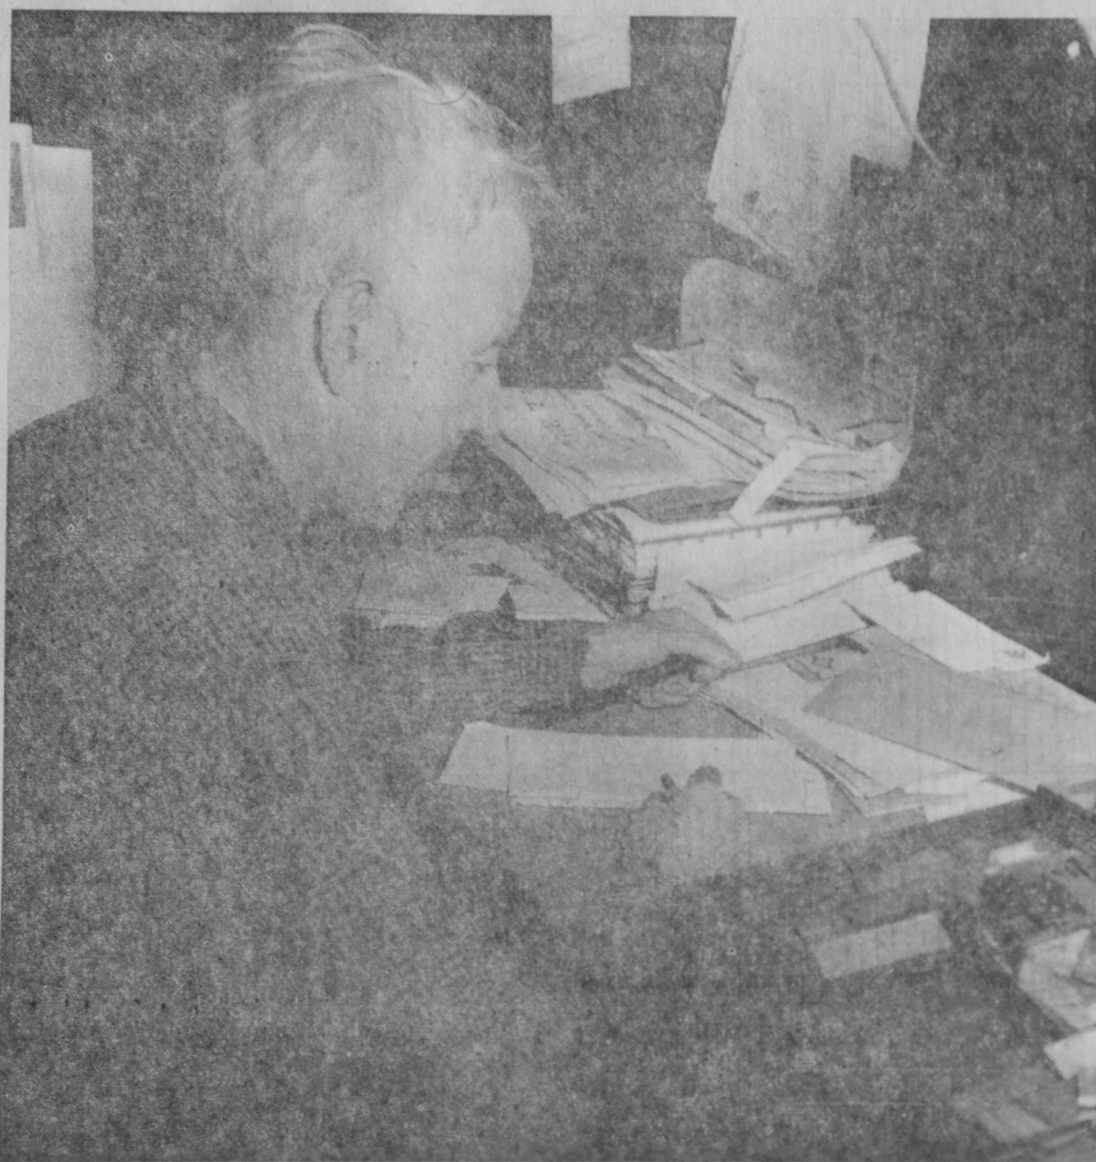

During his absence from Plainfield, William Summers began publication of the Hale Advance. The aspiring young printer stopped at the Advance shop and, while looking over the equipment, accidentally pied a galley of 5½-point handset type. This accident led to his entry into the printing field as, after sweeping up the type and redistributing it in its proper place, Summers offered him a job.

