Taxidermist Offers Free Service to Derby Winner

Bruce Boughner, 35-year-old Hale area taxidermist, announced Wednesday that he has an extra "prize" for the winner of the Lake Huron King Salmon Derby being conducted August 21-September 18.

He has offered his taxidermy service free of charge to the top prize winner in the contest and will mount the winning fish for the lucky angler.

The contest, being sponsored by chambers of commerce of Harrisville, Oscoda and Tawas, has total prize money of $9,000 and merchandise prizes awaiting winners and competition is expected to be high with that kind of reward.

Boughner, whose BMB Taxidermy Shop presently is located three miles east and one-quarter mile south of Hale, has been a taxidermist for seven years, but entered the field as a full time business a year ago.

BRUCE BOUGHNER displays a mountain lion which adorns the living room of his home on Allen Road, three miles east and one-quarter mile south of Hale.—Tawas Herald Photo.

He had been employed in the construction business but, after enthusiastic response from customers, decided he would make taxidermy his principal avocation. Last winter, he studied under a master Wisconsin taxidermist in order to learn some of the finer points of the craft.

"Painting is one of the most difficult things to learn in mounting fish," said Boughner. "The work seems to be here and everyone has been pleased with what I have done."

Boughner displayed a number of his mounts at the recent Isosco County Fair at Hale and during Paul Bunyan Days at Oscoda. The living room of his home features a number of outstanding fish—from a sturgeon and several large salmon to the smaller local panfish mounted in an interesting assortment; one of his displays currently being completed is a stringer of perch.

A hunter and fisherman himself, he also has a mountain lion and other big game animals adorning the walls of his home.

With all of the fishing excitement along Lake Huron in recent years, Boughner believes that taxidermy offers a wide open field for his craft.

Tall Masted Antenna Can be Dangerous

All CB radio operators with a home base station need to safely and properly install an outdoor antenna to give proper reception.

The antenna is probably the most important part of the home base unit for two reasons. Faulty installation will reduce considerably the distance over which one can transmit and receive messages. But more importantly, an improperly installed antenna can cause serious injury or death to the would-be CB'er.

J. G. Huck, district manager of Consumers Power Company's Tawas District, warns CB'ers that a tall masted antenna coming into contact with an overhead energized electric line will cause severe shock or electrocution to any one touching it.

Federal Communication Commission rules govern maximum height allowed for various types of CB antennas. Generally, though, an antenna will be about 36-feet high for good reception. This height, cautions Huck, is well within the height of many overhead electric lines.

Huck said the danger is caused when the metal antenna comes into contact with the energized line. The metal, being a good conductor of electricity, may carry the current into the person holding the CB antenna causing injury or death.

To avoid this danger and get the best reception from a CB unit, Huck suggests following these safety rules:

1. Most important of all, place CB antenna mast so that it come no closer than 10 feet to electric power lines.
2. Install the antenna when weather conditions are clear and winds calm.
3. Many CB antennas make excellent lightning rods, since they probably are the highest structure in the area. To protect yourself and your home against a lightning accident, install a lightning arrester—one approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories—on the lead in-cable. The antenna should be grounded, but make sure the ground wire does not run into the home. These precautions also will protect the installer from static electric charges that sometimes are caused by CB antennas.
4. If the antenna is fastened to a house or other structure, make sure that the structure is strong enough to carry the additional weight. Allow for wind, ice and vibration.
5. The mast should be securely fastened and not lean to any direction.
6. If necessary, strengthen the antenna with at least three equally spaced guy wires.

Officers elected for next season are Mrs. Donahue, president; Marge Garlick, vice president; Rachel McCready, secretary-treasurer; Lee Butler and Wilma Westcott, board members.

CENTURY of the WHITE FISH

SAILBOATS were used by Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron fishermen for more than one-half century before "one-lung" gasoline engines were installed in boats after 1900. This picture was snapped at East Tawas and shows six sailboats tied up at a dock while the day's catch was being unloaded. At far left is a stake driver used in setting pound or "pond" nets which were used exclusively in those days by Tawas fishermen. More than 100 years ago, James O. Whittemore, a writer of early Isosco history, lamented the flight in poetry, when the fishermen in their white-winged sailing smacks were succeeded by lumbering as the county's principal industry. Commercial fishing was to live another 100 years after those words were written, but it, too, has passed from the scene.

Long before the coming of the white man to Isosco's shores, Lake Huron was known to the Indians as "the great fish lake." Chippewas have been living in the Upper Great Lakes region since about 1525 and, because of the Indians' expertise in fishing, they had ample supplies of dried fish to sell or trade for goods offered by early explorers and traders.

The first settlement in the county was made at the mouth of the AuSable River in 1848 and is credited to fishermen. The white fish and trout fisheries off the mouth of the AuSable River constituted the main business of AuSable until the advent of the lumbering industry there in 1867.

Others, notably Peter Hart and his family, established their fishing headquarters on Tawas Bay in 1849. Commercial fishing in these waters continued to be an important industry for more than a century, but a combination of factors—principally the improvement of fishing gear which led directly to overproduction, coupled with serious pollution of off shore waters by communities and industry—has seen the fishing industry dwindle to nearly the zero point at the present day.

The demise of the commercial fishing industry has been one of the great tragedies of the mid-twentieth century. It certainly was not contemplated in this county, judging from this quotation from "Art Work of the Lake Huron Shore," published by the W. H. Parish Publishing Company in 1894:

"The endless world of fish in the almost unfathomable depths before them, will last to the end of time. The graceful fleet of white-winged fishing smacks go dancing out at the gray dawn of the morning, disappearing beneath the eastern horizon and returning at eventide laden with the wealth of the deep, just as they have done for the last 50 years and probably just as they will do for centuries to come."

Despite the glowing words above concerning Isosco's fishing industry, the white fish—which had long been a staple in the diet of local residents and the principal product of local fisheries—began to show some signs of depletion as early as the 1890s. As a result, the Tawas Herald reported that the state commenced a program of collecting eggs from white fish caught in the nets of local fishermen, fertilized them and then sent the eggs to the Alpena state hatchery. Lake Huron was restocked in this manner for years to continue the propagation of white fish.

