The East Tawas Parks and Recreation Commission has announced that state recreational money is available to assist in the project. Tentative plans which are to be submitted to the state are to be on display at the meeting.

City Clerk Clyde Soper said the parks and recreation commission was calling the hearing in order to learn the desires of the community and to obtain ideas for development of a site north of Franklin and west of Locke Street as a recreational area.

Whitetails More Plentiful This Year

Season Opens Friday

Depending on weather conditions, a humdinger of a deer hunting season is shaping up with the opening day on whitetails slated for this Friday.

State wildlife biologists figure the buck kill will climb past the 40,000 mark again this year in the northern half of the Lower Peninsula and that has not happened since 1969.

Here in Iosco County, deer sightings have increased this year. Never have whitetails been so plentiful since the middle of the 1960s, nearly a decade ago when Michigan racked up record kill figures, bolstered considerably by huge numbers of antlerless permits.

The controversial doe permits do not exist in such quantities anymore and all antlerless permits are invalid after November 21. Antlerless deer hunting is not permitted this year in Iosco County and permits have been issued only for Alpena, Presque Isle, Oscoda and Alcona Counties.

Area police agencies are most aware of the increased number of deer as the highway death toll of whitetails is the highest in history. Iosco Sheriff's Department reported nine car-deer accidents last week and the toll was nearly double that amount the previous week.

Owners of hunting camps throughout the county report seeing more deer than in recent years.

The Mio office of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources reported Monday that deer poaching in this district was the highest on record. The DNR spokesman said that poachers were not limiting illegal methods to nocturnal forays, but were killing deer during daylight hours.

Despite the higher cost of gasoline, hunting equipment and food, whitetail chasing is expected to bring out a deluge of hunters from Southern Michigan. Highways are expected to be jammed with hunters starting Thursday due to the industrial layoffs and the Friday opening will lead to an extended week-end of hunting. Schools of Iosco County will be closed on the opening day of the season.

Locally, owners of hunting property have enjoyed excellent weather conditions for several week-ends and have prepared camps for the coming season. Wood piles have been replenished, fences and wires have been mended and kitchens have been stocked with food for the opening day.

Police agencies, too, are gearing for the annual rush and the usual number of lost hunters, emergency messages, poaching, camp burglaries, deer and hunting equipment larcenies that can be expected over the week-end.

Tawas Hardware in Tawas City reported Monday that the firm had sold 900 Michigan deer hunting licenses and expects to sell another 1,100 licenses before the season opens. The store is sponsoring a big buck contest and any hunter purchasing a license there is eligible to enter his buck.

A prize of $50 is being offered to the hunter bringing in the buck with the most points and best spread. There will be a second prize of $25. The prizes may be in cash or applied to the purchase of any item in the store, if desired.

The deer hunting season will have an effect on meetings scheduled next week. Although there will be a meeting of the Tawas City Council next Monday night, at least two councilmen have indicated they will be out of town on hunting expeditions and will be absent from the meeting.

THREE LOCAL trucking firms cooperated last Saturday in a work bee at the East Tawas Athletic Field where a new base is being constructed for the East Tawas Lions Club's skating rink. Donating trucks and equipment for the project were Bolen Trucking, Terry Bronson and John Henry. Site of the new rink is being shifted closer to the Knothole League baseball diamond. Sand removed from the field is to be replaced by a six to eight-inch layer of clay, being donated by National Gypsum Company. Edward Sterling, president of the Lions Club, shown in front of the warming shelter in the top picture, said the clay base should provide a much needed improvement for the rink this winter. Work is being completed by the East Tawas Parks and Recreation Commission on a new chain link fence along Newman Street and three tennis courts are being prepared for asphalt paving.—Tawas Herald Photos.

HUNT SAFELY OBSERVE THE RULES

A list of hunting safety rules provided by the Iosco Sheriff's Department is printed on page 2 of this section. Sheriff George Westcott cautions all hunters to use extreme caution with firearms and reminds motorists that more hunters are killed each year in highway crashes than those who lose their lives in the woods. Drive with care on Iosco highways and during the trip home.

Favorable Vote on Skill Center Would Insure State-Fed. Funds

Appearing before Monday night's meeting of Tawas Area Board of Education, Supt. John Tafelski of Iosco Intermediate School District said that a favorable vote December 19 on a proposed skill center would mean the area would retain its federal and state financial grants to aid in its construction.

Grants amounting to $950,000 would cover approximately 70 percent of the total cost to construct a skill center to serve all students and adults in the Hale, Oscoda, Tawas and Whittemore-Prescott school districts.

"The grants are available until June 1975, and if a favorable vote on the skill center is not passed before that time, the money would be spent elsewhere in the state. This would mean that outside support would not be available to construct a skill center in this area," said Tafelski.

The intermediate district superintendent said that the grants were being held for the area because of the tremendous need of job training for young people and adults.

"Robert Pangman of the Michigan Department of Education has expressed the desire of the state to hold the money for this area due to the small margin of defeat at the September 9 election, but stated to receive the money, it is necessary that the skill center election be passed on December 19," said Tafelski.

Two propositions placed before voters in early September were defeated by narrow margins. The first, calling for an annual operational tax limited to 1.98 mills, was defeated, 1,729 to 1,666, a difference of only 63; the second proposition, asking the district to issue general obligation bonds for the purpose of constructing a skill center, lost by 161 votes.

Tafelski said Monday night that because of the $950,000 in federal and state grants, the actual bond issue needed for constructing a skill center would be much lower than the request printed on the ballot. He felt this fact was not fully explained in the previous election and probably was one reason why the measure was defeated.

During discussion with the Tawas Area Board of Education concerning the skill center's impact on the four K-12 school districts in this county, Tafelski said that intermediate school superintendents were attempting to introduce legislation to increase the state's share of operational costs for vocational skill centers.

"Our kids do not have it here yet, but those youngsters attending vocational educational skill centers in other parts of the state are receiving businesslike training in preparation for jobs after graduation," said Tafelski.

Should the area skill center become a reality, Tafelski said it would require a lot of cooperation among all schools involved to eliminate possible duplication in vocational educational programs. He said that it was a matter of upgrading basic training in vocational skills in high schools to the point where the proposed skill center would take over to further refine and enlarge the training.

"A skill center would not mean that all high school seniors would be moving into vocational training, only 20 to 25 percent of the seniors would qualify for such training," said Tafelski. "It would not mean that students would be divided according to scholarship, as a great deal of emphasis would be placed on desire. In addition, we cannot forget our students in special education, many of whom have an aptitude for working with their hands."

Tafelski said that one of the goals of a skill center was to get students accustomed to working in a businesslike atmosphere and training other than in a classroom.

The intermediate district superintendent said that between 35 and 50 sites in the county had been investigated as a possible site for the skill center. He said the principal object was to keep the facility centrally located, but still keeping in mind the availability of electrical power and heating utilities.

The intermediate district had options on two sites along M-55 prior to the last election, but both have since expired and have not been renewed. "We do not want a site to become the issue—the issue should be the education of a child," said Tafelski.

County Receives State Grant for Purchase of Maxi Vans

A cooperative maxi van program to transport senior citizens and handicapped persons was approved Wednesday by the Iosco County Board of Commissioners.

The Michigan Department of State Highways and Transportation has awarded this county two 12-passenger, high-roof vans for this program and is to provide an additional $8,000 to assist with the first year of operation.

The vans, to serve senior citizens and handicapped persons eight hours a day, Monday through Friday, are to be operated by the Iosco County Senior Citizens Council.

In other business, the commission approved the hiring of David Zeilinski as a member of the sheriff's department. Zeilinski had been a patrolman with the East Tawas Police Department and prior to that had served with the Detroit Police Department.

The commission approved the promotion of two officers, Dennis Frank and Michael Welch, to the rank of detective. Ronald Larsen had served as detective until his resignation November 1. Sheriff George Westcott requested the additional detectives because of the increasingly high volume of investigations handled by the department.

W. C. Roach, airport manager, reported that a master plan for the airport was approximately 80 percent complete. The county airport committee is to meet with

Community Chest Closes Drive Friday

Officers of Tawas-Whittemore-Hale Community Chest issued a plea to all community chairmen of the 1974 campaign to turn in pledges prior to the closing of the campaign at 5:00 p. m., Friday, November 15.

As of Monday morning, the campaign had collected $14,656 of its goal of $18,936. Anyone who has not been contacted for a contribution may call campaign headquarters at 362-8167 and arrangements will be made for a pickup.

The Rev. Noah Funk, campaign chairman, said that only about 78 percent of the goal had been met and he was in hopes that the total amount would be reached by Friday.

"We sincerely hope that no agency will suffer because of the failure of this campaign to meet its goal," said the campaign chairman.

Campaign headquarters is located in the Tawas Chamber of Commerce office and anyone desiring to make a contribution may leave it at the office.

A committee is to be appointed to meet with the Michigan Department of Mental Health in regard to services required locally should this county establish its own mental health service. The county is presently served by a regional clinic.

A resolution clarifying holidays for closing the county building is to be adopted at the next session of the commission. It was pointed out that the county building had been closed on election day, Tuesday, November 5. Although this has been a traditional past practice, the election day closure was not included in the holiday schedule negotiated with county building employees.

Early School Closing Approved

Approval was given Monday night by Tawas Area Board of Education to release middle school students Thursday at 4:30 p. m., rather than the 5:15 p. m. departure time. Robert McDonald, middle school principal, said that the early release would allow buses to return students home during daylight hours. He said that area highways are expected to be jammed with northbound hunters.

Hale Area Board OK's Wage Pact

A new wage contract with bus drivers and custodians, represented by United States Steel Workers Union, was adopted Monday night by Hale Area Board of Education.

The new contract provides for a six percent increase in wages plus a retirement program. Some 21 members of the school staff are included.

In other business, the board of education continued its discussion on tuition policy, site improvement at the elementary school to correct a drainage problem and the upcoming vote on the proposed skill center to serve the county.

Order Autopsy in Death of WAF at Oscoda

Investigation continues by Oscoda Township Police into the bludgeoning death of a member of the Women's Air Force stationed at Wurtsmith Air Force Base, who had been missing for two weeks.

The body of Pamela Lynn Schlee, 19, was found Sunday by a man who was walking his dog in a wooded area of Section 10 north of Oscoda.

Authorities listed the death as a homicide and the medical examiner ordered an autopsy.

School Uses Computer Data for Bus Runs - Scheduling

Tawas Area School is now in the process of computerizing enrollment records in order to simplify bus transportation in the event that an extended school year is ever utilized by this district.

An additional benefit derived from assigning a number, bus stop and bus route to each student's identification card is that additional information can be fed into the computer to increase capabilities of scheduling, to improve the school curriculum, reduce clerical work and to possibly provide voter information.

Robert H. Crawford, transportation director, told board of education members Monday night that cards had been prepared for approximately 60 percent of the student body and that a printout from the computer would be available at the next meeting.

The school is in the process of identifying students by areas and bus routes as a means of dividing the district into quarters should the extended school year be adopted. Students walking to school are assigned special numbers.