Thornton worked part time at the Advance office for several months, then took over as editor-publisher when the owner was offered the position of foreman at the Bay City Tribune.

The Advance office proved to be a gathering place for boys around Hale and, during some roughhousing one day, type for the entire edition of one week's issue was upset on the floor.

Len J. Patterson, publisher of The Tawas Herald, was a business caller at Hale one day and offered Thornton a job at Tawas City. The young man, who had always wanted to become a "professional," thought this was an excellent opportunity to learn the printing trade and the proposition was accepted. The Advance equipment was sold to Patterson and Thornton left on the next train for Tawas City, starting with the Herald at a salary of $9 per week.

In those days, the Herald office was located on the site presently occupied by Tawas Industries, Incorporated, and across the street from the railroad depot. The depot was center of the town's activity and much of the news for each week's issue was obtained by looking out of the Herald's front window to see who was getting on and off the trains.

While the Herald was equipped similarly to most country weeklies of those days, it boasted a fairly new Prouty newspaper press, which was turned by hand and later mechanized with a popping, one-lung gasoline engine.

Traveling hand compositors were the elite of the weekly and daily newspaper shops. These "tramp" printers were wanderers, moving from community to community and earning top wages of the trade of about $12 per week. The legendary hand comps were highly skilled and most were erudite, self educated in newspaper offices around the country. When their feet began to get that itchy feeling, they boarded a train and headed for greener pastures.

The biggest downfall for many of those characters was "John Barleycorn," according to Thornton. One week, the Herald's compositor, Tim Connley, imbibed a little too freely and was absent from work on press day. This was an infraction which the boss could not ignore, even though there were tears shed on both sides when Tim received his walking papers. Thornton, who had been his understudy, became the compositor.

In 1915, a new era began in the Herald office under James Ballard, who had purchased the business. A new Linotype machine, first along the shore between Bay City and Alpena was purchased and the days of hand setting of newspaper reading matter were finished. Thornton became foreman and took over other jobs in the printing department.

Thornton recalls that when the Linotype was being assembled at the shop, then located in the old Tawas Bay Advocate office opposite the newspaper's present location, he and the machinist from the Linotype Company decided they would check on lake trout fishing near Tawas Point. It was a nice, sunny February day and the two men walked across the ice to visit fish shanties outside the light of the bay. On their return, a sudden snow storm blinded their view of shore. The machinist attributed Thornton's sense of direction in saving them from a watery grave, but the truth was that both men were lost. Recalling that the wind was at their back on the outward trip, Thornton turned his head into the wind and led the way into a snow-filled gale, hoping that the wind had not changed direction. The two men hit the shore right behind the newspaper office.

In 1916, Thornton became editor of the Rose City Review for Willard Crandall, then owner of the West Branch Herald. Rose City

Thornton enjoyed his stay in Parvise, but not the school—he could drive a horse, but not a tractor. He had a new job as a "powder monkey" after nearly backing the tractor and howitzer into the Seine River. He never again climbed behind the wheel of a motor driven vehicle.

Any World War I veteran will tell you that the plague of army reception centers in those days was the "cootie." To avoid any chance of contaminating the Hotel Iosco, his place of residence on returning home, Thornton spent the first night home on the floor of the Herald shop. Besides, it was easier to sleep on the hard floor than in a soft bed, after more than a year in the field.

Thornton "guessed he'd accept" Mr. Ballard's offer of his old job, not to mention the fact that the Herald's force was a little short handed. Looking around town, he discovered that the little girl with the long curls down at Sawyer's Grocery had grown into quite a young lady. Two years later, after a few railroad trips to Detroit, where the young lady was working in the classified advertising section of The Detroit News, he claimed Miss Edith Sawyer as his bride and the two set up housekeeping in an apartment above the Herald office.

The Thorntons leased the business from Ballard in 1923 and then purchased it outright at the peak of the high-priced era called the "roaring Twenties."

One of his recollections of those days was a severe sleet storm which knocked down power lines for nearly a week. The Herald was published as usual, however. Cases of old handset type, which had been stored away in case of such an emergency, were dusted off and the entire issue was hand spliced. The strong arm of a husky young man propelled the old Prouty press and the Herald was in the mail at the usual time.

