Iosco Has New 4-H Program Assistant

Carol Savino is the new 4-H youth program assistant for Iosco County, according to a joint announcement last week by Michigan State University, the Iosco County Board of Commissioners and the Iosco County Cooperative Extension Service.

A graduate of Adrian College with a bachelor of art degree, she has been a resident here for almost a year and has been active in local community affairs, working quite extensively with young people of the community.

In addition, she was director of Tawas Little Theatre's recent presentation, "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown."

She will be working with 4-H youth and leaders of Iosco County through the director of extension and the 4-H Leaders' Council.

All Incumbents Returned to Office Monday

In a light turnout of voters, East Tawas returned all of its incumbent city officers to one or two-year terms. City Clerk Clyde Soper said that about 275 persons voted, representing about 15 percent of the total registration list.

The election had two contests on the ballot. Gerald Klenow was returned to his seat as First Ward alderman, receiving 44 votes to 38 votes given to Mrs. Donald Miner.

Ralph Western was returned to another two-year term as Third Ward alderman. He received 84 votes to 43 votes in favor of Timothy J. O'Connor. Robert Johnson received 62 votes and was unopposed for Second Ward alderman.

Mayor Robert Bolen, Clerk Soper and Mrs. Grace Pelton, city treasurer, were unopposed. Bolen received 261 votes, Soper received 259 and Mrs. Pelton was top vote getter with 262 ballots in her favor.

Issue Warrants On TC Burglary

Warrants were issued Monday charging three Tawas area men with breaking and entering and larceny from a building.

Kenneth Williams, Charles Jean and Timothy Rapp are charged with the March 31 burglary of McNeil Enterprise Filter Queen office, 1094 South US-23, Tawas City. When the office was opened at 10:00 a. m. Wednesday, it was found that the front door was unlocked and the rear door was open. Desk drawers had been opened, an adding machine was tipped over on the floor, papers had been taken from a filing cabinet and thrown on the floor.

A cash box and $66 was reportedly stolen from the building. Investigating Iosco County Sheriff's Department officers followed footprints from the rear of the building to Margo Street where a car had been parked.

Investigate B&E at Baptist Church

Michigan State Police from East Tawas investigated a breaking and entering Wednesday at Hemlock Road Baptist Church. The burglary was discovered that morning by the Rev. William Wright, pastor. A public address system amplifier stolen from the building was later recovered along the roadside.

Manager's Recommendation on Clerk Appointment Upheld

On recommendation of City Mgr. Reginald Bublitz, appointment of Mrs. William McCready, wife of the probate judge, as city clerk was approved Monday night by the Tawas City Council.

The city manager has been acting as city clerk since the resignation January 5 by Mrs. Mary Byrd, who has continued in her appointive position of city treasurer.

Her resignation came after two stormy months at council meetings following the November 4 general election and the city manager had actually acted as city clerk since the council meeting following the election.

On the day following the election, Tawas Concerned Taxpayers, along with Mayor-Elect Herbert Cholger and Councilman Robert Rollin, filed a letter with the department of state charging irregularities in the election.

Although the secretary of state's election division has since submitted a letter concerning the need for the city to provide larger quarters to facilitate observance by interested citizens in ballot counting procedures, plus some suggestions on handling future elections, the state's letter did not indicate any fraudulent action on the part of the election board or city clerk.

A recount was held by the county canvassing board immediately following the election, with only a few minor errors found in counting which had no effect on the outcome.

The controversy apparently has not ended as both Cholger and Rollin voiced opposition to the city manager's method of selecting his appointee. Both men expressed the opinion that applicants for the position should have submitted letters stating their qualifications, similar to a letter submitted by the applicant whom they supported.

When Cholger took over as mayor, he submitted a letter from Beverly Doran, a resident of Tawas Township, as a potential appointee for the clerk's position. The letter outlined her experience in a similar job in the downstate area.

During discussion three months ago, a number of councilmen expressed the opinion that the appointee should reside in the city, but the mayor was of the opinion that residency should not be of prime concern. Rollin said Monday night that Mrs. Doran planned to move to Tawas City.

In making his recommendation Monday night, Bublitz said he had interviewed five candidates, including both Mrs. McCready and Mrs. Doran, and he expressed the opinion that Mrs. McCready was well qualified for the position. He told the council that he did not feel it was necessary for Mrs. McCready to submit a letter due to the fact that "she has been a resident of the city for a number of years and people know her qualifications."

Councilman Jerry Cotter pointed out that, under terms of the city charter, the city manager has responsibility for recommending an appointment for the position and it was the council's responsibility either to accept or reject the city manager's recommendation.

He reminded the council that an informal poll had been taken at the January meeting concerning the residency question and the majority of the council felt that the appointee should be a resident of the city.