Supt. Edward J. Barry said that superintendents of the four school districts of the county were investigating the possibility of installing a console in the intermediate district office which would have a telephone connection with the computer data center operated by Bay-Arenac Intermediate District. The schools presently have use of the computer through a courier system or by mail.

He said that direct computer service would be of great benefit in financial accounting to the school districts. Barry said that cost of such an installation would be $1,300 a month, down about one-half from the cost last year. He said that while it would be impossible for an individual district to finance the system, he believed it could be accomplished through cooperation between the four schools.

In other business Monday night, bids were opened on the sale of surplus equipment owned by the school. Four bids were received on the purchase of an old tractor, but only two persons submitted required deposits with bids. Two bids were received on a pickup truck and one bid was received by the board of education and awards are to be made at the next meeting.

Gene Gerber, director of community education, reported that (See SCHOOL, page 6.)

2. Always be sure that action and barrel are clear of obstructions, and that ammunition of the proper size is being used.
3. Always keep chamber empty or on safety until you are ready to shoot.

5. Don't climb a fence or tree or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; keep muzzle pointed away from yourself and others, and pointed up in the air.
6. Drink and live ammo don't mix; avoid alcoholic beverages before and during the hunt.
7. Pre-plan your hunting agenda and area movements so that you and your companions are not in each other's line of fire.
8. Never target practice without proper backstop; never shoot a flat surface or water's surface, as bullets can ricochet.

Jakobi - Davis Marriage Solemnized at Zion Church

Arrangements of white and violet chrysanthemums formed a floral background in Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church, Tawas City, for the marriage Saturday, November 9, of Marcia K. Davis and William C. Jakobi. The Rev. Robert Beyer performed the 7 o'clock, double ring service.

The bride is the foster daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Watts of Tawas City. Arnold Jakobi of Tawas City and Doris Jakobi of Colorado are parents of the bridegroom.

Escorted to the altar by her foster father, the bride chose a floor-length satin gown with Empire waistline, long Bishop sleeves, high collar and inset train, all accented in pearls. Her elbow-length veil was secured with a daisy and pearl-covered cap. She carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums and yellow roses.

Avis Watts of Whittemore was matron of honor in a floor-length gown with print bodice and long sleeves, Empire waistline and solid purple skirt. A shoulder-length veil completed her attire and her bouquet was made up of violet and white chrysanthemums. Willard Watts of Whittemore acted as best man. Mark Davis, brother of the bride, and Jay Utter seated the guests.

Dinner followed the ceremony in the church annex for 200 guests from Colorado, Bay City, Olivet, Kawkawlin and Whittemore.

Mrs. Watts greeted guests in a floor-length blue and white print gown. For her son's wedding, Mrs. Jakobi chose an apricot, floor-length dress. Mrs. Arnold Jakobi wore a long orange gown. Their corsages were made up of yellow flowers. Mrs. Fred Pettibone, the bride's grandmother, selected a brown and peach gown, while Mrs. William Echinger, the bridegroom's grandmother, chose a long pink gown.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Jakobi are residing in Tawas City. Pre-nuptial showers in the bride's honor were hosted by Avis Watts, Dawn Watts, Sally Bischoff and Iva Jean Utter.

Prevention of Birth Defects Aim of March of Dimes Drive

Prevention of birth defects is the goal of the March of Dimes, according to the newly-appointed Iosco County chapter chairman, Mrs. Robert T. Coughlin of Tawas City.

"Every year, about 250,000 American babies are born damaged in some way," states Mrs. Coughlin. "Prenatal care, genetic counseling, emphasis of rubella immunization, a serum that prevents the RH blood disease in newborns and research into the basic causes of birth disorders are all part of the efforts of the March of Dimes to assure each newborn of his right to a healthy start in life."

During 1974, the Iosco County chapter, with the cooperation of the Alpena County chapter, offered assistance to Allen R. Cadarette Jr. of Wurtsmith Air Force Base when unusual heart surgery was necessary to correct a congenital problem.

Allen, the son of Sgt. and Mrs. Allen R. Cadarette Sr., is Iosco County's March of Dimes "poster child" for 1975.

Mrs. Coughlin returned recently from a regional meeting at Chicago, Illinois, where she met with delegates from neighboring states to go over the new dimensions of March of Dimes programs aimed at prevention of birth defects.

"The medical advances we heard about were particularly impressive," she said. "Improved methods of treatment, diagnosis and consultation for high-risk pregnant women and newborns were explained by specialists."

"Another important aspect," she continued, "is the progress on plans for a strategic network of prenatal services throughout the country. These guidelines have been drawn up by leaders in obstetrics, pediatrics, family practice, the nursing profession and health agencies. The goal is to allocate highly trained staff and equipment to treat mothers and infants at different levels of risk to avoid duplicating costly services."

Mrs. Coughlin also noted that there was emphasis on new March of Dimes programs to train nurses in recognition, evaluation and team performance for treatment of sick mothers and infants. This course of action, she says, is intended to meet the alarming shortage of nurse clinicians as quickly as possible.

"The challenge to volunteers in helping to upgrade delivery of maternal and infant care is greater than ever," she adds. Special projects in public education that stress prenatal care and nutrition took up a major part of the meeting. Another segment was devoted to youth activities for high school and college volunteers.

Used or Unfinished Furniture Can Be A Great Bargain

Looking for a bargain in home furnishings? It might be found at a local secondhand shop, at a neighborhood garage sale or in the unfinished furniture section of a department store.

Used or unfinished furniture can be a great bargain, says Margaret Boschetti, extension home furnishings specialist, Michigan State University, East Lansing. It can also end up costing more than a new piece of furniture, she warns, so shop carefully and look for hidden costs.

When comparing the cost of unfinished furniture with a finished piece, be sure to include the cost of supplies and tools needed, Miss Boschetti advises. Take into consideration the time and effort that will have to be put into the project.

If the unfinished piece is the better buy, be sure to have a well-ventilated, out-of-the-way place to work on it. Finishing a piece of furniture is not the sort of job that can be completed in a lazy afternoon.

Refinishing an old chest, table or chair can be very rewarding, Miss Boschetti notes. And, if a person can get the pieces inexpensively, it can also be a great money-saver. Refinishing does not require a lot of fancy equipment, but it requires a lot of time and elbow grease.

"Even with today's paint and varnish removers, stripping an old finish off a piece of furniture is not a neat, easy job," the specialist says. "The finished product can be very satisfying, however."

Often furniture that looks at first as though it needs refinishing really needs only a good cleaning, she says. Removing years of grime and smoke will often reveal a perfectly good finish and beautiful wood grain.

Used upholstered furniture is a little riskier buy than used wooden furniture because so many of the important structural details are hidden inside. There is no friendly furniture salesman to answer questions about the upholstery fabric, either.

Though polyester fiber-fill and molded foam are very popular now, old furniture may be stuffed with hair, cotton, down or even moss.

"People who suffer from allergies to dust, feathers or animal hair would probably be wise to stick with new furniture if possible," Miss Boschetti suggests.

Renovating a piece of upholstered furniture may be as simple as cleaning the fabric or as involved as tearing the piece down to the frame and rebuilding it.

The investment of time required to reupholster a chair can make a bargain look like a white elephant in no time, the specialist notes. Someone who has the time and the skills, however, can turn a worn, saggy-sprung eyeseore into a handsome asset to her home decor.

"Any piece of furniture to be restored should be appropriate to the home and the use to which it will be put," Miss Boschetti says. "So before being committed to an investment of money, time and effort, an individual should be sure the furniture will fit the space available, be in scale with the rest of the furnishings and be in character with the home and the desired effect."

Save money this winter.

Cut your heating costs up to 17% with our official insulation program.

Last fall, at the direction of the Michigan Public Service Commission, Michigan Consolidated introduced a low-cost home ceiling insulation program designed to conserve Natural Gas and cut heating costs up to 17%.

How successful has the program been? Well, in the past 10 months, more than 37,700 homeowners have installed ceiling insulation and, as a result, over one billion cubic feet of Natural Gas per year is being conserved. That's enough to heat over 6,500 additional homes this winter. And, that's why we're continuing our insulation program again this fall. Because now is the time to insulate and save.
The heart of our program is simply this: Install six inches of ceiling insulation in your home. It's a quick, easy and inexpensive project that most homeowners can accomplish by themselves for about $100.

How can you get the job done? First, you can do it yourself, and we'll gladly provide a free handbook that tells you how. Secondly, you can have it done by an insulation contractor and, if you wish, we will provide you with a list of qualified firms. Or, third, we can have the job done for you through one of our participating subcontractors. The cost is often under $200 for homes with less than 1,000 square feet of ceiling area.