As far as he is concerned, the biggest news story ever to come out of the Tawas area occurred many years ago when the then circuit judge, Albert Widdis, called court into session during a meeting of the Iosco Board of Supervisors. Displeased because the board would not approve a bill for some books in the county law library, the county board had been drawn into a hassle apparently involving a lack of communications with the park commission. The previous difference came when the board of county commissioners would not accept action of the park commission in hiring a county park manager at a salary of $9,000, plus housing. The salary was cut by $1,000.

Earlier in Wednesday's meeting, Krause gave a progress report on the new park at the mouth of the AuSable River. It was also announced that the county is considering a 40-acre park in Alabaster Township along with a proposition for including the old Thompson Farm in Plainfield Township in the county park system.

Plans are to be developed next year for new sanitary facilities, additional power and street lighting at Old Orchard Park.

Smith said that hiring of a full time manager for the park was an absolute necessity because of the growth of this facility and expansion of the entire county park system.

"Old Orchard Park is the 'mother lode' as far as Iosco county's park system is concerned," said Smith. "We must have all the revenue we can get from this park in order to help finance operation of our entire park system."

William Krause, planner for the park commission, stated that plans for improving Old Orchard Park had started in 1966. He said that a new concession policy had been adopted by the park commission in April and that three meetings had been held with Bolin to acquaint him with the changes.

One of the changes was that the concession would be let on a competitive bid basis with payment to the county based on a percentage of sales.

Krause and Smith were of the opinion that the board of commissioners should demand a retraction from Bolin and Burger concerning "strong accusations" contained in a letter which they made public two weeks ago. The letter, claimed Krause, contained a number of untruths and should be corrected in public.

Paul Brady, attorney for Mr. Bolin, said that effectiveness of the old contract between the county and the concessionaires was at dispute and that he was willing to settle on a compromise.

Brady said that inasmuch as Bolin and Burger had operated the concession and served as managers for the past three years without a contract, but performing under provisions of the old contract, he felt he was justified in asking that the concessionaires be allowed to operate until December 1 with no rental charge.

A new lease expiring December 1 had been prepared by Kenneth Myles, county prosecutor, which was not accepted by the concessionaires. The principal objection was a provision for a rental fee of $1,000.

Myles said the park commission was entirely justified in specifying a fee for leasing the store and bait shop.

Private discussion between Myles, Brady and Smith of the park commission ended discussion when it was announced that the principal difference appeared to be in the cost of the lease and this was a negotiable item.

Several members of the county board of commissioners expressed concern over the fact that, for the second time in the past four

Old Orchard Park Dispute Being Resolved

A new lease for the balance of 1970 for operation of the concession at Old Orchard Park is being renegotiated between the Iosco Park Commission and its two veteran concessionaires, Jess N. Bolin and Nile C. Burger.

This action resulted from a hearing Wednesday called by Fred B. Lomas, chairman of the county board of commissioners, following publication of a letter from the two concessionaires.

Charles Smith of Oscoda, chairman pro tem of the park commission, told the county board of commissioners that the park commission had shown no malice toward Bolin and Burger in its decision May 20 to change management of the park. He said there was a definite need for a change.

In addition to operating the concession at the park, which includes a grocery store and boat livery, Bolin and Burger had served as park managers since January 19-63.

Smith said that hiring of a full time manager for the park was an absolute necessity because of the growth of this facility and expansion of the entire county park system.

"Old Orchard Park is the 'mother lode' as far as Iosco county's park system is concerned," said Smith. "We must have all the revenue we can get from this park in order to help finance operation of our entire park system."

William Krause, planner for the park commission, stated that plans for improving Old Orchard Park had started in 1966. He said that a new concession policy had been adopted by the park commission in April and that three meetings had been held with Bolin to acquaint him with the changes.

One of the changes was that the concession would be let on a competitive bid basis with payment to the county based on a percentage of sales.

Krause and Smith were of the opinion that the board of commissioners should demand a retraction from Bolin and Burger concerning "strong accusations" contained in a letter which they made public two weeks ago. The letter, claimed Krause, contained a number of untruths and should be corrected in public.

Paul Brady, attorney for Mr. Bolin, said that effectiveness of the old contract between the county and the concessionaires was at dispute and that he was willing to settle on a compromise.

