

Drunk Drivers Go to Jail

Sheriff George Westcott warned motorists this week that drunk drivers go to jail.

"The New Year holiday is a dangerous season for drivers—some will drink a little too much and then attempt to drive home. Some will get careless behind the wheel and the result is often injury or death to innocent persons who cannot avoid the drunk driver," said Westcott.

The sheriff said that his department would have extra patrols on the road New Year's Eve for the protection of everyone. "Alcohol and gasoline is often a fatal mixture and, even if not involved in an accident, the drinking driver runs the risk of an embarrassing situation in jail."

Municipal Finance Commission Approves City's Sewer Bonds

Financing of Tawas City's three special assessment districts for construction of sanitary sewer, under consideration at Lansing since September 1, was approved December 23 by the Municipal Finance Commission.

The commission approved the sale of special assessment bonds totaling $227,000 and general obligation bonds of $60,000, as the city's share of the project, following an appearance by City Mgr. Reginald Bublitz and Ralph Knoppe, representing Edmands Engineering Company, the city's consultant on this project.

Under terms of the city council's resolution adopted July 1, bids on the sale of special assessment and general obligation bonds are to be opened at 7:30 p. m., Monday, January 13.

The appearance by the city manager and engineering consultant at the December 23 hearing of the Municipal Finance Commission was unprecedented in the city's history. Numerous delays on approving the council's July 1 action resulted at Lansing and three property owners in the special assessment districts had appeared before the commission to protest the proposition.

Appearing before the commission the previous week were Ald. Robert N. Rollin, Vernon Eckstein and Andrew Oberla, who protested the cost of construction and the manner of assessments. Final action was delayed a week on approving the sale of bonds until representatives of the city appeared before the commission.

The city manager said he had been advised by the commission that those protesting, while believing the sanitary sewer was a necessity, were of the opinion that the project was too costly, that the project should be financed through sewer revenue or millage, that the cost to property owners should be based on valuation rather than on front footage served and that local forces should perform the work.

"It was a rather unique experience to appear before the Municipal Finance Commission to discuss the matter of engineering and construction, but we repeated the same things which were stated at public hearings held locally and during meetings of the city council for the past year," said Bublitz. "Following our testimony, the Municipal Finance Commission met in private to make its decision, of which we were notified by telephone later in the day."

The city manager said he pointed out to the commission that the city council had advertised locally as well as in the Michigan Contractor for bids on this project. While bids were received from six contractors around the state, there were no local bids received.

Bublitz told the commission that the front foot cost to property owners in the special assessment districts would be $19, of which $13 per foot would be for the actual sewer construction and $6 for construction of leads from the main to the property line.

"As far as the request for a different method of financing was concerned, we pointed out to the commission that the depth of the sewer was not made to accommodate any particular property owner, but that the depth was necessary for the sewer main to serve the area on the outer end of the sewer main," said Bublitz. "We have stated the same thing at hearings and meetings of the council, but the commission apparently was confused over this matter."

Bublitz said that the average cost of the sewer to property owners was $1,600, with a low of $1,187 for one residential lot and one motel owner has an assessment of $7,400 based on frontage served. One owner of 10 lots has an assessment of $9,500. After reviewing the assessments, Bublitz said the commission was of the opinion that the cost to property owners was not excessive based on current construction costs.

"Because of the current national economic situation, I can agree that there will be difficulty for some property owners to pay assessments," said Bublitz. He said, however, that assessments could be spread over a period of 15 years to lessen the burden and the interest rate to be charged would depend on the interest rate received on the bond sale.