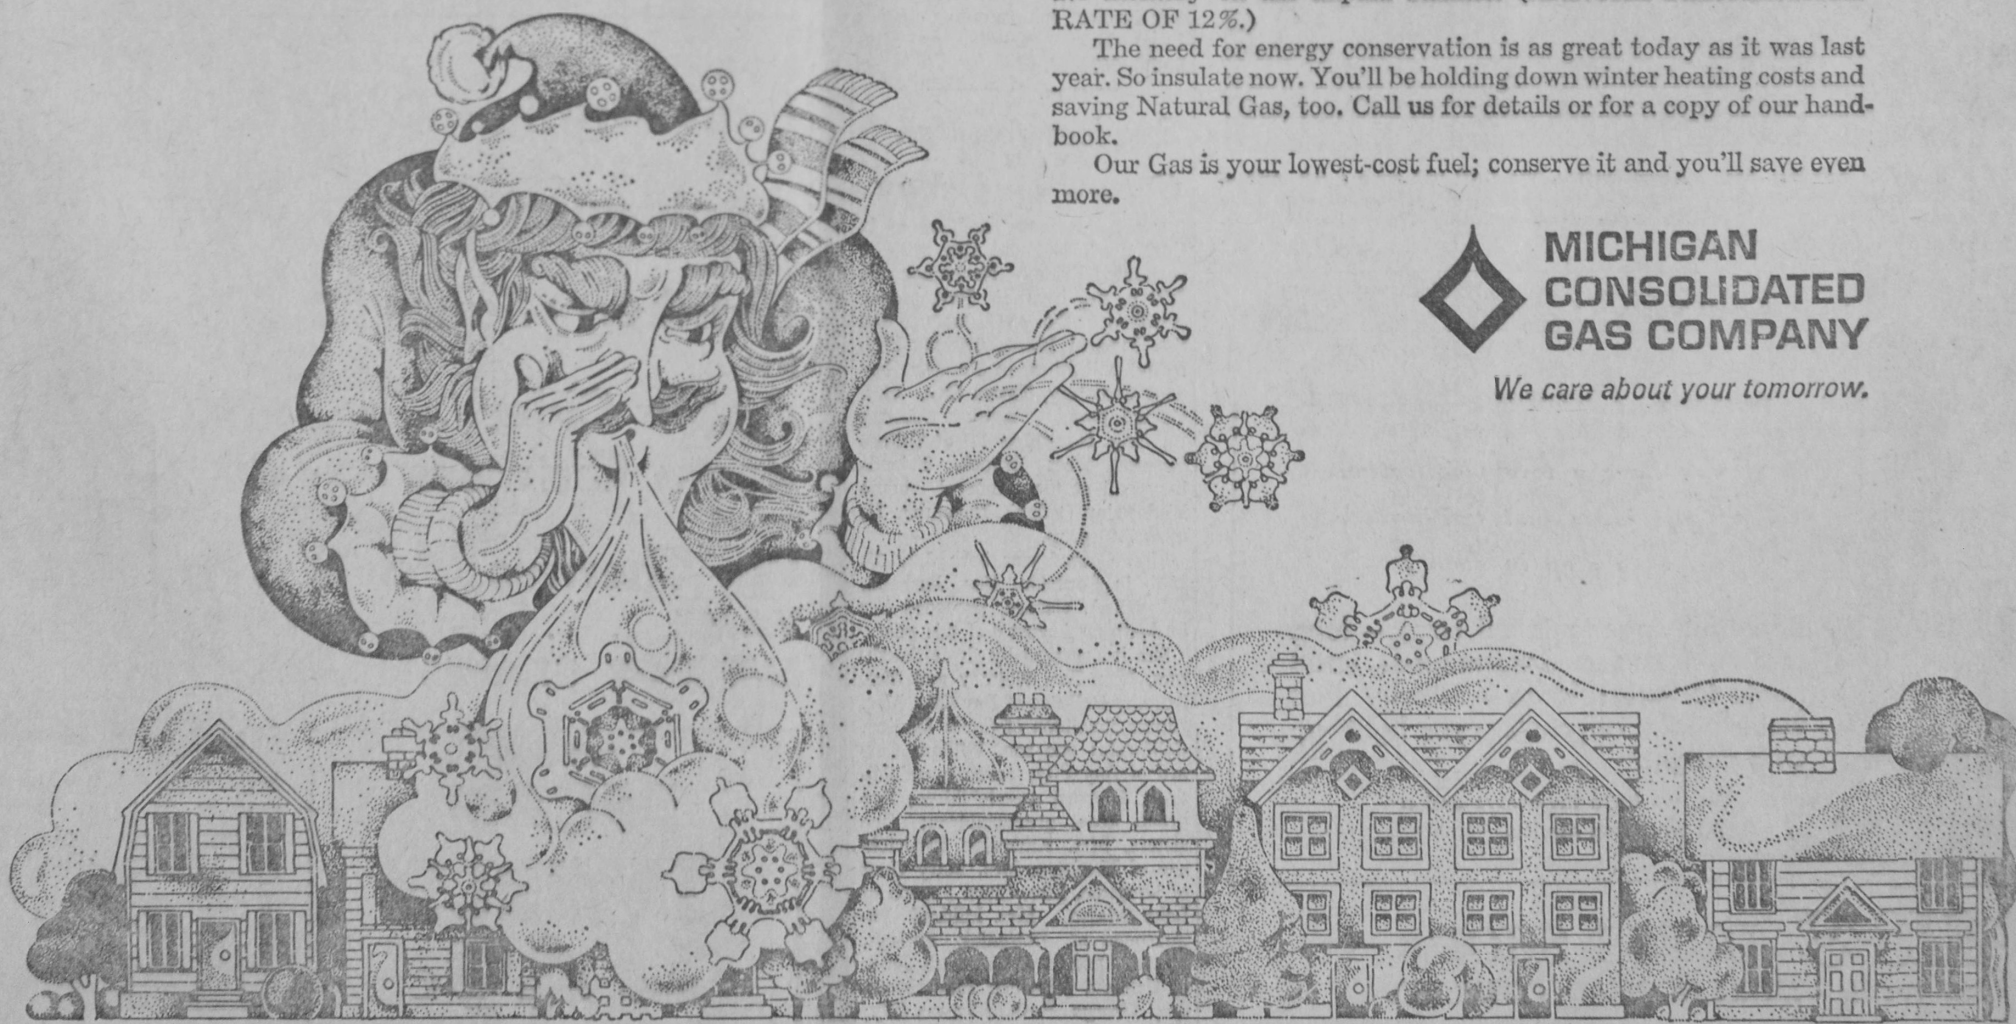

If you want the job done through one of our participating subcontractors, we have a payment plan to suit every budget. You can pay cash. Or, you can pay over an extended period at an interest rate of 1% monthly on the unpaid balance. (ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE OF 12%.)

The need for energy conservation is as great today as it was last year. So insulate now. You'll be holding down winter heating costs and saving Natural Gas, too. Call us for details or for a copy of our handbook.

Our Gas is your lowest-cost fuel; conserve it and you'll save even more.

HUNTERS will be dreaming of seeing a buck like this when they take to the woods Friday for the opening day of deer hunting. The picture was snapped a number of years ago and taken from the files of this newspaper. While no one is guaranteeing a kill like this buck, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources reports that deer sightings have increased in Iosco County and an excellent season is anticipated.—Tawas Herald Photo.

ON THE OTHER SIDE of the coin, poaching has increased tremendously this year and Michigan Department of Natural Resources officers like George Robson, above, have had their hands full with illegal hunting. The DNR will have a full staff of officers in the field to aid hunters as well as to arrest those hunting illegally.—Tawas Herald Photo.

No Health Worry

Water Filtration Upset Caused by Faulty Metal Screw

A four-inch metal screw which pulled out of a wooden frame was blamed last week for upsetting operation of East Tawas' water filtration plant. But, water consumers of East Tawas and Tawas City can remain at ease as the upset has no effect on pure water quality.

Harold French, chief operator at the plant, explained Thursday morning that, when the wood screw pulled out of a frame in the filtration system, the operator on duty immediately noticed that sand in the filter was migrating in the wrong direction. The water supply from this tank was immediately closed off from transmission mains to consumers.

The filtration plant is equipped with two large concrete filtration tanks and the one remaining in operation is of sufficient capacity to serve needs of the twin communities. The plant is still operating on its 16-hour-per-day schedule, which drops back to 12 hours daily after deer season.

As the result of the upset, filtration sand and stones at the bottom of the one tank were changed last week. Changing the filtration materials in the 15 by 18-foot tank is a time-consuming process and Ames Construction Company, Saginaw, will spend approximately one week on the job.

The change includes replacement of a "sandwich" of filtering materials at the bottom of the tank, which includes a layer of 2½-inch stones on the bottom of the tank and progressive layers of smaller stones with a top layer of 27 inches of silica sand. Approximately 11 cubic yards of silica sand are required to form the top 27-inch layer.

Materials in the filters of the two concrete tanks have not been replaced since the plant first went into operation in March 1958. Except for accidents similar to the one last week, the filtration materials normally last for a much longer period as the daily backwashing operation insures that the sand and stone remain clean.

French said that he was so satisfied with the work of the Saginaw contractor that the sand and stone filter on the operational tank will be replaced as soon as the other tank is back in production.

"All bacteria in the raw water coming from the lake is killed through chlorination before the water ever reaches the filtration plant, so there was no danger of any water quality problem," said French. The filtration system is used to remove suspended solids which could affect odor of the water entering transmission mains.

French said that replacement of materials in each filter cost $5,800, with a total expense of $11,600 for the two tanks. The contractor had a four-man crew on the job and two of the three men on duty at the filtration plant gave assistance when needed.

Construction Code Still Under Study; Another Meeting Slated

The question of township-city enforcement of the BOCA building code in some units versus county enforcement of the state code in other units apparently is still undecided, but a representative of the Michigan Construction Code Commission is to meet later this week with the Iosco Board of Commissioners to clear the air on the county's responsibility.

Two local units of government—the City of Tawas City and Plainfield Township—adopted resolutions in October asking the county to administer the state code. Following a meeting two weeks ago, other townships and cities elected to exempt the remaining units from the legislative act and would be responsible for administration and enforcement of code formulated by the Building Officials Conference of America.

Discussion at Wednesday's meeting of the county board of commissioners indicated that the county probably would have to establish an enforcement bureau to oversee administration of either the state or BOCA building code, regardless of action by local units.

According to an opinion from the prosecuting attorney's office, once a city or township has elected to exempt itself from the act and the state code, it cannot then void that election. Accordingly, those units of government would not be entitled to any of the state services from the state attorney general's office, provided for in the act, in connection with implementing the building code.

The above situation will be among a number of questions to be answered later this week by the representative of the Michigan Construction Code Commission. City Mgr. Reginald Bublitz and Richter Lixey, Baldwin Township supervisor and president of the Iosco Townships Association, who attended last week's commission meeting, have been invited to the special session.

A confusing situation for all local units of government over administration of building codes has resulted through an apparent misunderstanding of the legislative act.

During discussion at the October 9 session of the county board of commissioners, all representatives of local units of government present believed it would be best to have the county handle enforcement of the state code, rather than to duplicate services by hiring a building inspector and, possibly, plumbing and electrical inspectors which are expected to be required by the state.

In the meantime, the county commission gave its approval Wednesday to submitting an application for assistance funds under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA). Included in that application are positions for three building inspectors, a county engineer and a clerk-typist for a proposed new county engineering department.

Establishment of an engineering department was discussed by the county commission in October as a possible solution to administration of the building code. Besides providing engineering and architectural service to the county as one of its primary functions, the department would also administer mandatory enforcement of the soil erosion sediment control act, which becomes effective January 1.

Iosco Intermediate School District is submitting the application for CETA funds totaling $91,372 and involving 16 employees. The intermediate district has used the program for two years in the hiring of teaching specialists and included in this new application are teachers for visually impaired, hearing impaired, homebound and students with learning disabilities, as well as an aide. Other positions included in the CETA application include a clerk-secretary for the county clerk's office, an assistant home economist for the extension service office and three utility men for the road commission.

Few Republican Candidates Survived Dem's Landslide

Election 1974, which had the poorest voter turnout in recent Iosco history, will long be remembered by bleary-eyed election boards, which set a new record for the length of time required to count ballots; Democrats, who cashed in on voter discontent and national Republican scandals; those Michigan Republicans escaping the Democratic onslaught; housewives, who may see another increase in the food budget due to complications at cash registers of local markets caused by the repeal of the state sales tax.

But general elections come and go every two years and, looking back on Nixon's landslide victory two years ago and the later scandals which rocked his administration, anything can happen in future politics of this country.

Here in Iosco County, only 7,395 voters went to the polls, or 58 percent of the county's registered voter list of 12,578. The turnout was about average for the state, but in the last general election, the county had an 85 percent voter turnout. The last election board worker (Alabaster Township) showed up at the county clerk's office at 7:10 a. m. Wednesday. The county canvassing board spent 2½ days going over records and found many errors by election workers. The canvassing board finished its work Friday, after calling in a number of election board chairmen to correct mistakes.

Although it was not too surprising because of the national landslide, Iosco Democrats made their best showing in years in traditionally Republican Iosco County. Gov. William G. Milliken, who survived voter distress over Watergate and the battered economy, received 3,826 votes in Iosco County. Sander Levin, who was defeated by the state GOP standard bearer for the second election in a row, was close behind with 3,349 votes.

George A. Prescott, 105th District state representative, who defeated his Democratic opponent, Patrick G. Flynn, by a little more than 1,000 votes in the district, totaled 3,766 votes to Flynn's 3,089.