Until the early 1880s, the only method of transportation from Isosco County was by boat. In order to market their catch—white fish and lake trout—the fish were salted, packed into barrels and shipped to Cincinnati and other Ohio cities for many years. Later, herring was preserved and marketed in the same manner, requiring large numbers of hands to be employed in the local fish processing business.

Yellow pickerel found a ready sale in New York City, New York, and Chicago, Illinois, and opening of a railroad in 1884 to serve the region saw an increase in production. Fifty pounds of fish were packed in ice in wooden boxes and reached city fish markets in good conditions in comparatively few hours after packing.

Markets supplied by Isosco fishermen were located mainly at New York City; Boston, Massachusetts, and Chicago. When it is realized that only the Great Lakes produced large quantities of fresh water fish the trade demanded, it is understandable why the market for white fish, trout, pickerel perch and herring was never glutted. In addition, fish buyers of the large cities were willing to advance large sums of money to fishing firms, when necessary, to keep them engaged in the work.

Unlike the farmer, the fisherman was assured a ready market for the results of his labor—prices varied, but there was always a demand. In 1876, there was a record lift of 14 tons of pickerel off Isosco's shore line, for which fishermen were paid 2½ cents per pound, a price much above the average and a substantial amount of money for those days.

A name connected with commercial fishing throughout most of Isosco County's history—Soudrette, later changed to Lixey—is the last family fishing in the deep water of Lake Huron today from Port Huron to Presque Isle Harbor. The Lixey are related by marriage to such other familiar family names in the Saginaw Bay fishery as Trombley, Trudell and Coyle.

Richter Lixey, 71, and his brother, Donald, 55, owners of today's Lixey Fish Company in Baldwin Township, operate under a special permit issued by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. (See WHITE FISH, page 6.)

THE TRUDELL FISH COMPANY in Tawas City had its location on the bay shore near the present day Coyle's Restaurant. Many of the early Tawas fishermen were either direct descendents or related by marriage to the Trombley and Trudell families, pioneer residents of Lower Saginaw, now Bay City.

Tolfree Offers Third Emergency Tech. Program

For the third consecutive year, Tolfree Memorial Hospital, West Branch, will offer an emergency medical technician program. This is an 81-hour course under the direction of the United States Department of Transportation used in training ambulance attendants. It is designed for the volunteer fireman, policeman, housewife and medical personnel who need training for ambulance work.

Current pending Michigan legislation requires that each ambulance have an EMT in attendance with the patient, increasing the need for these people in each community.

A basic program designed to teach the skills necessary in emergency situations in the field, persons attending will learn many procedures including splinting a fracture, applying a backboard, delivering a baby and giving cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Classes are composed of lectures from members of the hospital medical and emergency room staffs and practice sessions.

The course is scheduled to begin Wednesday, September 22, in the hospital conference room. People who are interested should pick up an application at the hospital main office.

Want Information on Single Business Tax Problems

State Rep. George Prescott today encouraged businesses having problems as a result of the Single Business Tax to forward information to either of two Lansing addresses.

Information should be forwarded to Jonathan H. Edelman, economic consultant, Office of Economic Expansion, Fourth Floor, Law Building, Lansing, Michigan 48901, or John Hanieski, chief of the development and programs section, Office of Economic Expansion, Fourth Floor, Law Building, Lansing, Michigan 48901.

Prescott said the governor's special SBT Committee is evaluating information sent in by business people throughout the state in an effort to correct the problems.

"This committee wants all of the information it can get so that any recommendations made will be the correct solutions to the problems," Prescott concluded.

PUBLIC RELEASE HALE AREA SCHOOLS

Hale Area Schools today announced its policy for Free Lunches and Free Milk, or Reduced-Price Lunches, for children unable to pay the full price of lunches and milk served under the National School Lunch, Special Milk Program, and U. S. D. A. Donated Food Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

Total Family Size	Scale for Reduced-Price Lunches
	A Scale for Free Lunches	B Scale for Reduced-Price Lunches
One	$ 3,680	$ 3,681 - $ 5,730
Two	4,830	4,831 - 7,530
Three	5,980	5,981 - 9,320
Four	7,130	7,131 - 11,110
Five	8,190	8,191 - 12,770
Six	9,240	9,241 - 14,410
Seven	10,200	10,201 - 15,910
Eight	11,150	11,151 - 17,390
Nine	12,010	12,011 - 18,740
Ten	12,870	12,871 - 20,090
Eleven	13,730	13,731 - 21,430
Twelve	14,590	14,591 - 22,770
Each Additional Family Member	860	1,340

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free lunches and milk, or reduced-price lunches. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 percent of income, special education expenses due to mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

In certain cases, foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals for them, they should contact the school.

Children of unemployed parents may qualify for free or reduced-price lunches and free milk if total family income including welfare payments, unemployment compensation and sub-pay benefits fall within the prescribed family income guidelines.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, sex, color, or national origin.

Under the provisions of the policy, the principal of each school will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may make request either orally or in writing to Wayne Case, Superintendent, Hale Area Schools for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an Outline of the hearing procedure.

Each school and the office of the Superintendent has a copy of the complete policy which may be reviewed by an interested party.

make their own brown bag lunches for the kids or have them eat the school lunches that are part of the National School Lunch Program. In a test done of school lunches, it was found that brown bag lunches from home probably cost as much or more than the meal purchased at school.

National School Lunch Program subsidized lunches may be either hot or cold, but must conform to a meal plan, known as the Type A lunch, published by the USDA. Cost of the lunch programs depend on the amount of USDA subsidies, the school's cost, the type service available, the age group and the extent to which the school district subsidizes the program. On the average, the lunches range from 40 to 60 cents.