(When contacted Tuesday by the Herald, Mrs. McCready said she felt that a perfectly valid point had been raised on the question of a letter informing the council of her qualifications. She said she had inquired previously if a letter was desired and said she would submit one if requested.)

(A graduate of Michigan State University with a bachelor degree, she holds a master degree from the University of Michigan, both in the field of elementary education. Besides her work as a teacher, housewife and mother, she has assisted her husband, who is blind, with paperwork in his law practice and during several years of his service as a state Lions Club official.)

("I said I would serve as city clerk particularly since it appeared as though the city was having a difficult time in filling the position and an appeal was made through the newspaper for applicants for various positions on city boards; I am definitely interested in our city government," said Mrs. McCready. "I never have seen a job description for the position, but I believe I can perform the duties.")

Both Cholger and Rollin emphasized they were not questioning Mrs. McCready's qualifications for the position, but only desired to see a letter outlining her background. A number of citizens in attendance expressed opinions on the city manager's recommendation and Jerry Snoblen, who signed the concerned taxpayers' letter to the state following the November 4 election, stated that Mrs. McCready "would not last three months due to pressure of the job."

Councilman William Ezo questioned Snoblen concerning the latter's statement and asked him to state who would be placing pressure on the new city clerk. The councilman received no answer. A motion by Councilman James Lansky, seconded by Councilman Ezo, was adopted by a voice vote of the council. Joining the above two councilmen in support of the city manager's appointment were Councilmen Charles Landon, Cotter and William Groff. Both Rollin and Cholger voted no and qualified their votes for reasons previously stated.

Discussion on a salary to be paid to the new clerk was tabled on motion of Lansky. The city manager felt the salary should be in the neighborhood of $825 a year, due to the fact that a number of responsibilities have been removed from the position since the days when the city operated under the Fourth Class City Act.

Responsibilities of the clerk now include taking minutes at council meetings, handling elections, maintaining the city ordinance book, administering oaths of office to city officials, serves as custodian of the city seal, signs documents according to provisions of the city charter and maintains cemetery records.

At one time, the city clerk, in addition to the above duties, was required to maintain an extensive set of city accounting records and had charge of payrolls.

D&M Takes Over Operation of 182 Miles of 'New' Route

One of the largest land acquisitions in Michigan's history was recorded Thursday when the Detroit and Mackinac Railway formally assumed outright ownership or control of 182 miles of Penn Central System trackage from Bay City to Mackinac City.

The first D&M train to travel to Mackinac City left from Cheboygan Thursday morning. April 1 was the effective date of ownership by the D&M of a 66.7-mile section of the financially troubled Penn Central System between those two points, along with ownership of trackage between Bay City and Linwood.

The day also marked assumption of control of the D&M of 105 miles of Penn Central tracks between Linwood and Gaylord.

This latter section had been scheduled for abandonment April 1, but is to continue to operate under a lease arrangement between Penn Central and the State of Michigan, which has turned over control to the D&M under a state subsidy program.

As a result of the latter program, rail service is to continue into such towns as Standish, Sterling, West Branch, St. Helen, Roscommon, Grayling and Fredric.

It was also announced Thursday that the D&M has decided not to accept a proposal from the Rail Freight and Port Development Section of the State Department of Highways and Transportation to operate the railroad ferry across the Straits of Mackinac. The ferry is now operated by the Mackinac Transportation Company, which is owned by Penn Central and the Soo Line Railroad and provides service to portions of the Upper Peninsula.

Completion of the two transactions, which culminated months of negotiations, was marked by a luncheon Thursday noon held in the railroad's business car spotted for the occasion on tracks near the general offices in Tawas City.

Charles A. Pinkerton Jr., chairman of the railroad's board of directors, was presented a plaque "in commemoration of a major expansion of the area of service" of the Detroit and Mackinac Railway Company.

The plaque presented to the board chairman was inscribed with the words: "Through your leadership, the company, on April 1, 1976, for the first time in its 81-year history, expanded its main line to serve Mackinac City."

The presentation was made to the board chairman by his son, Charles A. Pinkerton III, who has been associated with operation of the railroad since last fall. Among guests in attendance at the luncheon was Albert L. Riedel of Saginaw, retired president of the Michigan Bean Company, along with personal friends of the board chairman from the Tawas and railroad officials.

The two transactions followed last minute negotiations Wednesday at Washington, D. C., between D&M representatives and federal officials. Handling much of the negotiations has been Glen Highfield, secretary-treasurer of the D&M.

As the result of the acquisition, through which the locally based railroad made an outright purchase of Penn Central trackage, the D&M finally has reached the northern terminus for which it received its corporate name in December 1894.