Robert W. Davis, Gaylord Republican, retained his seat in the senate by defeating Prentiss M. Brown, St. Ignace Democrat. Davis received 2,727 votes in Iosco to 2,509 for Brown.

Robert D. Young, Republican, who represents Western Iosco in the senate, defeated Dorothy J. Currie, Democrat, and received a margin of 712-616 in Iosco County.

Circuit Judge Allan C. Miller, who conducted a peppery law and order campaign for a seat on the state supreme court and received more than 300,000 votes, headed his Pinto back to Iosco as he lost his bid to Thomas M. Kavanagh and Blair Moody Jr., Democrats of long standing in this "non-partisan" election. Miller received 3,719 votes in Iosco County, while Kavanagh had 2,782 votes; Moody, 2,144; John W. Fitzgerald, 1,849.

Judge Donald E. Holbrook Jr. of Clare and Judge Daniel F. Walsh of Gaylord won seats on the court of appeals.

Hoping to puncture inflated food bills, state voters repealed the state sales tax on food and prescription drugs. Voters approved the bonus program for Vietnam-era military veterans, but rejected a bond issue for public transportation and a constitutional amendment restricting use of gasoline tax revenues for mass transit.

Here in Iosco County, voters soundly defeated a proposal recommended by the Iosco Allocation Board to add two mills of taxes to the 15-mill limitation and peg mileage for schools, county and townships. The vote was 4,087 "no" and 2,539 "yes."

Tabulation of votes was complicated greatly by the long list of candidates for trustees of Michigan State University, regents of the University of Michigan, governors of Wayne State University and the state board of education. The state's top educational seats were swept by Democrats.

There was no excitement for posts on the Iosco County Board of Commissioners, as all of the action took place in the August primary. Elected without opposition were Robert Foster, First District; Donald G. Griffin, Second District; Mary Jane Burdett, Third District; Joseph W. Fox, Fourth District; William G. Wery, Fifth District. Ronald Tyler was unopposed for prosecuting attorney.

Only one write-in candidate was successful in five races for township offices in Iosco County. There was a total of 11 races for township offices.

In Alabaster Township, voters returned Mrs. Leona Benson to the post of treasurer. She had been defeated in the August primary but was a write-in candidate and defeated Ralph Rohrbach, 79-68. J. Harry Rapson, Republican, defeated Mabel E. Smith, Democrat, 101-60, for township supervisor; Alice B. Makinen, Democrat, defeated Fannie M. Winstead, Republican, 85-72, for trustee.

In AuSable Township, Terry A. Palmiter, Republican, defeated Leonard T. Arnold, Democrat, 376-133, for the position of supervisor. Dale Lamrock received 191 write-in votes. Mornelva Snitcher, Republican, defeated Lois Jackson, a write-in candidate, 482-97, for township clerk.

In Baldwin Township, Joyce A. Klenow, who was appointed by Republicans to fill the vacancy of the late Loretta Klenow as treasurer, defeated Peter A. Lichtfus, write-in candidate, 273-93.

Burleigh Township voters elected Peggy Bassi, Democrat, over Dolores Grezeszak, Republican, for township treasurer, 119-58. Olen Herriman, Democrat, was successful in his bid for re-election as Grant Township supervisor, defeating Basil S. Duncan, Republican, 201-112.

Two races in Plainfield Township saw Bruce Hewitt, Democrat, defeating Kenneth Salisbury, Republican, 625-332, for the post of supervisor. Frances J. Hansen, Republican, was re-elected over Sandra M. Baldwin, Democrat, 505-464, for township clerk.

Harvey Odell, Republican, was re-elected to the post of Reno Township supervisor over James Mielock, a write-in candidate, 62-58.

TODAY'S Meditation

from The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide

(Read Psalm 90:1-12)

Even to your old age I am He and to gray hairs I will carry you. I have made and I will bear; I will carry and will save. (Isaiah 46:4 RSV)

I was once a guest speaker in a village church. While waiting in a seat near the front for the worship to begin, I heard a voice behind me say in a cheery tone, "Good morning, everyone."

During the worship service, I looked down and saw the speaker of those words. He was an elderly man, but I was hardly prepared for the remark made to me at the close of the worship hour. A member said, "That man is 102 years old." Noting how he participated in the service and seeing how sprightly he walked out of the church, I could scarcely believe he was that age.

God's promises to us are wonderful and authentic. We can count on them. Centuries ago, the prophet Isaiah felt moved to pen the words of our text.

When we live for God each day of our lives, then we receive spiritual grace and strength to continue along the pathway of the years, whether the years be few or many.

PRAYER

Dear Lord, quicken us with perceptive minds and ready wills in youth and middle life, so that in old age we may honor Thee and prove life to be a blessing. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Are we using the days, months and years of our lives to the honor of God?—David B. Achterkirch, Rochester, Minnesota.

Physician Guilty of False Claims

Dr. Alan Weiner, a Cleveland, Ohio, podiatrist, was found guilty Tuesday, September 24, in United States District Court, Cleveland, on four counts of filing fraudulent medicare claims. Weiner had been indicted in December 1973 on 10 counts of submitting false medicare claims.

The investigation of Weiner, which was conducted by the Social Security Administration's Bureau of Health Insurance, disclosed that Weiner had submitted medicare claims for services which, in fact, had not been rendered. Weiner could receive a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment and/or a $10,000 fine on each count. He will be sentenced at a later date.

Doctor Weiner's conviction represents the second conviction for medicare fraud involving Ohio physicians and is the 11th such conviction in the Chicago, Illinois, region of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which, in addition to Ohio, includes Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The investigation and referral to the Department of Justice of potential medicare fraud cases is part of an ongoing effort of the Social Security Administration aimed at assuring proper use of the medicare program.

If you have questions regarding social security, contact the social security office at 1009 North Madison, Bay City, or phone 892-3554.

Tawas Tube Moves Into Production

15 Years Ago—

November 11, 1959—Tawas Tube Products has moved into full production at its plant on Ninth Avenue with 25 persons employed.

Two 18-year-old duck hunters, John H. Jacques of Tawas City and Fred Nash of East Tawas, were rescued from Tawas Bay after holding on to their overturned canoe. Charles Kobs, who was working at the Robert Glancy home west of the Tawas City city limit, rowed out into the bay with a 10-foot plywood boat to rescue the wet hunters.

Dr. Earl Hasty, district health director, reported to the county board of supervisors that the Huron Convalescent Home on M-55 would be approved by state agencies for another year of operation.

Fire and smoke caused about $2,000 damage to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rollie J. Gackstetter on Plank Road early Monday morning.

Anderson Coach Company has announced that it will distribute $15,185 to its striking employees representing 1959 vacation pay. The plant has been closed by strike since August 4.

25 Years Ago—

November 11, 1949—A big buck contest is being sponsored by The Tawas Herald in cooperation with local merchants. Prizes are to be awarded to hunters bringing in the first five bucks on opening day and prizes are to be awarded at the end of the season for the largest rack registered.

W. H. Nestle, state inspector of jails, has recommended that the board of supervisors establish a sinking fund to replace the county jail in the future.

Elected to the county board of education were Mrs. Bernice Heriman, John Brugger, Charles Harsh, William DeGrow and Mrs. Sophia McDonald. Seventeen school districts from the county sent electors to the meeting held at Watts School.

Iosco Board of Supervisors tabled two ultimatums from the state fire marshal's office calling for changes at the Iosco County Infirmary. The first ordered discontinuance of using the second floor of the infirmary as a sitting or sleeping quarters, the second ordered installation of fire doors on the furnace room.

During the annual banquet of Tawas Chamber of Commerce, Harold Gould suggested that each business place of the community sponsor a shanty at Perchville on Tawas Bay during the ice fishing season. He thought that shanties should be arranged in street formations on the ice for use by visiting fishermen.

35 Years Ago—

November 10, 1939 — About 30 members of the newly-organized Tawas City Club enjoyed dinner at the clubrooms located in the Davidson Building.

More than 166,000 deer licenses were issued by the state last year and about the same number are expected to be sold this year. The 1939 deer harvest should be as good as the hunting in 1938, when 44,800 bucks were bagged. The ban on doe shooting continues in effect and will be strictly enforced.

DAR Provides Free Manuals for Those Becoming Citizens

Manuals for the use of those studying for American citizenship will be made available in Alcona, Arenac, Iosco and Ogemaw Counties by the River Aux Sables Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

They will be furnished free to applicants for citizenship or for use in Americanization classes and a supply will shortly be available at the office of D. Keith Panas, Iosco County clerk, Tawas City. Individual applicants in other areas may request one through any member of the chapter, according to Mrs. James Zeder, A.G.R.S., chapter regent.

Nearly 10-million of the manuals have been distributed by the DAR since 1921. The 97-page, indexed and illustrated booklet includes sections on American history; the texts of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution; forms of national, state and local government; census figures, and other items of interest, in addition to a summary of the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service requirements for citizenship.

The new chapter, organized in October, was presented with an official gavel when it met at the home of Mrs. Dale R. Brummund, Wurtsmith Air Force Base, for coffee Saturday, November 2.

The gavel had been used by Dr. Worthy T. Boyd, past president, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, chapter, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, and was presented by Mrs. Boyd, a DAR member. The Boyds are now residents at Long Lake.

Mrs. Louis Bush of Hale and Mrs. Lloyd Wiegierink of West Branch were guests of the chapter.

SSI Explained by Social Security

Some people age 65 and older, blind or disabled in the Iosco County area may have been previously disallowed for Supplemental Security Income (SSI), according to John Carr, social security manager, Bay City.

"Since Supplemental Security Income is a new program, some changes in regulations have occurred," Carr said. "One change that has an effect in the Iosco area is the amount of land a person can have with their home."

According to Carr, "The old rule placed a tolerance limit of one acre of land associated with an individual's home. Any land in excess of an acre was considered a resource. The new rule no longer considers land over an acre as a resource if it is part of the individual's home."

Carr now emphasizes that any individual previously told they were not eligible for Supplemental Security Income because of the ownership of land should now recontact the Bay City Social Security Office if they feel their home and land do not have a market value in excess of $25,000.

Landowners contacting social security to apply for Supplemental Security Income should bring a copy of a recent property tax assessment statement with them. The document will help verify the market value of their property.

Carr concluded by reminding Iosco County residents that the Bay City Social Security Office is located at 1009 North Madison. Office hours are 8:45 a. m. to 4:45 p. m., Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 892-3554.

When the gang gets together they'll all cheer for hot, hearty foods. If you have some spare turkey or ham, a couple of the main dishes will be inviting to you.

These dishes are perfect for parties, quick dinners and whenever hungry people get together. They're easy to fix, too, so the cook enjoys the festivities along with everyone else.

by Paula Delfeld and Juanita Austin

The mood of the village of Brandon, Wisconsin has been one of nostalgia the past few weeks as old-timers, newcomers, and youngsters alike watched a giant lead ball pound away at the historic Schoeffler Building until its still sturdy walls yielded and crumbled.

Sentiment reached its climax the day the three thousand pound tower, landmark at the corner of Washington and Commercial Streets since 1899, was picked off by the Beaver Salvage Company crane as if in a game of Jack Straws.