The Type A lunch served is designed to meet at least one-third of the daily dietary allowances recommended by the National Research Council for 10 to 12 year olds. It consists of the following:

Beverage: One-half pint of fluid milk. Main dish: Two ounces (edible portion as served) of lean meat, poultry or fish; or two ounces of cheese; or one egg; or one-half cup of cooked dry beans or peas; or four tablespoons of peanut butter; or an equivalent quantity of any combination of the above listed foods. To be counted in meeting this requirement, these foods must be served in a main dish or in a main dish and one other menu item.

Also included is a three-fourths cup serving consisting of two or more vegetables or fruits, or both. Full-strength vegetable or fruit juice may be counted to meet not more than one-fourth cup of this requirement.

One slice of whole grain or enriched bread or a serving of cornbread, biscuits, rolls, muffins, etc., that are made of whole-grain enriched meal or flour are also required. One teaspoon of butter or fortified margarine is the last requirement.

Serving sizes may be adjusted for different age groups. USDA also recommends that iron and vitamin C rich foods be served daily and that vitamin A rich foods be served twice a week. These are minimum standards and many school districts report adding other foods for the sake of variety or acceptability.

If the brown bag alternative is decided upon, be aware that cost studies show that a brown bag lunch, which follows a Type A meal pattern, may cost between 33 and 58 cents, even when the least expensive brands of the lowest cost foods are chosen. Substituting more expensive foods or adding a dessert or snack-food treat will make the brown bag lunch more expensive than the school lunch.

In the study done on costs of the brown bag lunch, the meal included a sandwich made with two slices of bread, margarine and sandwich filling of either ham, beef, tuna or eggs. The fruits and vegetables consisted of carrot sticks and either an apple, banana, orange or pear. Wrapping costs, totaling three cents, were also added, as was milk, purchased at school.

Many factors other than price should be considered when deciding on brown bagging it or buying school lunches. Many children will not eat a large meal and critics of the lunch program often cite excessive waste. The time of the lunch period, the influence of other children, whether a good choice of foods is offered and the kinds and amounts of food available at home or at school, all enter into the decision.

There are pros and cons with both school lunches and brown bag lunches, but the most important consideration is that the children get a well balanced meal, consisting of foods chosen from the basic four food groups.

Consider Hiring Former Director

Consideration is being given to hiring David Lindenmulder, who recently resigned as director of the Northeast Michigan Community Mental Health Service Agency, as director of the proposed Iosco-Ogemaw County mental health district.

Although plans for the new mental health district are being formulated, the new district has not received final approval from the governor, which is necessary before the district can form a mental health agency.

Although Lindenmulder's name has been suggested as a possible director and accompanied representatives of the two counties to Lansing two weeks ago to check on progress of the proposed new organization, a 12-member board would have responsibility of choosing a director.

If the governor approves the new mental health district, the merger would probably take place in October 1977.

Lindenmulder, holder of a doctorate degree from an unaccredited Wisconsin junior college through a home study program, had been charged by the Northeastern Michigan Community Health Services Agency with having a "mail order" doctorate degree and with being involved in a rent kick-back scheme. However, the Michigan Department of Mental Health reviewed his credentials and approved his appointment as director.

The proposed new two-county board will operate with a budget of approximately $400,000. Iosco's share of operational costs would be about $24,000 matched by the state on a basis of 10 percent provided by the county and 90 percent by the state. Ogemaw's share would be about $8,000 and would

Their grandfather, Joseph Alex Lixey, was a Saginaw Bay fisherman in the 1840s and Richter relates that the family name was shortened by Indians, who were in the employ of his grandfather. "The Indians found it difficult to pronounce the French name of Soudrette and used the name of 'Alexy,' grandfather's middle name," said Richter, who serves as the township supervisor.

Henry Lixey, father of Richter and Donald, joined his father, Joseph, in the fishing business in 1887. He was to follow in the business for more than a half a century and was 90 years of age when he died in 1960.

In a 1935 interview, Henry Lixey recalled that sturgeon, once so plentiful in Lake Huron and now practically extinct, were considered a menace to the nets of fishermen. While fishing near Oscoda in his first year of residence in Iosco, and following a storm from the northeast, his nets held 30 or more sturgeon, ranging from four to seven feet in length. There was never a demand for sturgeon, so they were sold to the Indians for 50 cents each. Fishermen, however, often boiled sturgeon to extract fish oil. Cedar soaked in the oil could be used as a float and it made a good substitute for cork.

During the intervening years, the lumbering industry blossomed into a booming business and then passed from the scene with the depletion of timber reserves—but the fishing industry remained as strong as ever. Some of the family names connected with commercial fishing from the county line to East Tawas included the Browns, Clarks, Trudells, Coyle, Bayport Fish Company, Lixey Fish Company and Hammell Fish Company.

By the mid-1920s, the fishing industry of Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron began to show a rapid decline. Edward A. Trudell of Trudell Fisheries Company, Tawas City, speaking at a conference of commercial fishermen and the department of conservation held at Bay City, urged that measures be taken by the legislature to regulate the taking of fish during the spawning season.

"I have been in the fishing business for the past 20 years," said Trudell. "During that time, I have seen the Great Lakes gradually depleted of fish. I think the time is now ripe for our legislature to enact laws to stop the taking of fish during spawning time. If such laws are enacted, in a few years the lakes will again have an abundance of fish."

He also noted that herring were becoming depleted more rapidly than other fish, although catches of white fish and yellow pickerel were gradually dropping off.

"You mention these closed seasons to the so-called fishermen's association of Michigan, and they will make the statement that they would all have to quit the business if laws closing these seasons are enacted," said Trudell. "But I say we will close if they are not enacted. Unfortunately, if these closed seasons are asked for by the department of conservation, the fishermen's association of Michigan, with its high powered lobbyists, will be at Lansing and try to defeat the measure."

Laws were enacted years later to protect the white fish during spawning seasons, but development of submarine nets in the late 1920s soon posed a serious problem. Until then, Saginaw Bay used pound or "pond" nets almost exclusively, although operators at Oscoda used gill nets fashioned by hand from cotton twine, a time consuming operation during winter months.