Over the years and particularly since the end of World War II, when the present board chairman assumed managerial control, the D&M has operated a successful transportation system between Bay City and Cheboygan. It has long been considered one of the most successful short line railroads in the country.

One of the principal communities incorporated in the D&M's expanded service area is Gaylord, which connects to the east with Cheboygan under the trackage purchased and to the south under the state program.

Gaylord now joins Cheboygan, Alpena and other points south as principal originators of industrial traffic for the railroad.

Mayor Proclaims May for Cleanup

By proclamation of Mayor Herbert Cholger, May has been declared cleanup, fixup, paintup month in Tawas City.

With many visitors expected during the coming summer, along with former residents who will be returning for bicentennial year activities, the mayor and city council urge all residents to cooperate and participate in this undertaking to beautify the city.

The action by the city government came on recommendation of Tawas Area Winter and Summer (TAWAS), the recently organized division of Tawas Chamber of Commerce.

A representative of that organization asked permission to plant flowers along the guard rail at the M-55-US-23 intersection and around signs at the city park. It was stated the group had requested permission from the Detroit and Mackinac Railway to beautify property on the north side of the Tawas River at the former location of Fuelgas Company, Incorporated.

Also on hand at Monday night's meeting were two representatives of the girl scouts, who asked that Saturday, May 1, be declared as Tawas Area Girl Scout's Bicentennial Cleanup Day. The girl scouts are to clean along the banks of Dead Creek and the Tawas River. The city is to furnish trucks to haul away refuse.

The seven-day period from May 1 through May 8 has been declared as the official cleanup week in the city. All organizations and residents are invited to participate in the program.

The city is to hold two regular cleanup days this year, starting with Thursday, April 29. This will be the regular cleanup day as in the past when the city trucks and crew will pick up all refuse and debris which home owners pile at the curb side. A second cleanup day is to be held Thursday, May 6. "This is an official appeal to the people to take pride in their community by participating in this month long campaign," said Mayor Cholger.

Western Iosco Residents Count Blessings

Damage in County Was Low

Numerous summer cottage owners from the downstate area were in Plainfield Township Saturday to inspect property there for possible damage during the March 30 tornado which struck along the county line between Iosco and Ogemaw.

William Wereley of Hale, county commissioner, reported Monday that damage to property in Iosco County is estimated at less than $25,000, although this total did not include damage to trees.

Wereley and Harold Schmedtke, county civilian defense director, made an on site inspection to determine the exact number of dwellings and buildings actually damaged by the twister.

The two men found that the principal storm damage in this county was at Long Lake, where three houses were struck by falling trees, a boat house was demolished, the roof of a log cabin storage building was blown off and two small sheds were damaged east of Long Lake.

Wereley said that other storm damage may be reported after inspections are made by owners of summer cottages.

"We were extremely fortunate to escape that storm with only minor damage," said Wereley. The county escaped the storm without a personal injury.

person killed, 17 persons injured and 28 families left without shelter. A survey in that county has estimated that 45 homes were either destroyed or damaged.

Stylus Lake Road southwest of Hale in Ogemaw County where Mrs. Patricia VanTuyl was killed by a twister which struck her home, was turned into a muddy quagmire over the week-end by the large number of vehicles and sight-seers which jammed into the area.

Two twisters struck Ogemaw County, one by Greenwood Road near the I-75 and M-76 intersection, and one along Sage Lake Road in the eastern part of the county. It is believed that one or two smaller twisters spun off the second tornado, which accounted for the skipping action in Western Iosco County.

THIS COMMERCIAL BUILDING owned by James Quigley, located on the Ogemaw County side of South Branch, was demolished when the twister touched down March 30. One mobile home was demolished in that county line community and another was tipped over, then razed by a resulting fire. One person was injured in the blaze.—Tawas Herald Photo.

City Council Had Variety of Discussions Monday Night

Establishment of a new special assessment district to finance extension of sewer on the bay side of US-23 south of the Tawas River bridge and possible correction of a sewer problem on private property serving an apartment building on Hamilton Avenue is under study following discussion at Monday night's meeting of the Tawas City Council.

Peter Popp, who owns a residence at 913 Lake Street south of Coho Marina, appeared before the council and requested sewer service at that location. At the present time, the sanitary sewer stops at Acapulco Beach Cabins. Popp told the council that three of the five property owners he had contacted were interested in petitioning for a special assessment sewer district. The matter was turned over to the water board for its regular meeting April 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Siebert of East Tawas, who own an apartment building at 417 Hamilton Avenue, were present and submitted a letter asking the city to study a sewer problem at that location. The property in question, along with the Rolls Apartment on Mathews Street, formerly had been under one ownership. A sewer line was constructed years ago on the east side of the former Rolls Apartments, now owned by Wilbur C. Roach, and extended to a second building on Hamilton Avenue, now owned by the Sieberts. Siebert told the council that some form of blockage in the line was now causing a sewage backup at his building.