Brady said that inasmuch as Bolin and Burger had operated the concession and served as managers for the past three years without a contract, but performing under provisions of the old contract, he felt he was justified in asking that the concessionaires be allowed to operate until December 1 with no rental charge.

A new lease expiring December 1 had been prepared by Kenneth Myles, county prosecutor, which was not accepted by the concessionaires. The principal objection was a provision for a rental fee of $1,000.

Myles said the park commission was entirely justified in specifying a fee for leasing the store and bait shop.

Private discussion between Myles, Brady and Smith of the park commission ended discussion when it was announced that the principal difference appeared to be in the cost of the lease and this was a negotiable item.

Several members of the county board of commissioners expressed concern over the fact that, for the second time in the past four

Fact Finder Named for TA Contract Talk

Robert G. Howlett, chairman of the Michigan Employment Relations Commission, announced the appointment of Kenneth L. Grinstead, professor of education at Eastern Michigan University, as fact finder in a collective bargaining dispute between the Tawas Area Schools and the Tawas Area Education Association. Professor Grinstead was appointed pursuant to the Public Employment Relations Act, which provides for fact finding as a means of resolving impasses between public employers and organizations representing employees.

The fact finding petition was filed by the Tawas Area Education Association in behalf of the teachers in the Tawas Area School District. At issue is the salary schedule for teachers for 1970-71. In addition, the teachers are also seeking extra duty compensation, additional health and life insurance.

Doctor Grinstead was a teacher, principal and school superintendent before coming to Eastern Michigan University, where he teaches school law, collective negotiating and school finance.

Thornton

brary, Judge Widdis slipped into the courtroom unnoticed by supervisors, pounded court into session with his gavel, held four astounded supervisors in contempt and tossed them into jail. The county sheriff had a good time "entertaining" his prisoners for, on the previous day, the board of supervisors had slashed the jail budget and ordered the cost of each meal served to prisoners to be reduced by several cents. The upshot was that fare served at the jail proved to be rather simple for the supervisors. This story kept the telegraph lines between Tawas City and Detroit newspapers busy for several days before the case was finally settled in the circuit court at West Branch, following a change in venue.

During more than 50 years of active newspapering, there have been many stories important to the local area and covered by Mr. Thornton. But most important to him, however, have been the many friendships he has maintained over those years.

A widely read man throughout his life, Mr. Thornton still enjoys his library and long time hobby of local history. His greatest concern, however, is that the tools in his basement woodworking shop may be getting a little rusty.

Improper Food Care Can Lead to Poisoning

Improper care and handling of food can lead to food poisoning, Dr. William F. Jackson of District No. 2 Health Department warns. "This is especially true during summer months when harmful bacteria grow at a much faster rate," Doctor Jackson says.

"Too, summer is that time of the year when family reunions, fairs, church festivals and other activities bring together large groups of people where eating out-of-doors is popular."

Doctor Jackson offers the following tips and suggestions to reduce chances of possible food contamination.

Wash hands thoroughly with soap and warm water before preparing food.

Wash, rinse and disinfect all multiple use food utensils including pots and pans.

Sanitize with a chlorine rinse all food contact surfaces such as cutting boards and work tables to prevent a carry-over of germs from raw products to the cooked food.

Refrigerate all perishable foods below 45 degrees Fahrenheit until just before preparation or serving.

When food is to be cooked, it should be cooked thoroughly until it is heated all the way through to destroy disease-causing germs.

When picnicking, it is best to prepare the meal at the scene of the picnic.

If sandwiches are made at home, all ingredients including bread and rolls should be pre-refrigerated and the wrapped sandwiches kept cold until eaten.

When refrigeration facilities are not available, it is best to use less perishable foods such as hard and soft salami or similar meats and canned foods.

Salads of higher acid content are preferable to other types. German style potato salad, sour-type slaw and those salads containing vinegar and salad oils do not spoil readily.

Avoid custard-type desserts. Substitute fresh fruit, plain cakes, cookies or candy.

Prepare fruit juice drinks in nonmetallic containers, preferably glass, plastic or ceramic ware with a highly glazed finish.

Prepare all foods with a minimum of hand contact. Special care must be taken to avoid all hand contact with salads and other foods that need no cooking.

Never allow the pouring lip of bottled beverages or paper cartons to be stored under water.

