East Tawas Council Hears Proposal on New I-75 Sign

A proposal to share in the cost of rental of an advertising sign on I-75 was taken under advisement Thursday night by the East Tawas Council.

Roger McIntosh, president of Tawas Chamber of Commerce, said that the chamber of commerce had received support from Wurtsmith Air Force Base for paying one-third of the $270 monthly cost and he was now contacting Oscoda and city councils of the Tawas to pay the remainder.

McIntosh said that Tawas Area Promotions, Incorporated, had agreed to pay a portion of the cost being allotted to the Tawas area.

The proposed 14 by 48-foot illuminated sign is located south of the US-23 exit. The sign would designate US-23 as the route to reach the Tawas, Oscoda and Wurtsmith Air Force Base. Special events during the year would be included on the sign.

In other business, W. D. Nunn, executive director of the chamber of commerce, said that work had been completed on preparing the application for federal Economic Development Act funds to help finance water expansion in the Tawas and Baldwin Township. He reported that word had been received that the Upper Great Lakes Development Commission would announce its supplemental grant for this project as soon as final approval is received from EDA.

Approval of construction plans for the project has been received from the Michigan Department of Health.

William Look Jr., fire chief, appeared before the council and requested approximately $300 for the volunteer fire department's annual banquet later this month.

Clerk Clyde Soper reported that only 100 of the 1,735 registered voters participated in the annual spring election on April 7.

East Tawas' share of the proposed new ambulance for Tawas Hospital Ambulance Service is $837. Total cost of the new unit, which would replace the one presently stationed at Hale, is $13,009. With a trade-in of $2,200 on the old unit and $6,800 in the depreciation account, $4,900 would be shared by the participating governmental units. It was reported that the county board of commissioners is being requested to take over operation of the ambulance service.

Paul Ropert, superintendent of public works, reported that Spicer

Engineering Company of Saginaw is to begin its field work on updating sewer plans for the Tawas Lake area.

RETIRING FRIDAY after serving 14 years as manager of the Michigan Department of State's branch office in Tawas City was Roy Bergeron, 65. Bergeron said that vehicle registrations had more than doubled during the past 14 years and his office had handled approximately seven-million dollars worth of business during those years. The office has been averaging approximately 10,000 automobile registrations a year for the past seven or eight years, in addition to about 3,000 snowmobile registrations. All registrations will now be handled out of the secretary of state's office at East Tawas, which was established last year. Bergeron said that he and his wife had purchased a home on Harris Avenue two years ago and he had "plenty of odd jobs around the house" to keep him busy.—Tawas Herald Photo.

Hale School to Host 4-H Club Spring Achievement Program

Catalog Lists Best Fishing Waters

Stanley Lievense, fish biologist and natural resource specialist for the Michigan Tourist Council, has completed a catalog of "Michigan's Better Summertime Fishing Waters." The comprehensive report lists species of fish, bodies of water in which they can be found and counties in which the lakes and/or rivers and streams are located. Fishermen can obtain a copy of the Summertime Fishing Catalog by writing the Michigan Tourist Council, 300 South Capitol Avenue Lansing, Michigan 48913.

"Sooner or later, every red-blooded, fly-tying, lure-casting, worm-digging, cane pole fisherman is almost certain to feel the itch to try his luck in Michigan's fresh, clean waters," according to Lievense. "We have got an abundance of 'lunkers' as well as tasty panfish and respectable size trout, salmon, pike and other favorite species just waiting for the bait. This report will tell the angler where to cast his line," he added.

How to Prevent Probate Problems

By Bernard E. Nash

Thinking about our own death is not a particularly pleasant pastime, but it can be a profitable one if we think in terms of preparing for that eventuality by drawing up a will to protect the loved ones we leave behind. Sometimes, however, a will is not enough, and even the most carefully conceived arrangements can be upset by unexpected complications.

For instance, a husband and wife drew up their wills in the town where they had lived most of their life together, and then moved to a retirement community in a different state. When the man died, his widow was shocked to discover that his will was no longer totally valid in the new location.

Another couple owned a vacation cottage a few hundred miles from their home. When the wife died, the husband learned that—because the cottage was located in a different state—her will would have to be settled in both their home state and the one in which the property being willed (her share of the cottage) was located.

The villain in both of these cases of good intentions gone wrong—and one of the leading causes of financial heartbreak to the bereaved—is the hopelessly outmoded probate process. Originally designed to help in situations such as these, most probate laws have now become so out-of-touch with contemporary reality that they represent little more than an obstacle that must be overcome before an estate can be settled.

Sadly, it is almost always modest inheritances that get caught in this spider web, and that are usually even smaller by the time they escape from the probate trap with its fees and filing costs.

Face it—people leaving large estates usually have high-priced lawyers to guide them and their heirs around the hurdles, while people with small estates don't. Thus, it is people of modest means, inheriting comparatively small estates, who—because they can least afford the delay and expenses of a prolonged settlement—suffer most from probate problems.

It wasn't always this way. Once, probate provided protection for people's estates, and it can perform that function again. In 1969, the American Bar Association and the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws drafted the Uniform Probate Code, a model law which states can adopt totally or partially to simplify and coordinate the probate process.

Since then, ten states—Idaho (the first in 1971), Alaska, North Dakota, Arizona, Wisconsin, Colorado, South Dakota, Montana, Minnesota and Nebraska—have adopted the UPC, frequently over the vociferous objections of those individuals and organizations having vested interests in the old process.

When probate first came into being, its function was to determine a will's validity, and to protect the estate until it could be distributed according to the deceased's wishes. Back then, estates normally consisted of land, and all of the concerned parties and property were usually located nearby so it was entirely reasonable that each state evolved its own set of probate laws.

Today, estates are often composed of paper assets, such as securities and insurance benefits, etc. And people are more mobled now—living in many places in the course of a lifetime, and having assets in more than one place. Clearly, the old laws are no longer suitable, and haven't been for many years.

Thus, the Uniform Probate Code eliminates the need for a lengthy and complicated settlement process when the will is not contested, thereby reducing legal fees and court costs. The code clarifies the status of "will substitutes," such as jointly held property and bank accounts, and establishes a reasonable distribution of assets (mostly to the surviving spouse) when there is no will.

Endorsed by Chief Justice Warren Burger of the U.S. Supreme Court, and by the AFL-CIO and numerous consumer organizations (including AARP-NRTA), the Uniform Probate Code is expected to come up for adoption this year in New Jersey, New Mexico, Hawaii, Utah and Wyoming, and is also being considered by legislators in Kansas, Maine, Missouri, New Hampshire, and Tennessee.

The Uniform Probate Code is clearly an idea whose time has come, but there is still determined opposition from the aforementioned vested interests, so there may still be a long struggle before our nation's probate codes are truly uniform. In the meantime, if you are concerned about who is to receive your assets after you're gone, don't just think about a will—make one now, and then consider changing it if you should move at some later date. Wills are not just for rich people, but for anyone who cares.

(Mr. Nash is the executive director of the non-profit, non-partisan National Retired Teachers Association and American Association of Retired Persons.)