Entry of the submarine nets into water at a depth of 60 feet, later increased to 80 feet, saw the rapid depletion of white fish. By reason of the great depth to which these nets were lowered, they produced the best result in catches. "The appalling waste of fish life, however, as a result of their use, was a large factor in exterminating the source of the fish supply and long had been a matter of grave concern to the department of conservation," stated one newspaper account.

The Herald reported on May 26, 1933, that more than 120 men were employed in the local fishing industry. The average wage paid was $18 per week and firms were spending $60,000 for new equipment that year. More than 15,000 gallons of gasoline were used to treat nets with copper compound as a preservative. There were 13 major fisheries and a number of smaller operators located at Tawas City, East Tawas, Oscoda and the Arenac-Iosco line.

By 1935, only a dozen or so concerns were engaged in the fishing business, employing from 75 to 100 hands regularly and it was estimated that the fishing industry of Iosco County represented an investment of a quarter million dollars.

By 1938, the Lake Huron white fish business was in serious trouble and a number of Michigan's leading fish experts and many commercial fishermen were of the

THE LAKE HURON FISH COMPANY, owned by the Gillinghams of Bayport, had a large fishing operation headquartered at East Tawas. Judging from the Model A Ford on the dock, this picture was taken about 1930. Two stake drivers and two scows for hauling nets are in the slip. This operation was located east of the Michigan State Police Post. One of the controlling factors in the early days of fishing, up to the mid-1920s, was a state law which gave exclusive riparian fishing rights off the shore of Lake Huron and Saginaw Bay. As a result, movement of fishermen from one area to another was controlled. After the law was declared invalid by the state supreme court, fishermen were able to follow the fish to any water in the Great Lakes.

THREE COMMERCIAL FISHERMEN from East Tawas donned their "Sunday best" when they posed for A. G. Emery, photographer, with three large Lake Huron trout shortly after 1900. White fish and lake trout were the principal catches of the early day fishermen, who chose to wear their rubber hip boots, or high top boots, the mark of their trade, for this picture. The man at left is Delbert Trudell and the other two men have not been identified by the Herald.

STURGEON were once so plentiful in Lake Huron that they were considered a menace to the nets of fishermen. This spiny plated holdover from ancient times often reached a length of seven feet and would rip a net to pieces when it became entangled in one. It is recorded that sturgeon were once piled up like cord wood along the shore of Tawas Bay, having no commercial value. The commercial fisherman, too, has apparently traveled the same route of the sturgeon—only one deep water operator remains today from Port Huron to Presque Isle as the last vestige of a once important industry.

opinion that continued restocking of the waters of Saginaw Bay over a period of years would bring back the fishery. No white fish had been hatched at the Bay City hatchery since 1932, when 85,000,000 fry were planted in the bay.

A report in the August 19, 1938, issue of the Herald stated: "Then came the big raids by commercial fishermen which seriously depleted the breeding stock in closed waters and, since then, the yearly take of white fish has steadily decreased. We have got to start at the bottom in building up our white fish stock again; it can be done, but we will need the same cooperation on white fish propagation from the fishermen that they have given on pickerel. Saginaw Bay is absolutely a perpetual fishing ground, if properly fished, but it is going to take some time and money to build the white fish back to where they were."

With long enough closed seasons and the white fish left undisturbed on shore spawning grounds, it was felt that the fish could be re-established; "but restocking from hatcheries will bring them back quicker, aided by proper regulations on commercial fishing. The white fish should be just as prolific in Saginaw Bay waters as the pickerel," stated the Herald.

Capt. Robert E. Ellsworth, supervisor of fish culture for the department of conservation, based at the Silver Creek trout rearing station, was responsible for a dramatic increase in yellow pickerel fishing in Saginaw Bay. Commercial fishermen cooperated in the program conducted in the spring of 1936. Nearly two billion pickerel eggs were secured from the commercial fishermen and sent to the Bay City hatchery. By 1938, the annual production of 100,000 pounds of pickerel in Saginaw Bay had increased to more than a million pounds annually.

One of the major reasons for the interest in state fish hatcheries was the fact that water quality of Saginaw Bay—pure in the early days and the natural spawning area for many species of fish—was gradually worsening. Large amounts of chemical and industrial wastes poured into the Saginaw River and, coupled with insufficient treatment of waste from sewer disposal systems by shore line communities, the shallow water over spawning beds was seriously polluted.

Fish production in Saginaw Bay continued to drop and many operators turned from white fish, pickerel and lake trout to concentrate on herring and perch. The end of the great commercial fishery of Lake Huron was in sight, but there was to be a final spurt in the white fish industry in 1947-48. During those two record seasons, trainloads of white fish were shipped to market and Tawas Bay and the AuSable River was the center for a huge fleet of boats from throughout the Great Lakes.

Never again has there been a season like 1947-48 for white fish and, after struggling through years of poor seasons, the last few commercial fishermen finally had to close their business here or move to other waters. The century of the white fish had ended.

(Next week's bicentennial featurette will be devoted to the local fishing industry since 1947 and what the last surviving fisherman believes could be done to revive this once important business.)

"Meating" your Budget

by Sandra Bloom
Midwest Roto Food Consultant

Get ready, get set, go—and it's another lap in the familiar race between cook and clock or budget. If this is the scene at your home before dinner, we have some suggestions which may assist.

Trim the time and the budget with these recipes that will satisfy the hungriest appetites. A little planning time now saves lots of time later. Take a few minutes to list the foods you already have in the cupboard. Plan a weekly menu. Don't overlook the potential of leftovers as ingredients in one-dish meals. Use them creatively to avoid mealtime boredom.

With most of these meals, a crisp salad and bread or rolls will suffice.

Pinwheel Meat Loaf

- 1 lb. ground beef
- 1 egg
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons cracker crumbs
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 6 thin slices pressed smoked beef
- 1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
- 1 (2½ oz.) par sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 (5¼ oz.) can mushroom steak sauce

Combine ground beef, egg, onion, bread crumbs, Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Pat out meat mixture on wax paper into a rectangle about ½-inch thick. Lay beef slices atop the meat mixture and sprinkle with cheese; top with sliced mushrooms. Carefully and tightly roll up jelly-roll fashion to enclose center ingredients. Place seam-side down in a 1 lb. loaf pan or centered in an 8 or 9-inch square pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 45 minutes. Spoon mushroom steak sauce over the surface and continue baking for 15 minutes. Serves 4.