Now the "Old Schoeffler Block," as it was commonly called, belongs to the ages. All that is left is the corner stone dated 1899 AD and this has been placed in the lobby of the Brandon bank. In addition to forming a base for a large Shefflera plant—coincidentally, the two huge blocks estimated to weigh from two to three hundred pounds each will be a conversation piece for years to come.

For some there was a feeling of joy and relief as the old building, despite its dignity and historic charm, had for several years been labeled an eye sore.

For others it was a feeling of frustration and loss. More than once men had tried to buy it, preserve it, and transform it into something useful. One wished to make it into an athletic club with bowling alley and other facilities for community recreation. Another had in mind a teen center. Still another, more recently, made plans for an Old Town on the Green to include a center for senior citizens. The Toy Mender engaging retired citizens who might volunteer to restore toys for redistribution to the poor, a village arts center, an antique shop, and in the Old Stone House in the rear of the main buildings a studio for a potter or craftsman of some sort.

But each of the best laid plans in its turn fell through since the Schoeffler property was tied up in an estate and could not be sold.

"It breaks your heart to see it go!" exclaimed Harry Koehler, retired lumberman, architect and builder. "A tragedy really! In the East they do everything to preserve these old buildings. Why, right now, even with all its broken windows and general disrepair, this one is sturdier than some of the buildings on Main Street."

The truth of his statement was obvious for the mighty demolition ball struck persistently before the outside walls succumbed. "Just look!" pointed a fellow spectator. "Three rows of bricks! Where would you find that solid a construction today?" Others noted the extra large rafters—22 feet long 3-by-12s about a foot apart, the spacious stairways, and the wide, beautifully arched passageways.

Koehler, who as a boy set pins in the bowling alley that once was a part of the block, recalled some of the businesses that had made Brandon a thriving community before the automobile and the urban movement left its mark. "There were—at various times—a shoe repair, candy and ice cream store, bakery, grocer, saloon, a dentist, osteopath, milliner, produce, barber shop, and a hotel to be proud of."

The second floor turreted cupola and the three handsomely designed bay windows architecturally tied by ornate cornices were a part of the old Park Hotel that belvedere the village green, property of the Chicago, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad.

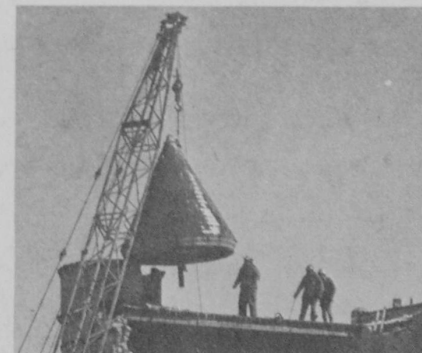

"Just a short walk from the train, with a dray to convey their trunks, it was a popular stopover for traveling salesmen," reported Fred Comstock who worked on the railroad loading platform. "You should have seen the trunks the salesmen used to carry. Great big things. Mostly clothes, dry goods. Not just samples. Most of them sold from their trunks. There were no little suitcases. One large room just south of the hotel lobby provided ample space to display samples or wares to the local merchants. Business with Fair Water and Markesan could be handled comfortably in a one-day trip by Brandon livery service."

"It was a busy center. Always lots of activity," contributed Paul Dreger, now of Fair Water. "At one time I was chauffeur for banker J. W. Foster and I lived in the hotel for two years. There was a good dining room west of the lobby and the second floor sleeping rooms were generally pleasant. A little chilly in the winter season," he smiled. "It was not uncommon to awake and find the water in my pitcher and wash bowl frozen solid."

Dreger, who later built and managed a Nash garage in Brandon, also recalled that the mid-nineteenth century stone house in the back of the hotel kitchen served a triple purpose.

In the south end was the ice house. Ice was cut and hauled in from the Fair Water pond. In the center of the Old Stone House were the toilets for the hotel. The deluxe outdoor model. On the north end—after the gas lamp days—a gasoline-powered generator supplied electricity, but only while the engine was running.

Frank Schoeffler erected the block in connection with the Haas Brewery Company of Ripon and Princeton. It was built of Watertown bricks mortared with sand hauled by a team from the Ted Czoschke farm. Three loads a day at a dollar a load!

It is no wonder that the demolition of the Schoeffler buildings has touched so many hearts. Older citizens remember Mr. and Mrs. Schoeffler as a couple who contributed a great deal to the Brandon community. They donated the land on which the St. Brendan's Church was built and were active in religious, civic and social circles.

The Schoeffler humor and good nature was also evident on Memorial Day and other holidays when the village band offered programs for the public. It is said that long before the rest were tuning up Frank was parading up and down the streets beating a rat-a-tat-tat on his snare drum. He was known as a real promoter, a jolly good fellow.

"They were both fine people," confirmed Mrs. Eva Schiller. "The Schoefflers had no children, but were fond of young people. In fact, I remember how they always made the Fourth of July a fun day for the kids. On that date the Brandon Park across the street came alive with games, contests of all kinds, balloons, prizes, candy and ice cream—everything that would delight a youngster."

Another interesting note from this nonagenarian regarded the tin bath tubs that the Schoefflers installed. No running water, of course, but a drain pipe did conveniently empty the bath water into a barrel outside.

"You see," continued Mrs. Schiller, "I worked for Mrs. Schoeffler in her candy shop when I was seventeen. We didn't make our candy, but we did have our own ice cream. And we served some light meals. It was my job to soak and prepare the herring for those Friday luncheons. Saturday's menu always included baked beans. We served the general public, especially farmers and railroad men who came to town.

"The hotel had a more fashionable dining room, of course. How well I remember when that building was completed! Mrs. Schoeffler's sister and I had to clean the windows and floors after the plastering was done. My pay was fifty cents a week, in addition to my one dollar and a half weekly candy shop wage."

Schoeffler never ran the hotel himself, but always demanded high standards of its managers. Centenarian Mrs. Margaret Scott, now of Waupun, confirms the good dinners they used to serve in the hotel dining room. "We often went there for Sunday dinner as guests of a co-proprietor Esther Harrington. It was a popular place for parties, especially for young couples."

On this point Mrs. Anna Sims, 89, enjoyed a moment of reminiscence. "Oh, yes! Those were happy times! We'd leave our team and buggy or sleigh at one of the Brandon liveryies and go to a dance or a masquerade at the Odd Fellows Hall. Then we'd all gather at the Park Hotel dining room for a midnight supper. Oyster stew and cream cake! That was a favorite order. Later we'd return to the hall and dance again until two or three o'clock in the morning. I remember . . . Oh, yes, I remember!"

According to Mrs. Scott the hotel lobby was gracious and comfortable. The steps of a beautiful stairway divided just above lobby level and guests were impressed with the cordial setting of palms, furniture groupings, and particularly by a row of heavy black-leather rocking chairs that overlooked the village green.

With changing times the Park Hotel finally became a tavern and one by one stores closed as people sped by car to shop in neighboring cities. For several years some of the rooms and stores were used as residences. Soon, because of inattention to upkeep, this too became a thing of the past.

"But no pigeons ever had it so good!" laughed retired Brandon butcher Lewis Carpenter. As the huge leaden ball began to bang away again one morning, he pointed to the sky. Even the last of the pigeons flew out frantically and furiously.

One question remains. As villagers reminisce over the cornerstone in the local bank, chuckling over its contents—five nickels, six Indianhead pennies, and a sodden Brandon Times all dated 1899, they ask invariably, "What will take the place of the Old Schoeffler Block?"

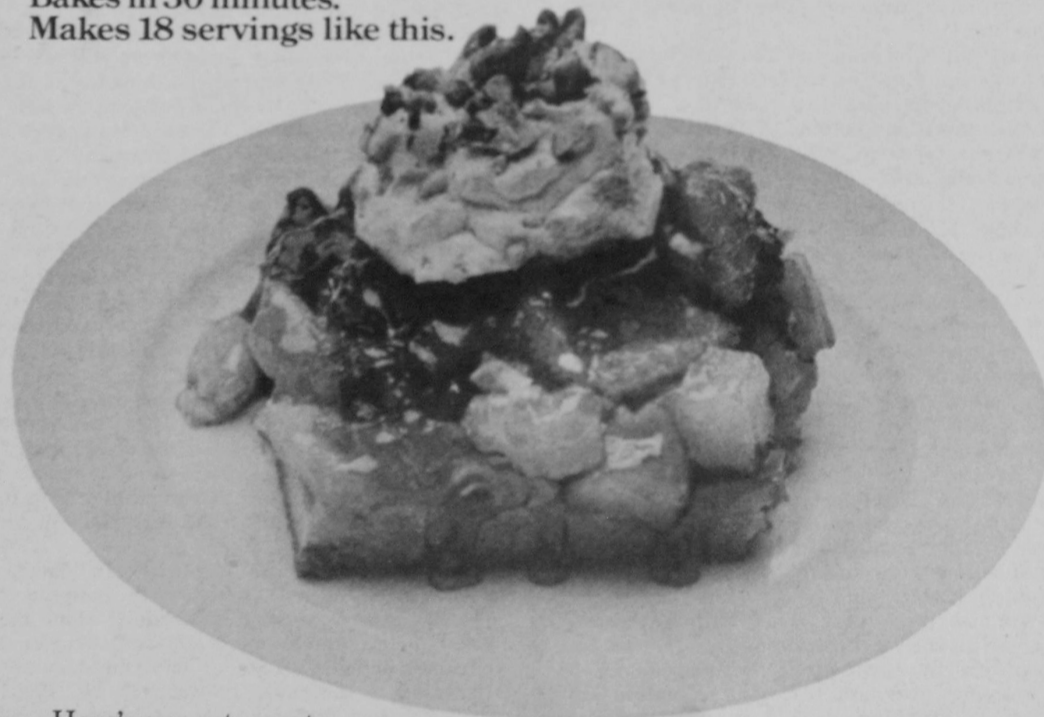

Wreckers worked hard to tear down the old building.

Remember... Growing up in the 40's?

by Gretchen Giles

I went home this summer, back to the little town in Wisconsin where I had grown up. I drove past the house that I had lived in as a young child and looked up at the stained glass window of the big room I had shared with one and sometimes two of my sisters. Marvelous times I had enjoyed in that old house, and I succumb quickly to the waves of nostalgia when I remember that house and those times.

Dad had bought the house in 1936 for the family: Dad, Mother, and my oldest sister. (They were joined by another sister in 1937, myself in 1940, and another girl in 1945.) The house was an old house, circa 1910, and although it was not a big house, it seemed so because the rooms were large, the ceilings were high, and the house spread across the lot in a sprawling but orderly fashion.

It was just the right house for a family of growing youngsters for what the house lacked in numbers of rooms, it made up for in numbers of fascinating places for curious, mischievous children. One such spot was the attic with its charred timbers from a previous owner's fire, and its walls adorned with remnants of Ringling Brothers Circus posters. The blackened wood was rather frightening, but the old posters were most intriguing with their bright color and pictures.