The city council authorized the department of public works to dig up that portion of the private sewer which crosses Hamilton Avenue to determine if the blockage is on city property. City Mgr. Reginald Bubltz pointed out, however, that the remainder of the private line was not in the province of the city's responsibility.

Several members of the council expressed the opinion that some effort should be made by the DPW to locate and correct the problem. In other business, a letter was read from William Brown Insurance Agency asking that his firm be allowed to submit a proposal on city insurance coverage. The council is now in the process of adopting an ordinance requiring bidding on all purchases and services over a $1,000 minimum amount and insurance coverage is to be included. It is expected that the ordinance will be ready for council adoption shortly.

Tawas Area Braves Booster Club was given permission to utilize city property at the Tawas City Elementary Unit for a circus on July 21. A similar request is to be made to Tawas Area Board of Education for utilization of school property.

A letter from the Michigan Department of State Highways revised the city's cost from $58,000 to $78,400 on proposed construction of a covered drain on both sides of US-23 from Townline Road to the Tawas River. Such a program has been under consideration here for about two years, but original cost estimates were much lower than either of the two estimates submitted by the state. The $78,400 represents only the city's share of the project, which the state has determined to be the cost of draining city streets. The matter has been turned over to the city's engineering consultant for study.

A special meeting is to be held next Monday night to commence study on the operational budget for next year.

A letter from Tawas Area School stated that the city could utilize the gymnasium at the Tawas City Elementary School for future elections. The request had been submitted by the council following its last meeting.

Dr. Robert Halle, superintendent of schools, said in his letter that some changes would have to be made in class scheduling if the gymnasium is used as a polling place. Although he said there would be some problems in feeding students, parking of cars, routing of people in the building and normal utilization of the gymnasium for physical education classes, he believed there were no major problems involved. He said the elementary principal would work with city officials on the matter.

Because of present space limitations at the city hall, coupled with a controversy at the November election over public access to the ballot counting area at the present polling place, the council is studying the possibility of moving the polls to a larger building. A fire protection agreement with the City of East Tawas was adopted by the council. This agreement replaces one which has been in force since 1962. The only change in the agreement is that a fee paid to each department for its services when called upon has been removed. The two cities recently adopted similar mutual aid agreements with the United States Forest Service and the Townships of Oscoda and AuSable.

Student Report Goes To Social Security

Students 18 and over getting monthly social security payments will soon get an attendance report card that should be filled out and returned to social security as soon as possible, according to social security officials here.

"The cards are mailed about 3 months before the end of the school year to students getting social security checks," a spokesman said. "The information on the attendance report helps us decide if the student can continue to get monthly payments.

"Delay in returning the report card can mean a delay in future payments," he said.

Full-time students 18 and over who remain unmarried can get social security checks until they're 22 if a parent gets social security payments or has died after working long enough under social security.

Over 700,000 students in colleges, high schools, and trade schools get monthly social security checks.

"Students who need help with the attendance report or information about social security benefits can call or write any social security office," the spokesman said.

The Social Security Administration is an agency of the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

questions and answers

Q. I understand that some people who get social security benefits are expected to file an annual report of earnings. Who are the people who file the report?

A. People under 72 who earned over $2,520 and got one or more monthly social security retirement, survivors, or dependents checks or black lung payments in 1975 must submit an annual report of their earnings to social security by April 15. The report is used to determine if people were paid the correct amount of social security benefits for 1975 and to adjust their monthly social security benefit to their estimated earnings.

Q. My father is in the hospital again as a result of the second stroke in the past several years. Will he have to wait 5 months before he can get social security disability benefits, as he did the first time?

A. Not necessarily. Under some circumstances, people who got disability checks before can get benefits without the 5-month waiting period if they become disabled again and cannot work. Your father should notify a social security office about his condition as soon as possible. If he's unable to do it, a friend or relative can.

Q. I was told that if I apply for supplemental security income the things I own may make me ineligible, even though I don't have any money coming in to speak of. Is this true?

A. Possibly. But you should check with your social security office and let them determine if your countable resources exceed the limit. If you exceed the limit by a small amount you may still qualify for payments if you agree to sell the excess resources within a specified period of time.

Q. I read somewhere that one out of every three delays in payment of Medicare medical insurance claims is caused by use of a wrong claim number. Why is this?

A. The claim number identifies a claim for Medicare payment on bills for medical services. If you put a wrong claim number—or don't enter a number—on a "Request for Medicare Payment" form, a search for your correct number is necessary and this can delay payment. The claim number should also be written on each separate bill exactly as it appears on your Medicare health insurance card.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This is an open letter to all those senior citizens and other voters who voted no at the recent school election.