Tropical Ham

- 1 can (1 lb. 1 oz.) fruit cocktail
- 1½ to 1¾ lb. slice ham (or same amount leftover ham cubed)
- 1 banana
- ¼ cup brown sugar
- ¼ cup flaked or shredded coconut
- Nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon margarine
- ¼ cup sherry

Drain fruit cocktail. Lightly grease a hot skillet. Brown ham on both sides. Place ham in oven proof serving dish. Slice banana diagonally. Arrange fruit cocktail and bananas on top of ham. Sprinkle with brown sugar, coconut and nutmeg. Dot with margarine. Drizzle with sherry. Bake at 375 degrees in the oven for 25 minutes. Serves 4 to 6.

Beef Balls in Tomato Sauce

- | MEAT BALLS                 | SAUCE                                  |
|----------------------------|--|
| 1½ lbs. ground beef        | 2 cups sliced onion                    |
| ¾ cup cracker crumbs       | 2 garlic cloves, minced                |
| ¼ cup finely chopped onion | ¼ cup margarine                        |
| 1 egg                      | 1 tablespoon flour                     |
| ¾ cup milk                 | 2 cans (1 lb. 12 oz. each) tomatoes    |
| 1½ teaspoon salt           | 1 teaspoon salt                        |
| 1 teaspoon oregano         | ½ teaspoon sugar                       |
| ½ teaspoon basil           | ½ teaspoon oregano                     |
| ¼ teaspoon pepper          | ½ teaspoon pepper                      |
| 2 tablespoons margarine    | 3 tablespoons coarsely chopped parsley |
|                            | ½ cup shredded Parmesan cheese         |

Combine meat ball ingredients except margarine; mix well. Shape into balls using 1 tablespoonful of meat mixture for each ball. Brown meat balls in hot margarine, turning as needed to brown evenly. Prepare sauce. Sauté onion and garlic in margarine. Stir in flour. Add tomatoes, salt, sugar, oregano and pepper. Simmer gently until slightly thickened, 15 to 20 minutes. Pour sauce into serving dish. Top with meat balls and sprinkle with parsley and Parmesan cheese. Serve plain or atop hot cooked spaghetti or rice. Makes 6 servings.

Zesty Tuna Lasagna

9 to 12 lasagna noodles
 Two 2½ oz. jars sliced mushrooms, drained
 ½ cup chopped green pepper
 ½ cup chopped onion
 3 tablespoons margarine
 1 (9 oz.) can tomato sauce
 1 (6 oz.) can tomato paste
 1 cup water
 1 teaspoon oregano, crushed
 ½ teaspoon salt
 ½ teaspoon sugar
 ¼ teaspoon basil, crushed
 Dash garlic salt
 Dash crushed red pepper
 2 (6½ oz.) cans tuna, drained and flaked
 2 cups shredded Mozzarella cheese
 Grated Parmesan cheese

Cook noodles according to package directions; rinse and drain. Sauté mushrooms, green pepper and onion in margarine until tender. Add tomato sauce, tomato paste, and water; stir until smooth. Stir in seasonings. Simmer 15 minutes. Stir in tuna. Cover the bottom of a 9-inch square or 7 x 11-inch pan with a layer of noodles. Top with ½ of the tuna-tomato sauce and sprinkle with Mozzarella and Parmesan cheese. Repeat the noodle, sauce and cheese layers twice, ending with the cheese. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes before cutting. Serves 4 to 6.

Beef Round Steak Firenze

2 to 3 lbs. beef round steak, cut ¾ to 1-inch thick
 ¼ cup flour
 1 teaspoon salt
 ½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
 2 tablespoons margarine
 2 beef bouillon cubes
 ½ cup hot water
 1 can (16 oz.) whole tomatoes
 1½ cups chopped onion
 ½ teaspoon garlic powder
 ¾ teaspoon oregano
 1½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 ¼ teaspoon finely ground pepper

Cut steak into serving pieces. Combine flour, salt and pepper. Dredge steak in seasoned flour. Reserve excess flour. Brown meat on both sides in melted margarine. Pour off drippings. Dissolve bouillon cubes in hot water. Drain canned tomatoes. Reserving tomatoes, add enough tomato juice to bouillon to total 1¼ cups liquid. (If necessary, add water.) Add reserved flour to chopped on-

Beef and Ham Loaf

1 lb. ground beef
 ½ lb. ground lean ham
 ½ cup quick oats
 ½ cup finely chopped celery
 ½ cup thinly sliced green onion ion and mix. Add tomato-bouillon liquid, floured onion, garlic powder, oregano, Worcestershire sauce and freshly ground pepper to the meat. Cover tightly and cook slowly 1½ to 2 hours or until meat is tender. Add reserved tomatoes and heat 5 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

¼ cup milk
 ½ teaspoon dry mustard
 ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
 ½ teaspoon ground cloves
 2 canned pineapple slices
 ¼ cup light corn syrup

Put ground beef and ham together through meat grinder. Mix in oats, celery, green onion, milk, dry mustard, cinnamon and cloves. Press mixture into 8x4x3-inch loaf pan. Cut pineapple slices in half and place on top of loaf. Spoon on corn syrup. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until loaf is browned. Makes 6 servings.

Beef Hash and Cheese Pie

2 cans (15½ oz.) corned beef hash
 1 pkg. (9½ oz.) pie crust mix
 1 large Bermuda onion, thinly sliced
 2 tablespoons margarine
 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen peas
 1 cup shredded cheddar cheese (about ¼ lb.)