One of my most delightful memories of that house was the grate in one of the second floor bedrooms. The purpose of it was to allow the heat from the floor below into the bedroom. My sisters and I used it for much more than that! Mom and Dad set the buffet table for parties right below that grate. How much fun it was, when we had been sent upstairs with our supply of candy and nuts from the party, to lie on the floor around the grate and watch the guests below. Our giggles always betrayed us, and the adults would look up to see six and later eight beady eyes staring down at them.

The bathroom in that house would be today's antique lover's delight for it had the old-fashioned tub on legs. How large those tubs were! I remember the time my two sisters and I filled the tub with water, got in, and went round and round until all the water had splashed out and over the side. Our Dad wasn't too happy about the damage done to the wallpapered ceiling in our parents' bedroom below!

The cellar was one place in the house that I didn't like for it always seemed cold, dark, damp, and rather scary down there. It had a room where Mom had her wringer washer and jars of canned food, a furnace room, and a coal bin. Even the coal bin didn't fascinate me much, but I did like to watch Dad throw shovels full of coal into the red, hot furnace. I didn't like to go down into the cellar alone, and I got out of there as fast as I could whenever it was necessary for me to go down by myself.

One of the greatest spots that I loved in that old house was the large, screened-in porch that ran across the entire back of the house and part of the way along one side. It meant summer wasn't too far away when we were allowed to start sleeping on the rollaways on the porch. It was so cozy to sleep there all summer and see the stars overhead and hear the night noises of the neighborhood. How reassuring it was to hear the drone of adult voices and see the inside lights before we fell asleep.

Those years nearly everyone in the neighborhood had a garden. I can remember someone coming by with a horse to plow up the gardens in early spring.

Somebody planted the garden, Dad or maybe all of us. I don't remember. But I do remember hot summer days when we just had to walk into the garden, pluck a lush vegetable from the soil, usually a kohlrabi or a carrot, and take a yummy bite. Who bothered to wash them! Eating them right out of the garden was most of the adventure!

Those were the years before convenience foods and availability of canned goods. Those were the years of World War II and food shortages. Those were the years when Mother canned and canned. Delicious smells filled the back of the house. One in particular was that of simmering concord grapes which would become scrumptious grape jam and jelly. How hard Mother worked to lay in our winter food supply! Sometimes, I suspect, Mother was more delighted than upset when the neighbor boys ate all the concord grapes off the grape arbor and snatched the best apples from the apple trees.

World War II was raging for much of my childhood in that house. Although my parents must have had much fear and anxiety during that time, I don't recall them making me feel anything but perfectly safe. Dad, at age 39, with three children and his own business, was on the next call-up list when the war ended.

The things that I remember from the war were fun things. Airplanes flew very low, dropping literature, war bond literature, I think. We loved to run out and pick up the leaflets. I dashed out one time, pajama-clad, midwinter, quarantined with chicken pox, with Mom tight on my heels. All I wanted was to gather my share of leaflets with the other kids!

We saved foil from gum and cigarette wrappers, and that was fun too. The ration buttons I remember, but I don't remember the cakes Mom said she frosted with meringue instead of frosting nor the other food shortages we had. Everything seemed warm, good, and safe.

The end of the war memory is just of people being happy. My sister says we went downtown and people were all over, yelling, crying, cheering.

So, the Great War was over and our lives moved on. However, it didn't seem to change my childhood. We continued to be carefree little spirits, very much loved, well-disciplined, secure, content.

The seasons continued to come and go. More summer nights came. They were exceptionally fun. We played "Kick the Can," "Draw the Frying Pan," "Red Light, Green Light," "Starlight, Moonlight," "Arrow Tag," "Chase," etc. Someone discovered that the slats underneath our screened-in porch could be moved enough to slide through. That was a favorite hiding place of ours because you could see the goal through the slats and knew when you could get home free.

Our summer days were filled with activities. Playing ball in the street, walking barefoot to get penny candy at the Little Store (our neighborhood store). Crying over stubbed toes. Healing up stubbed toes. Stubbing already stubbed toes. (I haven't seen a good stubbed big toe in years!) When we got tired of one thing, we went on to another. We stomped tin cans until they curved around our shoes, and then we ran down the sidewalk sounding like horses. We made slingshots from old innertubes (free from the garages). The willows down by the creek provided us with branches which we soaked and shaped into bows.

Sometimes we dug deep holes by the garden until we hit clay. Then we made bowls, cups, etc. and let them dry in the sun. We spent hours swinging on our rope and board swing. It was a tremendous swing because not only could you go back and forth, you could also go around the huge oak tree, push off hard and fast from the other side, and go sailing out and around, whiz past the kitchen window, and swing around to the back side of the tree at which time you repeated the same action in reverse.

Another fun thing was to put a wooden box on our wagon. The box was big enough to put someone in. We pulled the wagon all over, and when the wagon stopped, the person inside the wagon had to guess where he or she was. Sometimes we took the baby buggy; they were large, cumbersome things then. One of the kids would get in. We'd cover him up and push the buggy around the neighborhood. Unsuspecting adults, stopping to admire the new baby, got a surprise instead!

We were always looking for ways to earn money. Poor Mom never had any clean rags around because we constantly took them and sold them to the Ford Garage. Every summer we put on some kind of show in our garage and invited kids from all over town. Reserved seats were chairs. The others were planks put over washtubs. We sold popcorn and watered-down root beer. Intermission entertainment was provided by one of my sisters who could do tricks on the trapeze. We made pretty good money that way each summer.

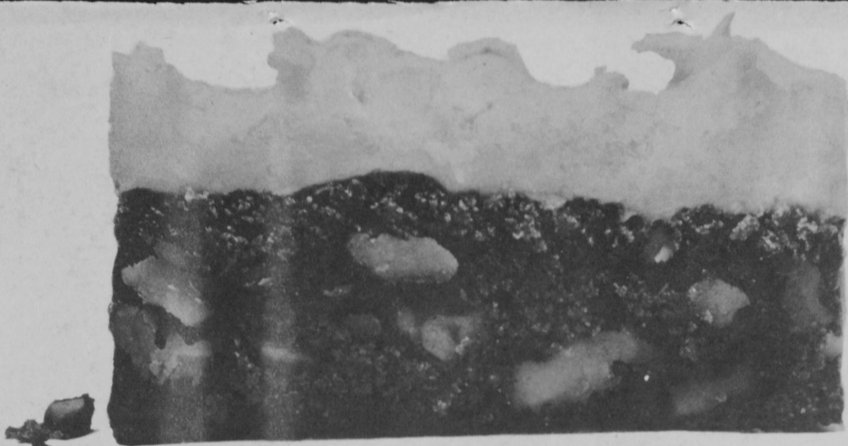

One of the biggest money-making schemes was the summer we collected newspaper, an idea struck upon by my oldest sister and the neighbor boy. One of my sisters and I walked all over our side of town, knocking on doors, asking for old papers. Then we hauled them home in our wagon for my oldest sister and the neighbor boy to weigh on Mom's baby scale and tie them. I'll never forget the two old bachelors who also gave us their bread wrappers, and at ages 6 and 9, we didn't know how to tell them we only wanted newspapers. The outcome of the whole thing was 1½ tons of collected paper sold to the junkman for $2.50 of which my oldest sister took $1.00, the neighbor took another $1.00, and my sister and I, who had done all the leg work, each received 25 cents. At that point my parents intervened on the wage scale. What the final salary was, I don't remember.

Summer days and nights ended. School started. Nights became cooler. Sleeping on the back porch ended. Jack Frost nipped the leaves and changed them to gorgeous shades of red and yellow. Fall arrived, and afternoons after school were spent raking leaves, making leaf houses and leaf piles and jumping in. There was no burning ban then, and fall evenings, after the leaves had been pulverized by play, little fires of smoldering, then crackling leaves lined the gutters. The smoke streamed up your nose and eyes smarted with tears, but what a seasonal smell the fall leaf fires created. We roasted marshmallows and ate them covered with leaf ashes and burned to a crisp. But, oh, they were good!

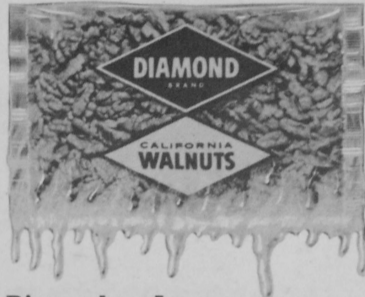

Then winters came and one would see pink signs, yellow signs, white signs tacked to doors of houses. Quarantine signs they were, a different color, I believe, for each disease. It wasn't much fun being the one quarantined particularly for the measles. The room had to be dark and you couldn't read.

Winter brought lots of fun inside. There were card games, board games, corn popping times. Usually every Sunday afternoon, Mom made a batch of fudge, or we made taffy, caramels, or caramel popcorn. Lots of enjoyment came from listening to the radio shows such as "The Shadow," "Fibber McGee and Molly," and the one that had the line, "Anybody hawl for Beulah?" What was so much fun was being able to imagine Fibber McGee's closet and opening, creaking doors, etc.

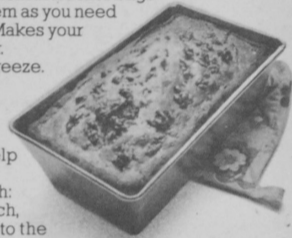

I've often wondered if I'll ever have enough courage to go knock on the door and ask the owner if I could buy the stained glass window from that old big bedroom I shared with one of my sisters and sometimes two.

What calls back the past like the rich pumpkin pie?

Ah! on Thanksgiving Day, when from east and from west, From north and from south, come the pilgrim and guest. When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board The old broken links of affection re-stored,

When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more, And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before— What moistens the lips and what brightens an eye— What calls back the past like the rich pumpkin pie?

"The Pumpkin" by John Greenleaf Whittier

by Betty Curren

"Frost-On-The-Pumpkin-Chiffon" Pie

1 envelope unflavored gelatine	1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup cold water	1/2 teaspoon salt
3 eggs, separated	1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup granulated sugar	1/4 teaspoon ginger
1 1/4 cups mashed cooked or canned pumpkin	1/2 teaspoon allspice
	1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
	1/4 cup powdered sugar (for egg whites)

"FESTIVE CREAM FILLING":

1 1/4 cups powdered sugar	1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup heavy cream for whipping	1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Add gelatine to cold water; set aside to soften. Beat egg yolks slightly; add sugar and continue beating until well mixed. Add pumpkin, milk, salt, cinnamon, ginger, allspice and nutmeg. Mix thoroughly. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly until it boils. Boil 2 minutes, continuing to stir. Remove from heat. Add softened gelatin and stir until dissolved. Set aside to cool. While pumpkin mixture is cooling, make the Cream Filling; sift, then measure 1 1/4 cups powdered sugar. Whip cream until it stands in peaks (but not too stiff). Add powdered sugar, cinnamon and vanilla. Gently mix or stir until mixture is stiff. Set in refrigerator until ready to use.

Beat egg whites until light and fluffy. Add the 1/4 cup powdered sugar and beat until stiff, but not dry. Without washing beaters, beat cooled pumpkin mixture until smooth, then gently fold into egg whites. Pour about half into Graham Cracker Crust; spread evenly. Using about half the Cream Filling, spread a layer approximately 1/4 inch thick over pumpkin layer. Pile remaining pumpkin filling on top. Chill in refrigerator about 2 hours. Before serving, top with remaining Cream Filling.