We hope you are proud of yourselves for making the effort to vote and seriously wonder if you know just what your no vote means to the community.

Your no vote has denied our students the right to the quality education they deserve. Your no vote has made it difficult, if not impossible, for most of our high school students to obtain the necessary educational background to gain entrance into most colleges because our school is not accredited.

Your no vote has ruled out the possibility of most high school students to participate in school functions, organizations and clubs which help them develop the poise, leadership abilities and acumen so necessary if they are to become leaders of the future.

Your no vote has contributed to the disruption of normal family life because in families where there are several school age children, most of them are in school at all different hours and some have to leave home before 6:00 a. m. and others do not arrive home until after 6:00 p. m.

Your no vote also means that some students are eating "lunch" in mid morning while the afternoon shift has to have their "lunch" in mid afternoon.

Your no vote has many students leaving or arriving home in darkness hours.

Your no vote has high school, elementary and kindergarten students riding the same buses so those kindergartners are getting a type of exposure they are not ready for.

Your no vote has made "house-keeping" at the high school virtually impossible because students are using the building from 6:30 a. m. until nearly 6:00 p. m.

Your no vote requires two or more students to share a locker and this contributes to petty thievery.

Your no vote means that the school library will more than likely remain at minimum standards and that is the major reason for the school not being accredited.

Lastly, your no vote indicates that you do not have enough faith in the younger generation to provide them with the type of education they need to become conscientious citizens, who will strive for quality education for their children.

Is all this negativism worth it to save a few tax dollars a year? Try to justify your no vote to your neighbor's children, a grandchild or even possibly your paper boy or that young man who helps you with your yard work or, for that matter, justify it to your own conscience.

Our vote was not yes because we wanted a good education for our children. It is too late for that as our youngest is now one of those victims of split sessions who is struggling with freshman college courses because she was not able to obtain extra help because of those split sessions.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. Richard Shaw

Should Iosco County Continue Opposition to AuGres Drain?

Another meeting of the augmented drain board for the AuGres River ended in a donnybrook last Wednesday night when its chairman, Stanley Quackenbush, deputy state drain director, adjourned the meeting and stormed out of the Iosco County Building in a huff.

The meeting, which was to have been held in January but was delayed due to a snowstorm which prevented Quackenbush from driving up north from Lansing, was brief.

Representatives of Iosco and Ogemaw Counties questioned a new set of augmented drain board minutes for the July 22 meeting, which Quackenbush read into the record. Representatives of Iosco County and Ogemaw County joined forces to vote down a motion by Arenac County to accept the revised minutes.

At this point, Quackenbush entertained a motion from Harmon Williams of Arenac County to adjourn the meeting. When Ernest Thompson, chairman of the Ogemaw County Board of Commissioners, asked for a voice vote on the adjournment, Quackenbush ruled that such a vote was not required.

This was directly opposite to his action in December, when he required a voice vote to adjourn that meeting. Earlier at that meeting, Quackenbush refused to seat an Iosco commissioner, who was appointed to fill in for John Mielock, county drain commissioner, who became ill earlier in the day and was unable to attend the meeting. Iosco and Ogemaw County representatives joined forces, however, to delay the meeting for one-half hour to make arrangements for continuance of the meeting at a later date.

Acceptance of the minutes of the July 22 meeting has been a particularly sore point for the two upriver counties. Ogemaw County had deviated from its past position at that meeting when two of its members joined Arenac County's three members and Quackenbush to approve the project as sufficient and practical. One Ogemaw County member voted with Iosco's three members opposing the measure, which passed by a six to four roll call.

A controversy erupted in Ogemaw County over voting by two of its members and the two members were replaced on the augmented board.

The principal argument being put forth by Iosco and Ogemaw is a cost distribution formula should not have appeared in the minutes of the July 22 meeting. The two upriver counties point out the formula was an agreement between attorneys in the case and is not binding. It is also argued that a new Inter-County Drain Board, which is to succeed the augmented board, is the proper body to set cost distribution formulas.

Under the disputed cost agreement, Arenac would pay 91 percent of local costs, Iosco six percent and Ogemaw three percent.

Representatives of the upriver counties have contended that construction cost estimates do not reflect actual costs which can be expected. A motion by Donald Griffin of Iosco County at the July 22 meeting, which would have deleted Iosco and Ogemaw County from the formula, was ruled out of order by Quackenbush.

The deputy state drain director insisted in December and again last week that work of the augmented drain board is now completed and that nothing can be done about the minutes other than minor corrections. According to Iosco officials, Quackenbush made corrections to the minutes according to his own choosing. The two upriver counties wished to reopen discussion on the minutes but, when Ogemaw County asked for a roll call vote to adjourn the meeting, Quackenbush ruled the motion out of order.