Mix pie crust mix according to package directions. Roll crust into a rectangle 15 x 12 inches on a lightly floured surface. Line bottom and sides of shallow 2-quart baking dish with pie crust; flute edges of crust. Cut onion slices into quarters. Melt margarine in frypan. Add onions and peas; cook slowly until onion is golden brown and peas are partially cooked, about 5 minutes. Spread ½ of the hash over the crust. Top with onions and peas, and sprinkle cheese evenly over top. Cover with remaining hash. Bake at 400 degrees until thoroughly heated and crust is brown, 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Eighty years is a long time

by Ellen Rebecca Fenn

Do you have any idea what the "report" card of an American schoolboy attending a little white school of eighty years past was like?

I have Father's last report card issued March 3, 1893! He was 18! Attending school in the Maple Grove #6, of Henry County, Iowa. The same in the photo. The only vestige of this institute of learning remaining is the well pump, surrounded by rows of yellow corn reaching toward the sky in the fall, or by winter's stark reminder from November to March. November to March coincides with the winter term Father attended. During seeding and harvesting he was needed by "Pap" and Mother Mills to assist in feeding the eleven brothers and sisters plus Pap and Mother. ALL big country boys assisted at home and attended only winter terms.

But that was far more schooling than pioneer families' children were exposed to. For the early teacher taught in the homes along his school route. A simple method! There were no report cards, no taxation, and no disciplinary problems a hickory switch could not cure. And then there were no salaries. The early instructor earned his room and board some way, somewhere. When salaries did come into being the parents paid $1.25 per student per term.

As the country progressed so did the school progress. And the very first school houses came into being. Logs, chinked with mud and fibers, puncheon slabs secured by wooden dowels fitted into holes in the logs and then were smoothed for desk facsimiles. Seats were planks laid on converted stumps with boys on one side of the room, the girls on another.

Blackboards were painted planks; homemade sheepskin erasers served well; WRAPPING PAPER, GOOSE QUILL PENS, MAPLE BARK INK, AND SHARPENED BULLETS furnished media for penmanship.

Records are not complete as to where and how text books were acquired. In all probability the settlers brought them from the East. Rest assured well-educated teachers needed no books, for the three R's and spelling were all the subjects necessary.

Pupils of a rural one-room school house during 1929.

If you've never explored an early spelling, or an arithmetic, or a reader, you're in for pleasant, yet puzzling surprises. Not one serious student exploring early day texts could escape comparing methods then and those of today. The spelling manuals were actually teaching four subjects in one. As an early day preface states: "It is now generally conceded, by eminent American and European educators, that the shortest and most successful mode of learning spelling is by the eye; that definitions of useful words as well as their orthography, are soonest acquired by frequently writing exercises from dictation; and that Orthoëpy and orthography should be simultaneously taught. This book (an 1863 copyright THE NATIONAL SERIES OF PRONOUNCING SPELLER by Richard G. Parker and J. Madison Watson) has been prepared in accordance with those views."

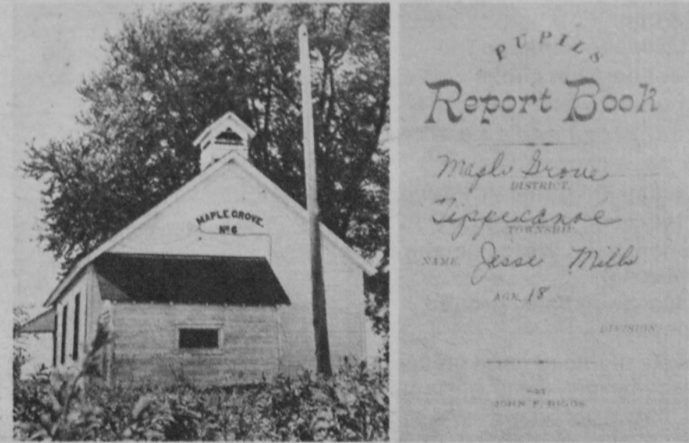

So pupils learned spelling, pronunciation, dictation, the art of reading via spelling and when orally learned or written the word was mastered from hind to face.

The early report cards when grading spelling graded more than just the placement of the letters. And the type of marking used was exact! A pupil's daily grades were averaged for the entire period and then averaged with his examination for that period. Thus a grading of 93 in spelling meant just that! An excellent student but not quite up to the 99% mark! Arithmetic was graded even more concisely!

Pioneers employed mathematics many times but of a special grade. Their own! So early arithmetics were strenuously applied to solving such problems as he might face (the pupil). No student was allowed to give up until he had mastered such.

In 1879 the Progressive Higher Arithmetic for schools, academies and mercantile colleges contained 811 definitions on its 456 pages covering chapters on fractions, decimals, compound numbers, money changes, duodecimals, ratio, proportion, percentage, evolution, series and mensuration. Also the short method of subtraction, addition, multiplication and division.

By 1893 many changes had taken place. Civil government, geography, and history were added. And the report card was a small book 4 1/4 by 3 1/4 inches and contained 16 pages. Two pages of 400 words each were directed toward the teacher and same to the parents. A short summary aimed at the pupil and one

Yukky. Yummy.

Peaches preserved in ordinary canning syrup for 12 hours.

Fruit-Fresh. You need it for canning, freezing, and fresh fruit.

If you want all the fruit you serve to look and taste its freshest, what you really need is Fruit-Fresh. Because Fruit-Fresh contains a special ingredient that locks in the natural, "just-picked" color and flavor. Which means no more brown, mushy-looking peaches.

Fruit-Fresh is economical, too. A 5-oz. can will preserve up to 75 lbs. of peaches. Here's how: For Canning: simply add Fruit-Fresh to the regular syrup. For Freezing: add Fruit-Fresh to the syrup or dry sugar. For Fresh Fruit: sprinkle Fruit-Fresh on your just-sliced fruit before refrigerating. Sound good? It tastes delicious.

The only thing in common seems to be the necessity of one parent signing the card where directed to show the parent has seen that report. Many school boys tried forgery when very young.