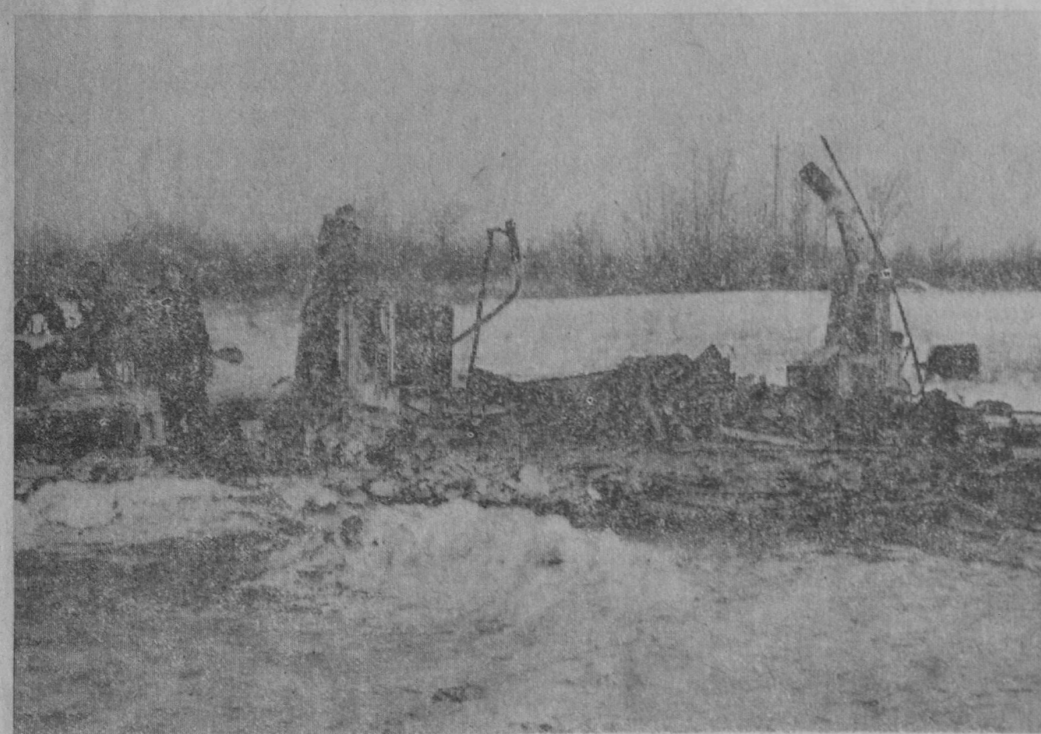

"The city council deemed that sanitary sewer to serve the three special assessment districts was a public necessity, inasmuch as these are the last three major areas of the community without sanitary sewer," said the city manager. "The project has received the approval and endorsement, by letter, from the district health department and any further delay could have an adverse effect on future home and commercial construction, as well as correcting any possible health hazards caused by septic tanks used in those areas at the present time."

Because of the delay in receiving approval of the Municipal Finance Commission, the city council asked for and received a 45-day extension on its bid for construction of sewer mains from T. A. Forsberg, low bidder on the project. The bid had been accepted by the council on October 7.

Following several months of preparation, the first of several public hearings called for establishment of the three special assessment districts was held on November 19, 1973. Following adjustment of the sewer route according to information received at the hearings, a tax roll was adopted and a plan to equalize costs to property owners at $19 per foot was adopted by the council.

The sanitary sewer projects now approved for financing would serve the River-Spring Street area, the northwesterly side of US-23 south from Hale Street to Elms Avenue and the Margo Street area.

PLAINFIELD TOWNSHIP Fire Department answered two calls on Sunday, December 22. Fire gutted the frame home above owned by Mrs. Gerald Webb on Long Lake Road about 4:30 a. m. The home was not occupied at the time. The bottom picture shows all that remains of a snowmobile repair shop owned by Richard Eno on County Line Road south of Long Lake. A passing motorist turned in the alarm at 9:30 p. m. The building and contents were a complete loss.—Tawas Herald Photos.

Three Snowmobile Thefts Solved by Alert Officers

Alert police work by two members of the Iosco Sheriff's Department resulted in the arrest of two teen-agers and a juvenile, who were charged with three breakings and enterings, three larcenies, plus receiving and concealing stolen property.

Arrested were Terry L. Good, 18, Long Lake, and Randy A. Beebe, 17, Rochester. The juvenile was released to probate court authorities and turned over to his parents.

While on patrol during the early morning hours of Sunday, December 22, at Hale, Derryck Goodrow and Wayne Fairfield of the sheriff's department saw a pickup truck loaded with two snowmachines traveling on a side street at Hale. The officers stopped the truck and ran a registration check on the two snowmachines. During the investigation, a complaint was received by radio that a snowmachine had been stolen at the Keystone Lounge in Burleigh Township.

