Intermediate School Hires Soc. Workers

Iosco Intermediate School District has employed two school social workers, Robert Wickenheiser servicing the Oscoda and Tawas Area Schools and Miss Shelley Baldes servicing the Hale and Whittemore-Prescott Area Schools.

Focus of the school social work program is the child with problems related to his academic and social school experience. The school social worker is one member of the special services staff who can offer help to a child, a parent or a teacher with a problem that centers in the school experience and the child's adaptation or lack of adaptation to it. They also act as liaison with community agen-

The purpose of the program is to prevent problems through early recognition of symptoms, to help students effect a better adjustment through appropriate counseling and to help the parents and school staff to better understand the child's needs. Types of problems which may be referred to the social worker are school maladjustment - disinterest. lack of cooperation, working below potential; social maladjustmentlying, defiance, stealing, fighting; home problems-neglect, excessive pressures, marital friction; personal problems-shyness, nervousness, poor attitude.

Children come to the attention of the worker through referral by teachers, principals, social agencies, occasionally by parents, once in awhile by other children or by self-

A BICYCLE SAFETY PROGRAM was presented Friday morning to pupils of Tawas City Elementary Unit under sponsorship of Tawas Kiwanis Club. Conducting the program were John Austin and Henry Purdy, Kiwanis Club committee members. A show of hands by the students indicated that most owned bicycles and a large percentage of the bicycles were not equipped with a light, horn and proper reflector. Rules for operating a bicycle were explained by Sheriff George Westcott, who stressed that children should "walk" their bicycles across heavily traveled streets. He emphasized that parents should make sure that bicycles are in good operating condition.—Tawas Herald Photo.