GRAHAM CRACKER CRUST

1 1/2 cups crushed graham crackers	1/4 cup granulated sugar
	1/4 cup melted margarine

Combine graham crackers and sugar; add melted margarine and mix well. Press into bottom and around sides of 10" pie plate. Bake at 325 degrees for 10 minutes. Cool.

Pumpkin Chiffon Pie with Sour Cream

CRUMB CRUST

8 ginger snaps, crushed	1/3 cup melted margarine
10 graham crackers, crushed

Mix crumbs together with margarine in pie plate. Press firmly against bottom and sides to form crust. Bake at 325 degrees for ten minutes. Cool and fill.

FILLING

2 eggs	1 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 cup water	1 tablespoon unflavored gelatine
1/2 cup light brown sugar	1/4 cup cold water

1/2 teaspoon salt	2 tablespoons sugar
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon	1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 teaspoon ginger	1 tablespoon sugar

Place beaters and mixing bowl containing 1/2 cup water in the freezer. In a saucepan beat eggs with the 1/4 cup water. Then mix in the sugars, pumpkin and seasonings. Stirring constantly, cook carefully over medium heat until thickened. Remove from heat and stir in gelatine which has been softened in the 1/4 cup water, until it is thoroughly dissolved. Cool. Take bowl and water from freezer and gradually beat nonfat dry milk into ice water. When mixture begins to thicken, add sugar and continue beating until thick and fluffy. Fold into cooled pumpkin mixture and pour into crust. Chill until firm. Serve with sweetened sour cream.

How it used to be at Thanksgiving!

by Ellen Rebecca Fenn

If you're old enough to remember the first World War then you'll be apt to recall those highly colored, artistically designed Thanksgiving Greetings which came on a postal card already carrying the greeting on the face for the Happy Holiday of Thanksgiving.

Of course there were beautifully illustrated color greetings for every holiday in the U.S., but those at Thanksgiving always carried some connotation of pumpkin pie, a turkey, a Pilgrim, Uncle Sam, fruit of the season and/or various other November memoirs.

But did you know the Pilgrims actually initiated this day? Did you know it was started because they thought celebrating Christmas was sinful so they began using another month and another day for their Thanksgiving! It was actually for that purpose, only.

There are those who insist that Thanksgiving began with the celebration of Guy Hawks Day, in England, when Guy Hawks attempted to blow up parliament and was hanged for the act in 1605. But years ago, the Romans and Israelites always gave thanks to God for a bountiful harvest. And in Great Britain, November was the month of feasting and giving thanks. Also the Greeks practiced a nine day affair when the harvest was done.

Thanksgiving greeting cards from the collection of Ellen Rebecca Fenn. These cards were sent through the mail between 1907 and 1915.

Sarah Josepha Buell Hale is generally credited with the birth of Thanksgiving as a National Holiday in this country. She begged President Lincoln to proclaim the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day. Two presidents, Washington and Madison, appointed one day set aside for giving thanks; but a legalized national observance came in 1941 to fall on the fourth Thursday in November.

Sarah was a born organizer! Aligning various programs for women's causes she instigated the practice of having females educated in medicine to be sent abroad. She also advocated "normal" training courses for women and an educational equal to that of men.

She organized the first day nursery and helped raise funds for a Bunker Hill Monument. She believed every woman was put on earth for something other than procreation.

It was in 1846 she stood on her soap box and pledged herself to creating a day for National feasting. She was 20 years achieving this. On October 3, 1863, Lincoln took pen in hand and issued a proclamation that the last Thursday in November be set aside for Thanksgiving. Since then each President has proclaimed that date until Roosevelt was pressured into lengthening the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

In 1939 the third Thursday became the official day. In 1941 Congress passed a resolution declaring such. There it has remained.

About the time of Mrs. Hale's death (1879), highly decorated postals portraying the Thanksgiving motif, in various ways, made their way through the mails. These missives reached their peak during 1900 to 1915. Hundreds of these can be found in old postcard albums because our grandmothers and mothers saved everything from short pieces of basting thread to paper pokes (sacks). There's a wealth of history recorded on these early postals which went for a green one-cent stamp until 1918.

It is doubtful that the average American family sends even one greeting card at Thanksgiving. Most are too busy revising and/or shortening their Christmas list because of its gigantic proportions. But should you do so, remember the woman whose soap box oratory made the day universal!

If you lived even 10 miles away from Grandmother when you were small (and are over 50 now) you probably have a box of these remembrances stowed away in the attic. Treasure them highly! For your grandmother had a purpose in sending them. Yet, in reality, she had much less to be thankful for than you.

In all probability this type card will never pass your way again, because today's printers do not have the secret of duplication. And postcard collectors the world over will pay dearly for a collection of these ornate remembrances which sold for a penny or was given with purchases as are today's trading stamps.

AUBURN, INDIANA...

Home of Classic Cars

by Bill Thomas

You could count the years of automotive history in distinctive classic car design . . . and it's only fitting that this momentous event occur annually at the home of the classics—Auburn, Indiana. For it was here that many of them were born in an era keynoting personal pride in a fine automobile.

Many of them were custom made—hand carved as it were—by skilled craftsmen who derived as much satisfaction from a job well done as from a labor pay scale resulting in an hourly wage and not much else. For at Auburn were created the Duesenberg, the Auburns, the Cord and each year around Labor Day weekend during the classic car festival, many of these fine automobiles—all of which are now collector's items—return to the place of their birth. Many go on the auction block.

The auction has all the bearings of a classic event. The atmosphere is no different than at a fine arts auction in New York or Paris. The auctioneers are semi-formally dressed in white dinner coats and Stetson hats. They work with precision and finesse. And one by one, the fine automobiles—the classics—parade by the auction stands—a 1911 Marion Bobcat Speedster designed by Harry Stutz; a 1918 Bryan touring car; a 1935 Packard V-12 Sedan; a 1923 Rolls Royce limousine; a 1937 Cord Custom Berline; a 1938 Jaguar Roadster. Sometimes the bids start at $10,000 and increase quickly upward. The Duesenbergs begin even higher. For the Duesenberg leaves the competition far behind, for no other American-made car has ever surpassed it in brazen appeal to the very rich. "The Duesenberg was a car made exclusively for the titanically wealthy," said Leo Gephart of Englewood, Ohio, classic car expert and adviser, "and, like any other true aristocrat, it apologized to no one for being what it was."

Gephart feels the car is legendary . . . its renown immortal. "There were great cars made in America," he said. "A few of them are made even today—but the greatest of them all was and is the Duesenberg. It is superlative . . . it has no equal."

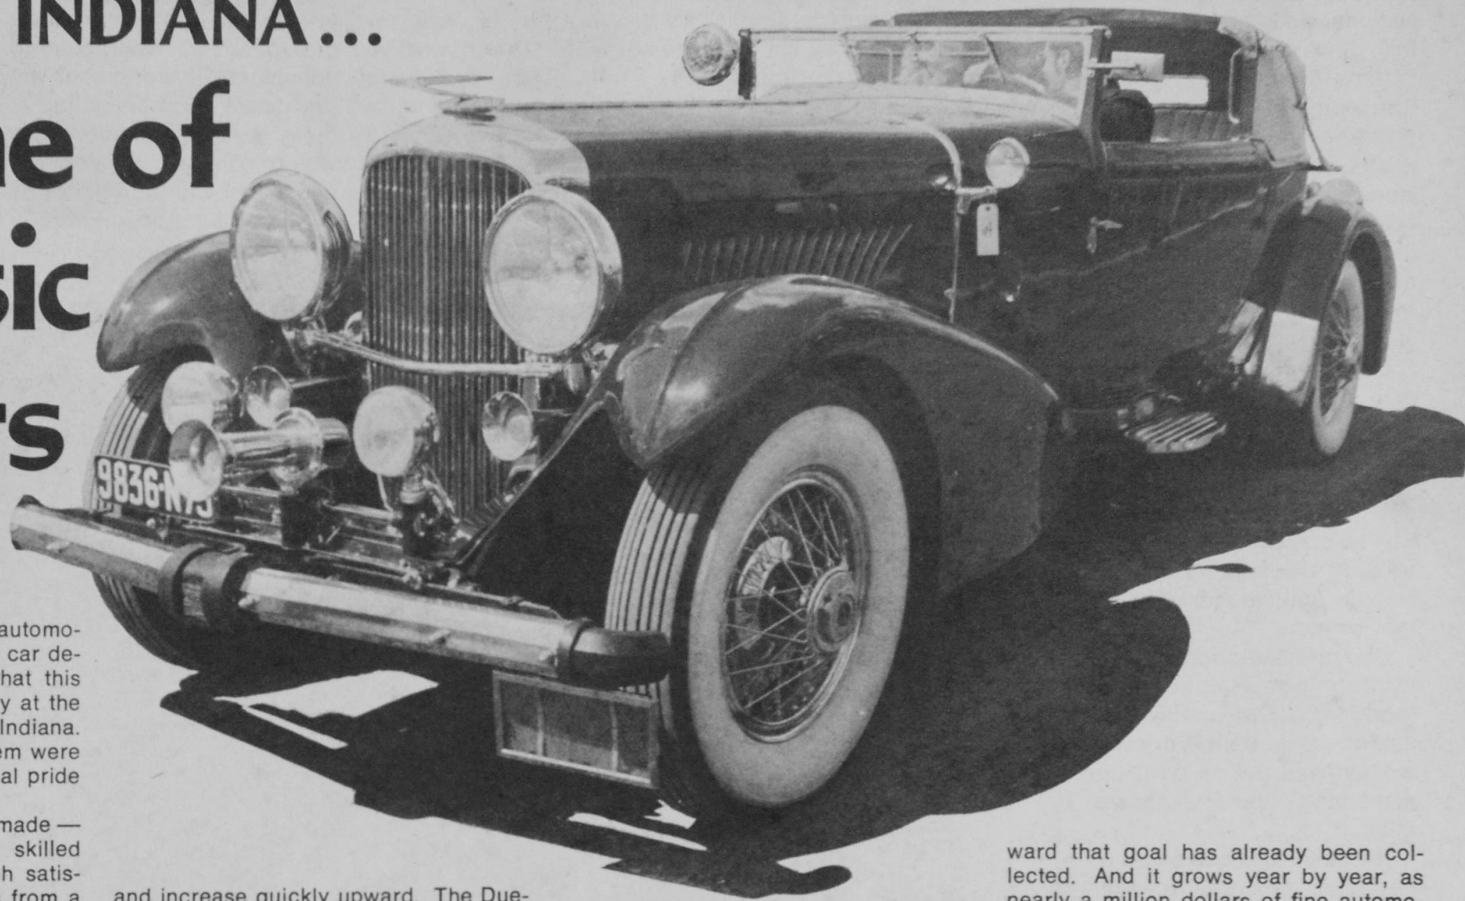

And one of those unequals to be sold at the 1972 auction was one of the most unique ever built—the Greta Garbo Duesenberg—going for a fabulous price of $90,000 to Charles Wood of Lake George, N.Y. Custom-made for the access — who is now a recluse in Paris—the car in 1933 cost $24,000. It's 24 feet long, has a 520-cubic inch engine which enables it to do 110 miles per hour in second gear, and was designed by Fernandez & Darrin in Paris. The car has 18-inch diameter headlights, 9-inch diameter tail lights and a wood grain dashboard with 20 different instruments. The interior is decorated in white plush leather, the exterior a blushing but sophisticated red.