The registration check revealed that the snowmachine on the truck was the same one which had been stolen in Burleigh Township. Under questioning by officers, Beebe admitted stealing the second machine at Clare the previous day.

Further investigation revealed that the trio had stolen a quantity of snowmachine clothing on December 21 at Richard Eno's snowmachine shop at Long Lake. Entry into the building was made by forcing open a rear door. The property was recovered at a cabin at Long Lake owned by Beebe's parents.

Later that morning, fire destroyed Eno's shop on County Line Road. However, officers said that the youths were in custody at the county jail at the time of the fire.

The youths were also charged with stealing a third snowmachine Saturday from the Long Lake Bar, as well as breakings and enterings of cabins owned by Daniel Gordon and J. Egresias at Long Lake. A rifle and a shotgun were stolen from the Gordon cabin and a tool box was taken from the second cabin. All of the items were recovered.

Iosco County's general fund budget is expected to end the year in the black, according to a report last week by County Treas. Edward Nelkie.

"Barring any unforeseen expenditures by the county board of commissioners, the year-end report should show a balanced budget," said Nelkie.

This excellent financial picture was shown despite the fact that real estate sales have tapered off in this county during the past year.

Leon Putnam, county register of deeds, said last week that revenue from his office would be down approximately $8,000 from the previous year.

During the first 11 months of 1974, revenue collected by that office for recording fees, microfilming and certifications totaled $35,806.40. For the 12-month period of 1973, total revenue from the office amounted to $47,425.95.

Both the county treasurer and register of deeds pointed out, however, that the tremendous activity at the Lakewood Shores development north of Oscoda may have been so high in previous years that the receipts from the register of deeds office were distorted.

Property transactions at Lakewood Shores fell off considerably during the past year. Putnam said that revenue from his office amounted to $4,601.70 during August, which was about $300 higher than the same month of 1973. The August total was highest for the year and the total receipts in July of 1973 was $6,700.

The county treasurer pointed out another problem for Lakewood Shores property owners and possibly Oscoda Township. Nelkie said that many property owners in that development were delinquent in paying taxes and there is an obligation of $225,290 to be met in special assessment taxes on bonds sold for a water project.

Nelkie said that the tax income was already one year behind in meeting this bonding obligation and a serious situation could develop if 1974 taxes are not paid.

Although the full faith and credit of the county was utilized to guarantee the bonds, Nelkie said that it was the responsibility of the township to meet the bonding obligation. Recent legislation provides that, should the taxes not be paid, the immediate obligation could be met by the state's withholding sales tax and state income tax returns to the township.

Nelkie said that several hundred property owners at Lakewood Shores had not paid 1972 taxes and his office had been receiving numerous inquiries from banking institutions concerning the current status of taxes.

The treasurer felt the delinquent tax rate in the remainder of the county was not too alarming.

Iosco Real Estate Transfer Tax Down, but County Budget OK

Schaaf Retires from WAFB Job

Carl Schaaf of Tawas City, who retired December 31 after 17 years as a maintenance man in the central heating plant at Wurtsmith Air Force Base, Oscoda, said last week that he had made no retirement plans for the first five months of 1975.

When Tawas Area School closes its term next June, his wife, Lulu, a veteran elementary teacher at the Tawas City Unit, will retire.

"When my wife retires, we will hitch our trailer up to the car and will be heading for a vacation in Western Canada," said Schaaf.

During his long civil service career at Wurtsmith, Schaaf has always worked at the base's central heating plant. This plant, which utilizes 9,000 gallons of fuel daily to operate high temperature hot water generators, heats everything on the base with the exception of housing.

Much of Schaaf's working career has been spent in the heating field. He spent 19 years on ships plying the Great Lakes before coming to Tawas City. "I just got tired of being away from my family for nine months of the year during the shipping season," said Schaaf.

Starting as a coal passer for the Interlake Steamship Company out of Cleveland, Ohio, Schaaf worked his way up the promotional ladder to first assistant engineer—lacking only one more step before reaching the top in that field. Schaaf said he served on 14 or 15 different ships during those years.