Eighty years has also seen many changes in contracts between teacher and the board (school) of 3 to 5 members. Only after the teacher's credentials as to her morals, her character and her reputation were scrutinized, then she was screened for her teaching ability. A 1907 contract reads: (in part) In consideration of ..... faithfully agreeing to perform duties of a teacher to best of her ability, and according to law, to impartially govern all pupils, to keep daily records, to prepare reports required by the board, and to execute diligence in preserving property belonging to the district and shall instruct 32 weeks commencing on the 2nd day of September, 1907.

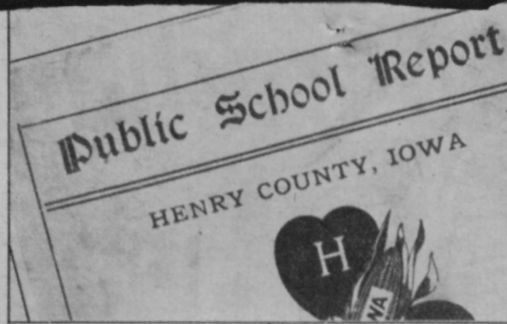

By 1922, report cards became "Teacher's Report to Parents" and was 3½ by 6 inches when folded once, covering ten subjects. There were 48 words directed toward the parents including a warning to have the child in school every day until age 16 or until he had passed the 8th grade examination! That was the goal of every student: To write and to pass the Eighth Grade Examinations in which the student traveled to the county seat court house and under the watchful eye of the County Superintendent of Schools were allowed two days to write the exams.

Those earning above 70% in each subject passed! Those who did not were not graduates! Those who did were issued a huge certificate stating the pupil thereon had successfully completed the eight grades and could enter the High School of his choice. Salaries had risen and by 1929 had reached $80.00 or more monthly.

By 1940 a PROGRESS REPORT went to the parents. In 1951 this report showed 6 periods of 6 weeks each or a 9 month term. The report included an invitation to the parents to visit. (One sentence). No instructions to the teacher or to the pupil. Ten subjects were covered for the 6th grader. Grade markings were: S1, S2, S3, S4, S5, and "U" for failure. Salaries had tripled.

The latest type report comes marked: A, B, C, D, as shown on a grandson's (of the author) report. Today the latest wrinkle in some sections is to allow the student to evaluate his own achievement.

Eighty years is a long, long time; who will hazard a supposition as to the coming century's changes?

Our Newest Sporting Tradition

National Hunting and Fishing Day

by Bob Delfay

Americans, by and large, were never as environment conscious as they are today. Ecology has become a household word with the growing concern about cleaner air and water and the protection of our natural resources.

This is as it should be, but too many last-hour crusaders on the environmental front seem to have lost sight of one fundamental fact—much of what we are today trying to save would not be around at all were it not for the farsighted efforts of this nation's hunters and fishermen. These sportsmen started the American conservation movement back in the 1800's and they remain the backbone of conservation today.

Fishermen first got wind of the problem as their favorite trout streams and bass ponds became polluted with industrial waste and other sewage, but their complaints about the dead fish fell upon deaf ears. No one seemed concerned about a few dead fish. And no one seemed to realize that they were but a harbinger of things to come. Ecology was a foreign word then, so the fisherman was left to fight his own battles.

Likewise, the hunter became aware of the important relationship between wildlife and environment long before the average American joined the crusade against environmental destruction. He noticed that wild game became scarce or disappeared entirely whenever suitable habitat was destroyed to make way for civilization.

The hunter and fisherman was not helpless in combating the menace, however. Through license fees and voluntary excise taxes on firearms and ammunition and rods and reels, they financed programs for habitat improvement, wildlife research and land acquisition. Their concern in this direction—and the $5 billion in funds for wildlife that it produced—have saved many wildlife species from extinction and has restored others to near record populations.

Ironically, the hunter and fisherman is now viewed by many neophyte environmentalists as a threat to ecology. They seem to have lost sight of the fact that sportsmen were the first to sound the alarm against environmental abuse and the first to work for and finance conservation programs.

Among the best references made available on this subject is entitled, "Placing American Wildlife Management in Perspective," available for 50 cents from the Wildlife Management Institute, 709 Wire Building, Washington, D.C. 20005. It is an excellent publication and recommended reading for all concerned with conservation and wildlife management.

September 25—A Great Day for Sportsmen

It might be the worst day of the year for fishing, and most hunting seasons will have hardly begun, but that will not prevent Saturday, September 25 from being the greatest day of the year for this nation's sportsmen. Thousands of sportsmen's clubs, normally the outdoorsman's sanctuary on a fall afternoon, will take on the air of small county fairs as hundreds of guests visit the grounds to take part in special conservation activities, learn to shoot or cast, or watch a bird dog in action.

And at shopping centers, the day's normal crowd of shoppers will be swelled by thousands of enthusiastic visitors who have come, not only to shop, but to see Smokey the Bear, listen to a duck calling contest or take part in a trout fishing derby. All across the land, in an endless variety of outdoor activities, the nation's sportsmen will participate in National Hunting and Fishing Day, our newest sporting tradition.

From the cane fishing pole to the turkey shoot, from sunrise in a duck blind to the first day of trout season, there are many rich traditions involved in the hunting and fishing sports. And interwoven within these sporting rituals is the greatest tradition of all—the tradition of conservation.

Since the turn of the century, it has been the hunters and fishermen of this nation who have led the battle to conserve our natural resources. It was the sportsman, afield in search of serenity and recreation, who first witnessed the ill effects of our expanding civilization on fish and wildlife, and it was the sportsman who insisted that something be done. He provided the motivation for conservation legislation, and he provided the money to make the programs work—just as he does today. Yet the sportsman has never received public recognition for his role as a conservationist. In fact, he has often come under fire as an enemy of conservation by those unfamiliar with the facts. Until now. National Hunting and Fishing Day on September 25 will do more to earn the sportsman his long overdue recognition than any single program in the history of the hunting and fishing sports.

Traditionally approved unanimously by both Houses of Congress, proclaimed by the President, all 50 governors and over 500 mayors, and endorsed by 40 of the nation's leading conservation groups, National Hunting and Fishing Day is intended to enlist the support of all Americans in the conservation effort.