"Since the minutes were not accepted, it appears as though Quackenbush and Arenac County will take this to mean that the July 22 action stands and they will go ahead with the drainage district on that basis," stated Griffin.

Quackenbush constantly has threatened Iosco and Ogemaw Counties with "findings" of Circuit Judge Joseph Swallow of Alpena, who presided over a case brought by AuGres farmers to force action on the project. However, the judge said last December that a cost sharing arrangement agreed upon by attorneys is not legally binding in the absence of a formal stipulation and court order. The court retains jurisdiction in the case and it could end up back in court.

Griffin, who with Robert Foster, chairman of the county board of commissioners, and Mielock, represent Iosco County on the augmented drain board, said he was disturbed over Quackenbush's partiality in conducting meetings. "It is rather obvious he is committed to build this drain and he will not listen to anyone else," said Griffin.

Actually, Quackenbush has been pushing the drain for more than 15 years and Griffin said Friday he felt that other state officials should know of the deputy drain director's "biased actions."

Before proceeding further with opposition to the drain, Griffin believed that property owners of Western Iosco County should express themselves concerning the matter.

Tax Director Says Iosco Equalization Headed for Delay

A preliminary county tax equalization report is due next week from the Iosco Tax Equalization Department, but John Rose, director, said Monday that it would be impossible for his department to complete the report until later in the month.

As of Monday, deadline for local units to complete tax rolls, Oscoda Township had not completed its assessment work and Rose said his department was still working on auditing property tax rolls from Plainfield, AuSable and Sherman Townships, along with the City of East Tawas.

Last year, county tax equalization was delayed until May 1 and it is expected that acceptance by the county board of commissioners will again be delayed until the deadline, falling on the first Monday of May.

A preliminary state equalization is due May 10. In 1975, the state tax department rejected the county's tax equalization report which resulted in plus factors being added to assessments in all but one local unit of government.

IOSCO COUNTY was fortunate to escape last week's tornado with minimal damage as compared to an estimated $500,000 to $750,000 damage just over the west county line in Ogemaw County. Six confirmed touchdowns by twisters were reported in the Long Lake area near Hale. Several homes were damaged by twisters or falling trees and electrical service was knocked out temporarily. A massive cleanup started Wednesday morning to remove uprooted trees. Roy Hiltz of Montrose is shown watching removal of trees which toppled over against his summer home on Avalon Drive. Temporary repairs were made to the roof.—Tawas Herald Photo.

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK was a big event in the lives of Iosco County residents starting in 1914 and extending for slightly more than a decade. This circuit system brought entertaining, cultural and educational programs to rural areas, utilizing large tents seating 1,000 persons. This picture from a 1914 issue of The Tawas Herald shows one of the tents which visited Tawas City.

COMMUNITY CHAUTAUQUA

BROUGHT CULTURE TO IOSCO COUNTY

In the summer of 1914, two strangers drove into Tawas City and were overheard in a hot debate. One contended that the Chautauqua advertisements around town were for a medicine show; the other was of the opinion that they were announcements for a traveling Indian baseball club. Both men were wrong, for the Chautauqua attracted the greatest minds and best personalities of the generation to present programs of a high cultural tone in 65 communities around the country.

Chautauqua made its first visit to Iosco County in 1914 and the five-day program each summer was to be continued well into the twenties. This was in the days before radio and television and the silver screen was still in its infancy, although the Tawas had supported a motion picture show operated by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Berube for about six years.

The word, Chautauqua, pronounced "Shaw-taw-qua," was of Indian origin applied to a beautiful lake in Western New York State. In 1874, the lake was selected as a campground for a summer school, combining education, refined entertainment and religious instruction. The idea was novel, original and popular and the program grew as it attracted people from all parts of the country.

People came from great distances and soon there was a growing demand for branch assemblies at various convenient centers. The motive which led to establishment of many Chautauquas was the desire to take features of this movement to every man, woman and child in the country.

The great handicap of early Chautauquas was the expensive railroad fares for those making the trip to Western New York State, but this was changed when the programs were taken to the people. The treat once reserved for those who could afford to leave home and business and indulge in expensive travel was extended to the rank and file.

The circuit system developed by the now almost forgotten institution was a triumph of modern efficiency and organization. In 1914, for example, Chautauqua had six large tents, each capable of seating over 1,000 persons. Five of the tents were in use at one time and every day the last one was on the move. Each tent was in charge of a superintendent and a crew of tent men, the latter usually being students selected from various colleges and universities.

The central Chautauqua provided souvenir programs (paper used in printing the 1914 program totaled six tons), bill-board sheets, fence signs and banners which were distributed by advance men. Total mileage for those appearing in programs held in various towns around the country that year amounted to 136,120 miles.