Schaaf's career on the Great Lakes was a natural one, for his father, the late William Schaaf of Tawas City, was an employee of the same steamship company and retired here after many years of service on the lakes.

After returning to the life of a landsman, Schaaf worked several years for Barkman Outfitting Company and a local plumbing firm before starting to work at Wurtsmith Air Force Base.

Schaaf has taken an active part in civic affairs of his community, having served on the Tawas City Water Board for many years prior to retirement two years ago. He has taken an active role in his church, first as a member of the board of Tawas City Methodist Church and later the Tawas United Methodist Church.

He has been an avid fan of Tawas Area Braves' football and basketball teams and his hobby is vegetable gardening.

In recent years, the Schaafs have been interested in traveling and last year visited Greece. They have been active participants in Wally Byam Caravans and expect to devote much of their time now to traveling with friends associated with that group.

The Schaafs have two daughters, Mrs. Ivan (Barbara) Miles, who resides in New Washington, Indiana, with her husband and two children, and Mrs. Frank (Jean) Derbyshire. Major and Mrs. Derbyshire and three children are stationed at Little Rock Air Force Base, Arkansas.

Air Force May Cut Civilian Job Rolls at Wurtsmith Air Base

Expressing his "deep concern" over the contracting out of jobs at the three air force bases in Northern Michigan, Cong. Philip E. Ruppe, 11th District, told secretary of the air force, John L. McLucas, that "this is no time to be eliminating jobs."

Postmaster Job Awaits Filling

Filling the postmaster vacancy at East Tawas is expected sometime in January. The position has been opened to all qualified personnel in the Grand Rapids District, which includes this area.

Howard Durant, veteran postmaster at East Tawas, retired on November 8. Applications to fill the position were taken by the postal service until November 29.

Ruppe acted when he learned that cost-benefit surveys were under way at Wurtsmith Air Force Base near Oscoda, Kincheloe Air Force Base near Sault Ste. Marie and K. I. Sawyer Air Force Base outside Marquette. While the surveys are not yet complete, civilian employees at the three bases fear the reports will recommend termination of their jobs.

Since the surveys are ongoing projects, information on the nature and number of jobs affected by any recommendations is unavailable.

In writing McLucas, Ruppe said that another factor to consider besides the unemployment rate is the type of people who could potentially be laid off.

"In view of the president's recent statements that administration policy would be to give preference to former servicemen," Ruppe wrote, "I question the air force's proposed action to eliminate many positions presently filled by veterans."

"In view of Northern Michigan's unemployment situation, I strongly urge the Department of the Air Force to retain its in-service support personnel at K. I. Sawyer Air Force Base, Kincheloe Air Force Base and Wurtsmith Air Force Base," Ruppe concluded.

Contract Discussion Resumed Monday

A special meeting of the Iosco County Board of Commissioners was to have been held Monday to ratify a new contract with county building secretarial employees represented by the United Steel Workers of America.

Wages and fringe benefits contained in the contract were ratified by the employees and the county board of commissioners in October. Supervisory personnel, elected officers and custodians are not included in the agreement and employees of the sheriff's department are covered under a separate contract.

According to terms of the agreement, employees are not required to be members of the union to be represented in the contract negotiations.