On September 25, the last Saturday in that month, sportsmen's clubs and conservation groups will host an incredible array of activities at shopping centers, sportsmen's clubs, town parks, and at a wide variety of locations in between.

From the Village Square Shopping Center in Dodge City, Kansas, to the Maple Hill Mall in Kalamazoo, Michigan, and Cinderella City Shopping Center in Denver, shopping centers across the map will host conservation exhibits and outdoor demonstrations of every description. While Mom marvels at a retriever exhibition in the parking area, her son will receive his first lesson in bait-casting from members of the local anglers' club. On her way from the hairdresser to the drug store, a lady shopper will pass by the Ducks Unlimited display where she will be amazed to learn how duck hunters have funneled over $30 million into Canada to increase the number of mallards in Mississippi. The Boy Scouts will give tips on camping, while Smokey the Bear hands out conservation literature to passing shoppers; and the local taxidermist will be on hand with exhibits of handsome trophy animals. Members of the state conservation department will explain to gathered shoppers how sportsman-financed management programs have increased the numbers of many game animals in the U. S. to the highest levels in history, and members of the local Audubon Society will explain that habitat destruction, not hunting, is the reason that geese no longer settle in local lakes.

While all of this is going on, Dad will marvel at an archery demonstration, watching as modern-day Robin Hoods send shaft after shaft into a saucer-sized bullseye, perhaps recalling his less successful youthful efforts with bow and arrow when he was content to hit the hay backstop. At the other end of the mall, a miniature turkey shoot using airguns will draw crowds of hopeful contestants trying to bag a bargain Thanksgiving dinner with three shots for a quarter. A table full of conservation literature, a decoy carver practicing that centuries-old art, a camping demonstration, where there are no centers or where sportsmen feel they can attract large crowds to their club—NHF Day will be observed with the traditional sportsmen's club "Open House" program. In areas where shopping center programs are not practical—areas

How a "Wingmaster" Remington 870 works with you instead of against you.

The super-smooth pump action of an 870 actually uses some of the force of recoil to set you up for that quick second shot.

No pump shotgun can completely eliminate the effects of recoil and the pull-push motion it takes to operate the action. But we make a gun that can help you keep them to a minimum—the "Wingmaster" Remington 870, the most popular pump action shotgun in the world.

Remington engineers gave the 870 an action that's smooth as silk. Its strong double action bars do away with twisting and binding, guarantee straight-line pumping, smooth feeding and positive ejection in any kind of weather, under any kind of hunting conditions. And all the metal parts in the action are vibra-honed to an almost mirror-like finish for even smoother operation.

An 870 takes advantage of recoil—instead of letting recoil take advantage of you. Recoil is basically a swift, backward motion. The same kind of motion it takes to work the pump action. With a little practice on an 870, you can work with the recoil, make it help you pull the fore-end back. When you combine these two motions, you can get your next round chambered quicker. And you'll be less likely to stray off target.

The test of a shotgun's true value is whether it's rugged enough to deliver dependable, reliable performance year after year. An 870 is designed to be rugged every inch of the way. With a highly polished barrel of forged ordnance steel to give you an outstanding pattern consistency. A receiver machined from solid steel for the utmost in safety and dependability. A stock and fore-end protected with Du Pont RK-W, a tough, hard, scratch-resistant finish that'll hold up through years of rough use and rougher weather.

Add the 870's surprisingly affordable price and its wide selection of gauges, barrel lengths and chokes (including extra barrels), and you'll understand why it's unbeatable for quality and value... "right out of the box".

What's more creative than baking? Baking a whole new easy, no-knead way with Fleischmann's Basic Refrigerator Dough. It's one simple, nutritious recipe that lets you feed your family economically and have fun at the same time. Because this dough turns fine ingredients into mouthwatering Crumb Cakes, or Apricot Go Rounds, Cinnamon Coffeecakes—or all three.

Just open a package of Fleischmann's Yeast and start with the basic recipe. Then divide it up to make any of our tempting ideas. But don't stop there. Because creativity's the whole idea behind our basic recipes. Experiment. Design. Create! And pretty soon you'll find there's no more fun than baking, especially if you're baking with Fleischmann's Yeast. So much fun, you'll want to try our big, economical 4 oz. jar—same fine Fleischmann's Yeast at a 20% savings.

Basic Recipe: Mix 1 c. flour,  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. sugar, 1 tsp. salt and 2 pkgs. undissolved Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast.

Heat  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. milk,  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. water and  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. margarine until liquids are very warm (120°-130°F.). Add to dry ingredients and beat 2 mins. at medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Add  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. flour and 2 eggs. Beat at high speed 2 mins. Stir in enough flour (about 3 cups) to make a very stiff batter. Cover tightly. Refrigerate 2 hours to 2 days. Turn onto floured board, divide in 3 pieces. Shape and fill as desired.

Crumb Cake: Blend until crumbly  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. flour,  $\frac{1}{2}$  c. sugar, 1 tsp. cinnamon and  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. margarine. Press one piece dough into greased 8" x 8" pan, sprinkle with crumbs. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 45 mins. Bake at 375°F. 20 mins. or until done. Cool. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar if desired.

Apricot Go Round: Combine  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. apricot preserves,  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. chopped walnuts and 1 tsp. grated lemon peel. Divide one piece dough into 9 pieces. Roll each into 10" ropes; loosely coil. Place 2 coils in center of greased baking sheet. Surround with remaining coils. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 45 mins. Press indentation into center of each coil. Spoon 1 tbsp. filling into indentations.

Bake at 375°F. 20 mins. or until done.

Cinnamon Coffecake: Combine  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. raisins,  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. sugar,  $\frac{1}{4}$  c. chopped walnuts, 1 tbsp. margarine and  $\frac{1}{2}$  tsp. cinnamon. Roll one piece dough to 8" x 12". Put on greased baking sheet. Spread filling down center third. Slash dough on both sides cutting from filling to outer edges. Fold strips at an angle across filling, alternating from side to side. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 1 hour. Bake at 375°F. 20 mins. or until done. Decorate with icing.