Until 1971, it was a small rather private affair, intended for the 1,400 members of the Classic Car Club scattered world-wide, and the residents of Auburn, which number about 7,500. The club members came and parked their cars around the courthouse square, where they were judged for excellence.

Then, in 1971, with plans afoot to raise funds for a classic car museum to be located at Auburn, a great sum toward that goal has already been collected. And it grows year by year, as nearly a million dollars of fine automobiles annually are sold. Other events include a golf tournament, the annual Auburn Classic festival twirling contest, tours of the town with many stately homes built during the roaring Twenties, and a concert.

Once the Classic Car Museum is completed, visitors will be able not only to tour the museum, but the shop where they can actually watch classic cars being restored.

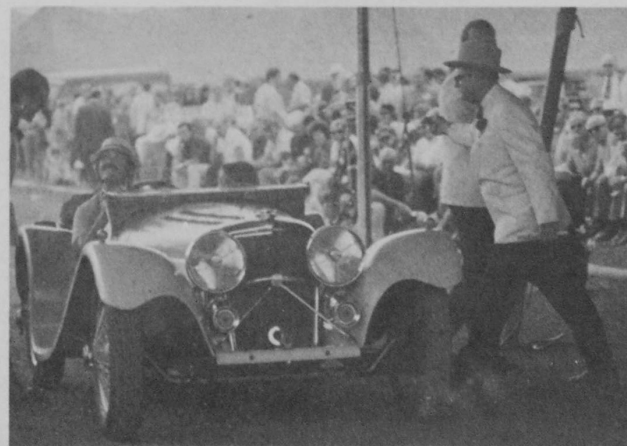

But Greta Garbo's red Duesenberg very likely won't be there, for it's now at Mr. Wood's own museum and restaurant on the shores of Lake George where he personally takes a great deal of pride in showing it to visitors. "When I graduated from high school," he said, "I wrote in my yearbook my life's ambition was to someday own a Duesenberg." Well, 40 years later, he realized that ambition . . . and classic car owners are glad to know he's sharing it with the public.

An Auburn sportster, ready to go and in beautiful condition.

The dashboard of the Greta Garbo Duesenberg. The interior is white plush leather.

The auctioneers work hard to get the highest dollar.

Who put the turkey into Thanksgiving?

by Lucille J. Goodyear

Pilgrims . . . Thanksgiving Day . . . and turkey!

We have come to associate the strutting, fan-tailed turkey with the great three-day "thanksgiving" feasting held by the Pilgrims in 1621 to celebrate their first bountiful harvest in the New World.

The feast was truly a grand assortment of good eating, both from the land and the sea: clams, lobsters, fish, eels, venison, roast duck and goose, leeks and watercress, cornbread, wild fruits and berries, as well as nuts. There was even cranberry sauce sweetened with maple syrup, and big pies made from "pompions", which later came to be called pumpkins.

However, no explicit reference is made to the turkey. If the Pilgrims did have turkey on that historical menu, it wasn't a new discovery, nor did they introduce it to the rest of the world, as has been believed.

According to records the turkey had come to merrie old England during the reign of Henry VIII—almost a century before the Pilgrims' arrival in the New World. The great bird made its grand debut on a royal menu in 1524, when it was served as a minor item for a banquet that included sixteen different types of meat and some thirty kinds of fowl. From this extensive array, the turkey emerged a favorite and was soon featured on all special feasting menus.

If anyone should be credited with discovering the turkey, the Aztecs hold undisputed claim to the honor. They not only hunted the bird for food, but domesticated it as well. When Cortez and other Spanish explorers arrived in what is now known as Mexico, Yucatan and Central America — they found both wild and tame turkeys among the Aztecs.

To the Spaniards the turkey was quite an oddity and many were taken back to Spain in the early 1500's, reaching England a few years later.

Because of the bird's colorful plumage the Spanish called it "gallopavo" — for peacock. (Even today, in Latin American countries, the big bird is known as pavo.) The Hebrew vendors of Spain took to selling the birds, not as a food, but as a curiosity of nature, calling them "tuk-ki" — the Hebrew word for peacock.

It wasn't until the bird made its appearance in England that it came to be called "turkey". The English had a tendency to believe that anything bizarre, exotic or succulent must have come from the East, and believed the strange bird to have originated in Turkey.

Before the arrival of the Pilgrims in this country the turkey was very much at home in various parts of North and Central America. The Pueblo Indians of our southwest valued the bird for its unusual feathers, using them in blanket-making and in decorating ceremonial costumes. Other Indian tribes looked to the turkey as a food.

Considering everything, the regal turkey has had a long and honorable history in North America. Benjamin Franklin, an ardent admirer of the turkey and its characteristics, disputed the selection of the bald eagle as the chosen insignia of the United States. Expressing himself on the subject, he said: "I wish the bald eagle had not been chosen as the representative of our country; he is a bird of bad moral character. The turkey is much more a respectable bird, and withal a true original native of America. Eagles have been found in all countries, but the turkey is peculiar to ours. He is — a bird of courage, and would not hesitate to attack a grenadier of the British guards, who should presume to invade his farmyard domain with a red coat on."

Whatever the origin of the turkey or its name, the bird has made its way into several of our expressions. Nowadays it may be passe, but at one time to "talk turkey" meant a down-to-business discussion. Another old saying was "saying turkey" — a swain paying his lady love a flowery compliment, probably derived from the turkey's courting behavior.

If one was to strut about with an overly-confident swagger, it was referred to as "walking turkey" or "the turkey walk" — because it resembled the bird's manner of strutting about. There was even a dance craze that took the name "turkey trot".

The bundle of personal belongings that lumbermen toted from camp to camp was often called a man's "turkey" and if a lumberjack "histed the turkey", it meant that he had packed up his belongings and left the camp.

Today when a Broadway stage production fails, it's said to have "bombed" or "laid an egg", but may still hear of it being called a "turkey". The latter expression began in the days when amateur acting groups followed the practice of producing special Thanksgiving Day shows, which generally left much to be desired in the way of production talent and acting ability. Actors involved in such ventures were called "turkey actors" because of their exaggerated strutting and histrionics in the name of acting — and the fact that they had their moment of would-be glory on Thanksgiving day. Later the name was shortened to "turkey" — designating any mediocre or failing thespian effort.

Through the years the turkey has become our Thanksgiving Day symbol. While today's version is plump and succulent, the early American turkey was a wild, wiry bird inclined to be tough and sinewy, as it had to fly about a great deal in order to survive. Gradually the U.S. wild turkey population has all but disappeared, though still known in a few states. In Mexico and parts of Central America the wild bird is still quite plentiful; however it is a year-round favorite as these countries do not celebrate Thanksgiving Day. But wherever the wild turkey is still to be found — it still has the reputation of being wily and of running at formidable speeds.

Could be that the wild gobblers have been given the word by their domesticated relatives — to keep on the run!

A taxpayer, according to the Sisseton (S.D.) Courier, is a person who does not have to pass an exam in order to work for the government.

One advantage of a rapidly changing world, says the Buffalo (S.D.) Times Herald, is that you may be wrong one day but right the next day without ever changing your opinion.

The Manning (Iowa) Monitor tells about the nine-year-old girl who was taken to the fancy restaurant by her parents. They were surprised when she ordered a hamburger and her mother said, "But don't you want to try something different, something unusual?"

"I am," whispered the youngster. "I've never had a $3 hamburger before."

The following is from The Jamestown (N.D.) Sun:

The preacher was outlining the service to the organist, and he said, "When I get through with my sermon, I'll ask those who want to contribute toward the mortgage to stand up. At this time you play the appropriate music."

"What do you mean, 'appropriate music'?"

asked the organist.

"Why, the 'Star Spangled Banner', of course," replied the preacher.

"Kissing and telling isn't so bad," says The Review of Plymouth, Wis., "so long as you don't kiss and exaggerate."

The Holt County Independent of O'Neill, Neb., tells about the secretary who, in taking up a collection, said to a clerk, "What do you mean, you gave at the office? This IS the office."

The Houston (Mo.) Herald wonders, "If there is a woman behind every successful man, what about the failures?"

The Chamberlain (S.D.) Register offers the following:

A girl who strings a man along,
And says she can't decide,
Is trying to determine if
The man's fit to be tied.

"Know-who is a poor substitute for Know-how," claims the Savanna (Ill.) Times-Journal. Which may be true unless you need an appendectomy.

The Dwight (Ill.) Star and Herald reports that more than six million automobiles driven in the United States are at least 12 years old. And some of them aren't paid for yet.

"The most expensive thing in the world can be a girl who is free for the evening," says the Crookston (Minn.) Daily Times.

From the Algona (Iowa) Upper Des Moines: "I'm Mr. Haynes' wife," said a visitor to the office.

"I'm Mr. Haynes' secretary," said the gorgeous young typist.

"Oh, were you?" said Mrs. Haynes.

The West Bend (Wis.) News tells about the thin man who met a fat man in the hotel corridor.

"From the way you look," said the fat man, "there must be a famine."

"Yes," said the thin man, "and from the way you look, you might have caused it."

The Sun of Jamestown (N.D.) reports that it is a law of economics that when you finally manage to get a merit raise, inflation hits before you can get to the bank.

"A politician," says The Janesville (Minn.) Argus, "is someone who never met a tax he didn't hike."

Success is when you have your name in everything except the telephone book, says The Democrat-Tribune of Mineral Point, Wis.

Another "musical" note comes from The Eclipse-News-Review of Parkersburg, Iowa, which tells of a sales manager who tested new job applicants by sending them out to try to rent an apartment while carrying a trombone.

Famous Scandinavian Design Scissors

The Scissors that are molded to your hand

- Cushion plastic handles with contour finger grip gives you more comfort and cutting freedom than you've ever experienced before.

- Stainless steel blades

- Cut paper in . . . patterns . . . fabrics with incredible ease.

Some time ago those inventive Scandinavians introduced an entirely new concept in scissors. It was a scissors with a special cushioned handle anatomically designed to fit your hand. The comfort was incredible. You could cut through the most intricate curve, cut all kinds of materials, cut free hand into all kinds of designs or slip the scissors along the table for an even straight line cut. People who were used to the old fashioned kind of scissors couldn't imagine a pair of scissors working so efficiently and so effortlessly as this new design. Seamstresses and anyone who needed them knew they had discovered a secret. But originally these scissors cost much, much more. In fact, even today you can find this design selling for $8.00 or more in fine stores. But now we've created this same design at a fantastically low price. "Shear Joy"! It's got the familiar orange, cushion soft, plastic handle, the stainless steel blades, weighs only 3 ounces, and they're 8 1/4" long. If you thought there was nothing glamorous about a pair of scissors then wait until you've tried these. At this new low price you can't afford to be without them. Order now. If they are not shear joy, simply return for full money back.