Beginning about a month ahead of the scheduled five-day appearance here July 12-16, 1914, advance men began beating the drums for the coming Chautauqua program. Local newspapers were filled with pictures and stories concerning featured performers. The Detroit and Mackinac Railway announced it would sell round trip tickets at reduced rates to Tawas City from AuSable and Omer, including such branch line towns as Lincoln, Hale, Whittemore, Rose City, Prescott and AuGres.

Meanwhile, local businessmen and residents were urged to purchase season tickets at $1.50 each, which entitled the holder to attend each of the twice daily sessions during Chautauqua week. The tickets were transferrable and could be loaned to some other person, should circumstances prevent the purchaser's attendance at a particular program. Advance sale of tickets was necessary as a financial guarantee to sponsor the five-day visit.

The great drawing power of Chautauqua centered around the fact that its programs were built around personalities and that people are interested in people. Programs stressed brains, character and human achievement, which probably sounds corny today, but was of utmost importance 60 years ago.

The Chautauqua was one of the most democratic institutions in America in that the audience was on intimate terms with the speakers. It was not an uncommon sight to have a group of people from the audience gathered around one of the lecturers in conversation, or engaged in questioning him upon some important subject brought out in the lecture.

In addition, a fortunate few local citizens had the opportunity to entertain some distinguished visitors during the five-day visit. The 1914 program, for instance, brought Robert S. Vessey, twice governor of South Dakota, and Judge James A. Collins, a renowned municipal jurist from Indianapolis, Indiana. Neither of the two men claimed to be orators, but both had "done things" during their lives and were forceful in conveying messages.

Others on the program talked to both the eyes and ears of the audience: One, a professor Gause, by means of slide pictures, and the other, a Mr. Barkley, by means of crayon and chalk. Gause lived in the Panama Canal Zone for five years and spoke on advances in education; and Barkley, a lawyer by profession, had tremendous artistic ability and had a happy way of pleasing the oldest and youngest in his audience.

No Chautauqua was complete without music and the 1914 program featured the Illinois Glee Club, the 10-member Skelton University Orchestra, along with a number of rising young vocalists, who presented various selections from opera. In addition, the platform included a great child impersonator, bird warbler and mimic, Miss Elma R. Smith.

Despite competition from the Sun Brothers Circus, which played at East Tawas during one of the five days, the 1914 program was greeted by overflowing crowds.

"Taking all in all, the Chautauqua has been the biggest thing that ever came to Tawas City and we believe that the people who have benefited by it sincerely appreciate the hard work and unselfishness of the men who made the thing possible," stated James Ballard, editor of The Tawas Herald.

"Before it came, there were many people who did not even (See CHAUTAUQUA, page 6.)

GUIDING YOUNG CHILDREN

Parents who stop now and then to listen to themselves receive clues about their methods of guidance. If they find themselves saying, "If I have told you once, I have told you a dozen times," they should stop and think. Obviously, this method is not working. It may be wise to try a new approach. If something does not work in business or industry, responsible management does not keep doing it over and over the same way with the hope that it will eventually work. Instead, the situation is analyzed and new approaches are tried. The same method is appropriate in the guidance of children. Listening gives the opportunity to check upon yourself, to evaluate and to make new approaches.

If one listens to children, some clues may be received about what they have been learning. Often adults are surprised to discover that children are learning something different than parents thought they were teaching.

Setting a good example is important, too. It is a truism that children "catch" their education from parents. They learn from day-to-day experiences. The parent who consistently slaps or screams at a child is teaching that this is the way to treat other people. The mother who sends her child to the door to tell the salesman she is not at home has a difficult time convincing the child that it is not right to lie. The parent who disobeys speed laws is teaching a lack of respect for the law.

Parents who show concern for others, talk through differences in opinion and respect the rights of children as well as adults are teaching these concepts to their children.

public; 8 1/4 acres of land, allowing children to work on landscaping, gardening and build a nature trail; a "cafetorium," where we can feed the children; a playground area, and a crafts center.

Five children are now in vocational programming in the area of custodial services and food preparation. More will be going into landscaping when weather improves.

A home economics and health education room is used to teach home care.

The L-shaped building, which is leased by the district, has 9,952 square feet of floor space.

Youth Conservation Corps Set for TA Forest Ranger District

Calvin Norton, district ranger, recently announced that there will be a Youth Conservation Corps non-residential program on the Tawas Ranger District during this coming summer. This non-residential YCC program will be for young people, male and female, 15-18 years of age, who live within commuting distance of 15 to 20 miles of East Tawas. The program will begin June 21 and end August 13.

The State of Michigan is sending additional application for this program to the four area high schools in Iosco County. Interested applicants should contact their school counselor.