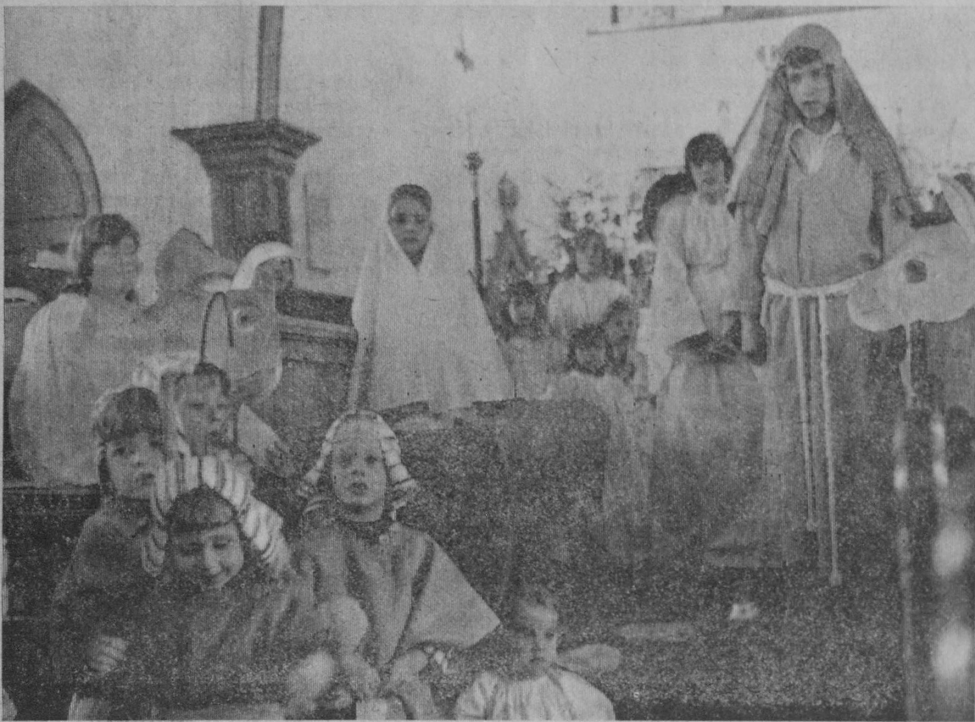

While length of service is a consideration in the pay scale, a new job classification index for secretarial help is the major determining factor in the wage scale. The classification schedule was developed by department heads and the union's negotiating committee. The new classification system is to be studied during 1975 by the state civil service commission for possible recommendations.

A major point to have been discussed Monday before final action was taken on the contract was the wage sharing arrangement in the probate judge's office, where the secretary serves both as a county employee and as a secretary to the probate judge in his private law practice.

The bride is the daughter of Sally Klump of Bellevue and Harold Klump of East Tawas. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jordan of Tawas City.

Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride chose a full-length gown with A-line skirt of sheer nylon chiffon over taffeta and full-length chapel train. Her lace bodice was accented in sequins and seed pearls as were her Victorian sleeves. A high crowned lace headpiece secured the sheer nylon, triple-tiered veil. Her cascade bouquet was made up of red roses and white carnations.

Vickie Phelps acted as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Tammy Klump and Kim Jordan. All were identically-attired in red velvet gowns with long, A-line skirts with flounces at the hemlines. Their gowns featured V-necklines, Empire waistlines with ties at the back and long bouffant sleeves. Each carried one long-stemmed white rose.

David Brinkman served as best man with David Sergent and Jeff Hemphill, groomsmen.

The reception following the ceremony at the church hall was attended by approximately 150 guests from Birmingham, Fenton, Kalamazoo, Portage, Nebraska, California and Ohio.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Klump chose a brown full-length gown accented with gold trim. Mrs. Jordan selected a full-length beige gown. Both wore corsages of white orchids.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Jordan are both graduates of Tawas Area High School and will reside in Kalamazoo, where both plan to attend Western Michigan University.

Answer Questions on Social Security

Question: My 23-year-old sister was severely injured in an accident a few weeks ago, but I know she cannot get social security disability payments because she has never worked. Can she get supplemental security income payments?

Answer: Possibly. Severely disabled people who are not expected to be able to work for a year or more may be eligible for supplemental security income payments if they have little or no income and limited resources. Your sister can call or write any social security office for information about applying for supplemental security income payments.

Question: When I went back to work on September 1, I hired a babysitter for my young children at home. I pay her $25 a week. Do I have to report her wages for social security purposes?

Answer: Yes, because you are paying her $50 or more in a three-month calendar quarter. Send a report of her wages, along with the social security contribution, to the Internal Revenue Service. Wage reports and contributions for each quarter are due by the end of the month following the quarter. For more information, call or write any social security office.

Question: My uncle was in the army in World War II, but since then has worked in low-paying jobs. He was recently fired from a night-watchman job and has just turned 65. Can he get supplemental security income payments?

Answer: Your uncle should call or write any social security office for information about applying for supplemental security income payments. He may also be eligible for social security retirement checks or a veteran's pension and he can also get help in applying for them at the social security office.