Use clean ice in beverages.

Use extra care in handling foods of high protein content, such as cooked and processed meats, meat products, poultry, eggs, gravies, fish, shellfish, custards and puddings.

Wash fresh fruits and vegetables thoroughly with clean water.

Store hash and similar preparations in the refrigerator immediately after mixing, then heat thoroughly just before serving.

Hashes, croquettes, salmon cakes, corn fritters and the like need complete cooking. If they are merely browned on the outside, bacteria left alive in the warm, moist center will reproduce rapidly. Stir masses of food like spaghetti so cooking will be complete.

"BED MAKING" costs You!

He makes a bed every 40 minutes. Who is he? A furniture craftsman or maybe a male nurse? Neither one; he is the produce manager at your favorite supermarket.

Because of customers jumbling the merchandise, the produce manager makes a new "bed" for his apples, peaches, bananas and other fruits a dozen times in his eight-hour day.

Jumbling the merchandise is probably the most common harmless shopping habit. Unfortunately, the cost of rearranging the counter must be included in the price of the fruits and vegetables the customer buys.

Other shopping habits, far more harmful than jumbling, include squeezing, punching, pinching, tearing and tossing the produce. The customer who tears bananas from the stem leaving ends to soften and darken, the one who strips the husks away from the corn permitting tender kernels to dry out from exposure to air... both contribute to higher mark-ups in the produce department to cover such losses.

Granted, most people are not deliberately destructive. They want good merchandise, but sometimes have trouble selecting it.

Since this is the season for fresh fruits, here are some general clues on selection that will help shoppers, but not harm the fruit.

Rely on color as a clue to ripeness. Melons and peaches should have a soft, mellow background color with touches of gold. Green background color means green fruit. Smooth skinned melons such as honeydew and watermelon should have a hint of gold color where the melon touched the ground, and the whole melon should have a soft, waxy bloom. The bloom is a characteristic of ripe blueberries; actually, the blue bloom can be rubbed off the surface of blueberries by careless handling, so when the soft, powdery color is in evidence, it means careful handling all the way from bush to breakfast table.

The United States Department of Agriculture and the Michigan Department of Agriculture have established grade standards for most fresh fruits. However, these standards are seldom seen in retail food stores, and furthermore, they apply only to the fruit at the time it is sold by the producer. Because there are many steps and many handlers of fruit between the farmer's gate and the produce counter, grades are of little real value to the consumer.

On the other hand, traces of green color are not signs of immaturity in tomatoes, bananas or pears. All three of these fruits (yes, tomatoes are actually fruits) will continue to ripen after picking, as a tinge of green simply means a longer wait for full ripe goodness. But the waiting will pay off.

Many fruits and vegetables are coming to shoppers already packaged. Research indicates that pre-packing of fruits and vegetables often means improved quality and, in some cases, lower prices, because only top quality produce is prepackaged and damage due to handling is reduced.

The plant grew slowly for several weeks, then started to grow at a rate of about two inches every day. "You could almost see it growing," states Streeter.—Tawas Herald Photo.

Off Campus Education Launches First

Off campus education will launch a Central Michigan University first this fall by offering a computer course at an off campus center. Mathematics 160, Introduction to Computers, will be given at Wurtsmith Air Force Base.

Several requests for the course had been made to the off campus education office and to the department of mathematics. As a result, the two CMU departments investigated the possibility and economics of offering the course in an off-campus situation.

They found it would be economically feasible by utilizing CMU's computer equipment in the mathematics department in conjunction with that which would be needed at the base.

A key punch will be installed at the base where students will set up the programs as a class exercise. The punched cards will then be brought to CMU where they will be processed through the mathematics department's 1130 computer and returned. At mid-semester, arrangements have been made for a direct line to the University of Michigan where teletype communication will be set up with computer center there.

Class enrollment will be restricted to 35 students. A laboratory fee of $10 in addition to the regular credit hour fee will be made to help defray some of the cost of the equipment necessary for the course.

The course earns three hours credit and is designed for students majoring in fields other than mathematics who need a general knowledge of computer program techniques.

Registration for the computer course and the 16 other course offerings at Wurtsmith is scheduled for Tuesday, September 8. Classes are open to civilians as well as military personnel and registrations are being taken between 2:00 to 8:00 p. m. at the base education office.