"The YCC program," explained Ranger Norton, "is designed to provide young people with a summer job, while helping them develop an appreciation for America's national environment; In addition, the national forests benefit by YCC enrollees' work on needed conservation projects."

The national YCC budget more than doubled when congress took final budget action March 9, thus the forest service is able to offer more young people the chance to participate in this year's program.

County Chautauqua is assured and that, in future years, it will receive the support and patronage it so richly deserves," stated the editor.

Show ground site for the first year's program was on a vacant lot along Lake Street just west of the Mathews Street intersection. Later programs were to be held at Shien Park, a vacant lot at the approximate location of today's Tawas Hospital.

One old-timer recalled that "mosquitos were thick" during the summer of 1914 and persons attending the tent show used large quantities of a heavily scented repellent which proved to be overpowering to the audience as well as the insects.

The Chautauqua during the summer and Lyceum Courses during the winter offered culture as a status symbol to such rural areas as Iosco County—people here were starving for a little culture and refinement—and the traveling tent program became a national organ of communication.

The radio, the Ford and the movies combined to kill the traveling Chautauqua in the mid-1920s . . . people did not need to wait all year in small villages for a week of lectures during the summer. Times were changing and so were cultural values.

The Chautauqua lives on today at the place of its founding more than 100 years ago in New York State, but it is only a shell of the former celebrated name it once knew in an earlier and, perhaps, more innocent age.

Tent shows did not die out, however, until World War II. The Jack Kelley Stock Company continued to make annual visits each summer to East Tawas until wartime gasoline shortages forced the show off the road. Unlike the more culturally uplifting Chautauqua, Kelley's tent show was of the vaudeville type, bringing professional acts to the community. (Many readers will remember the comedian, "Toby," who always was a regular member of the cast and a character portrayed by numerous actors over the years.)

Despite the wartime interruption, this show was on its last legs as its popularity began to wane in the late 1930s—it, too, was a victim of the silver screen, changing times and different tastes in cultural and recreational pursuits. The summer stock tent shows did not return after World War II—an era had ended.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Apathy is the art of not caring for anyone or anything but myself; complete and total indifference.

I have been taught first to serve with love my God, then my husband and family and then my fellow man. None of us know, be we six or 60, if we will be here in the next moment. Are you sure you can look God in the eye and proudly say, "The last thing I did for your kids on earth was to vote down a better education for them." It is ironic that we should do this in the Easter season when we are reminded that His Son gave His all for us.

I know my husband voted yes and I did and our daughter did. We have a theory, my husband and I: We are today, our retirees are yesterday, but our youth are tomorrow. Shall we leave them a legacy of "Us First" or a legacy of trying to help them build a better future?

We have also voted yes when it is for money to help a farmer in need or in trouble. Are your cows and snowmobiles worth more than a child that you could not give up a small penance for them?

We have also voted yes for our retirees, who receive comparatively free meals, free rides, lower prescription rates, free health clinics, food stamps, free shots, Medicare and Medicaid insurance and our vote stands behind the Homestead Act which would have protected most of the retirees from even paying any tax on the new school addition. Yet, you turn out by the hundreds to vote no. Why? Is this your legacy to the young?

As for the parents who voted no, or worse yet, did not even vote: You leave me stymied. I know some of you will say, "I did not have a gym or an auditorium when I went to school." Well, that's too bad. We did not have jet planes, penicillin and tractors then either, but must we penalize our children for this? I was born right after the Great Depression, but my community dredged up the money and love to build a high school with two gyms. It still stands in South Bend, Indiana.

I know there are a few who cannot possibly squeak out the 35 cents a week, but I also know there are those who voted no who are riding around in big cars with a boat in the garage, snowmobiles in the yard, a winter place in Florida, etc. You are the ones who have my sympathy. You can only be put on the list of apathetic.

Out Tawas area is growing at the rate of four to five families a month. Do they know the secret of our high school? We didn't! Down below, our school taxes averaged $900 a year for a $30,000 home. What are yours?

I sincerely hope that the next time our school board and kids call upon you to vote, you decide to give a little of yourselves. It is not too much, but isn't it better to be able to say, "I'm leaving something good behind." This is my legacy!

1775: A battle lost, but a point won.

Benjamin Franklin is back from England, where he did his best as a diplomat. Now, he admits that diplomacy won't work. We go into battle at Lexington. We take Fort Ticonderoga. In June, the British storm us at Bunker Hill and give us three bloody fights. Our gunpowder is low. To save what we can, our cry becomes, "Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes." The British far outnumber us. And soundly defeat us. But we give them what-for. And heavy losses. Our backwoods militia marksmanship strikes fear into their hearts and inspiration into our own. They used to laugh at our lack of spit and polish. They're not laughing anymore. And we're beginning to feel we just might have a chance for independence one of these days. ☺