Question: I am 69 and want to apply for supplemental security income payments. What papers will I need when I go to the social security office to apply?

Answer: You will need proof of your age; something that shows what income, if any, you have; records of bonds and savings accounts; a tax assessment notice or other document showing the value of any property you own, and any life insurance policies you may have. If you still have questions about what to bring with you, call the social security office first.

Individuals with questions regarding social security may contact the Bay City social security office at 1009 North Madison or phone 892-3554.

Homestead Property - Sales Tax Credit Forms Available

Robin Allain, Iosco County tax equalization director, reminded residents last week that homestead property and sales tax credit forms and instructions are available from his office, the county treasurer's office and township or city offices.

"Many persons eligible for property and sales tax credit failed to submit forms last year to the state. The state extended the deadline during the past year because of the lack of response, but the current deadline on the new forms indicates that claims must be filed by June 30, 1975," said Allain.

Each senior citizen, veteran, blind or permanently disabled claimant must meet certain qualifications to be eligible for property tax relief. The qualifications are listed in the instructions dealing with the various types of property tax relief allowed. To file for 1974, the claimant must have been a resident of Michigan for at least six months of 1974.

For the first time, claimants are allowed a credit for sales tax paid on food and prescription drugs if the household income is less than $15,000. A claimant for a sales tax credit must be a husband and wife or a single person who is not dependent on another person.

Maximum credit allowed on homestead property tax is $500. The term homestead means the claimant's dwelling, whether owned or rented, and includes a mobile home or a lot in a trailer park. The claimant may have only one homestead at any given time and it must be occupied as well as owned or rented. Permanent occupants of nursing homes may consider $125 per month or 30 percent of the monthly nursing home charges as rent paid for a homestead in the computation of the credit.

Property taxes to be claimed for credit are those taxes based on the state equalized value of the home. The taxes must have been levied after December 31, 1973. Collection fees may be included, but no special assessment, penalties or interest.

Personnel at senior citizen centers around the county assisted persons in filling out the prescribed forms last year and the same service is to be provided during the New Year.

"Although we do not have the staffing to assist in filling out the forms, our office will refer persons desiring assistance to the proper agencies," said Allain.

THE YOUNG TROUPE, a talented family of spring board artists, will be appearing in the 31st annual Shrine Circus of Elf Khurafah Temple, January 10-13 at the Saginaw Civic Center. The 2 1/2-hour show will feature three rings of aerial, highwire and animal acts. The Young Troupe, pictured above, escaped from Hungary during the revolution of 1956. The youngest member of the troupe was then just four years old. Since arriving in America, they have toured the United States and Canada and have met with great success.

UPC Bars and Numbers on Grocery Items Soon to Become as Common as Price Tags

That little system of bars and numbers beginning to appear on the back or bottom of many supermarket products will soon be as common as price tags and trademarks. It is the Universal Product

Code or UPC. Still unfamiliar to most shoppers, the UPC symbol will appear on most grocery packages within a year. It is just what the name implies:

A universal coding system giving the product name and its manufacturer in "computerese." Along with a computerized cash register system, the UPC could revolutionize the grocery business from manufacturer to consumer, says Dr. John Allen, Michigan State University marketing specialist. To the consumer, the system will mean faster lines in the supermarket, fewer mistakes (virtually 100 percent check-out accuracy), less chance of products being out of stock and even a quieter store. The manufacturer will get feedback from the system telling him which stores are selling certain products, where his profit margin is greater or where it is not so great.

But the major advantages will be to the retailer. It is hoped that the system will replace individual price marking of each product in the supermarket, thereby saving great store labor costs. There will be a tighter control of inventory and generally greater efficiency from buying goods to bagging groceries.

These kinds of changes can mean a great deal to today's huge supermarkets, Doctor Allen believes.

"The benefits of the system, in terms of productivity, efficiency and merchandising data, are so important that most supermarket companies will require it to remain competitive."

Since the entire system has been under development only since 1970, it may seem that Doctor Allen is looking into the future. But if the development that has taken place in just five years continues, the electronic store system should be in widespread operation by the end of the 70s.

The electronic store system consists of a computerized cash register, a scanner to read the product code, the checkstand, label-makers and coin and stamp dispensers. The entire system for an eight-checkout-lane supermarket may sell for about $150,000. At this stage, many new supermarkets are installing just the electric cash register, but will complete installation when the scanner is practical.

To make the scanner practical, the UPC must be displayed on 75 to 80 percent of all goods sent from the manufacturer. Today, it is on 50 to 60 percent, but it is expected to reach 80 percent during 1975.

Another problem for supermarket operations is that up to 30 percent of goods sold are those packaged in the store, such as meat and produce. For scanner use, all of these goods also must be marked with a UPC, which means added cost.

The scanner works as a translator: In one system, for example, there is an X-shaped window on the checkstand. The groceries pass over the window, UPC downward. The scanner reads the label, looks up the appropriate price programmed into the computer and registers the price on the cash register display. The receipt includes the product name and price paid.

It is certain that the electronic store system has the potential to increase supermarket efficiency significantly. It also offers 100 percent accuracy, an advantage to both the store and the consumer.

One possible stumbling block is that the industry has not fully informed the consumer of the advent of this system, Doctor Allen points out.

"It is a whole new business and the consumer is going to be surprised by the changes."

Doctor Allen does not see the changes as any real problem; it is just that people are generally more receptive to something new if they understand the reason for it.

Already, there has been some objection by consumers to UPC pricing rather than a number price on each product. With UPC pricing, the only price the shopper sees is the permanent shelf price.

"The advantage is the tremendous increase in efficiency in the supermarket," said Doctor Allen. "Besides, why does the shopper need to know the price between the shelf and the checkstand? Most price comparison is done where the produce is shelved."

In stores that have already moved to UPC pricing, there has been no significant consumer objection.

Doctor Allen sees the consumer as the real benefactor.

The retailer will be able to identify for the first time the marketing segments that exist "out there," he said. He will know what products are selling faster in his own store and can tailor his approach to his customers' wants.

But today's changes may be just the beginning. The technology and competition exist for just about anything to happen in food marketing, from cashless shopping to telephone and delivery supermarkets. And UPC may be the code word to bring them about.

TODAY'S Meditation

from The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide

(Read Revelation 21:1-6)

Behold, I make all things new. (Revelation 21:5)

Someone asked Henry Wadsworth Longfellow why apple trees seem to have more beautiful blossoms each spring than they had the year before. Longfellow is reported to have said: "The apple tree grows a little new wood each year. Therefore, its blossoms are more beautiful with the coming of each springtime."

The beginning of the New Year is a good time to take stock and to resolve to grow some new wood spiritually. We do this by Bible study, prayer and corporate worship. We do it through rededication of our time, talents and resources to the enrichment of God's kingdom.

Mark's Gospel reminds us that Jesus went out to a solitary place early in the mornings just to be alone with God. Thus, His own faith was renewed and His sense of direction made clear.

The continuing sense of divine direction we need comes as we take time for the leading of the Holy Spirit. It means waiting upon the Lord. It means being open to God's revelation through Jesus Christ.

PRAYER

Our Father, strengthen us by Your presence that we may face the New Year with faith and courage. Amen.

DON'T DRINK AND DRIVE!
Alcohol and gasoline is a fatal mixture, so if you drink, don't drive. Keep especially alert during the holidays. Don't become one of his victims.

The New Year holiday is a dangerous season . . . People are busy and their minds are preoccupied with many thoughts about many things . . . Some sweet, others bitter. There's financial problems, office and house parties. It all adds up to pressure.

So, somebody will drink a little too much at a party and drive home. Someone else will run a stop sign because his attention was on his problems rather than on the road. And everybody gets careless . . . People are injured or die due to pressures of the New Year.

So this year take it easy! Relax and enjoy yourself, but keep extra alert and practice sensible safety rules at home, work and on the road. And look out for those who don't! Don't you become a part of the picture above!

Remember . . . Don't drink and drive! We will have extra road patrols out New Year's Eve for everyone's protection.

Here's wishing you the Season's Best . . . Don't start the New Year off in a hospital . . . or jail!
