Veteran Board Member Retiring

Clare Herriman, a 14-year veteran member of Tawas Area Board of Education, announced Monday that he plans to retire at the end of his current four-year term on June 30.

Five persons have filed for two vacancies on the board of education. Besides Herriman's slot, the four-year term of Willard (Bill) Dillon expires on June 30.

Dillon will be seeking re-election to another four-year term and was one of the six candidates filing nominating petitions at the board of education's business office on Newman Street by Monday afternoon's deadline.

Other candidates include Albert Astala, 527 Ninth Avenue, Tawas City; Stanley Brockenbrough, 114 First Street, Tawas City; Lola Ho-facer, 1077 North US-23, East Tawas; Thomas Huck, 1395 Laidlaw Road, Tawas City; Jon Obermeyer, 502 Main Street, East Tawas.

Herriman's first stint on the board of education was a two-year term when he was elected to succeed Donald Deering, who had been appointed to succeed Harold Hammond. Deering and Hammond combined to serve the district for two years.

Elected next to a four-year term, Herriman served in various capacities on the board of education and was board president for one term.

"My children are grown now and I do not have anyone attending school. I feel that someone else with children in school should be given the opportunity to serve the district," said Herriman.

The outgoing trustee said that his 14 years on the board of education provided a satisfying experience and expressed appreciation to voters and citizens for the confidence placed in him during his tenure.

Waterways Dock Gets Two Federal Grants

Two different grants totaling $605,899 have been funded by the United States Department of Interior for harbor improvements at the Michigan Waterways Commission Dock, East Tawas.

A spokesman for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources announced Monday that $530,899 for harbor improvement had been received through the Land, Water and Conservation Fund, while a supplemental grant of $75,000 has been approved by the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission.

Earlier this year, the project received $125,833 in LWCF money for a boat launching project planned by the DNR.

This latest LWCF project is part of the over-all program which started several years ago. The initial phase saw construction of a new steel pier at the end of the old Michigan Waterways Commission Dock. That project was funded through a congressional appropriation and supervised by the United States Army Corps of Engineers.

The funding approved April 4 will finance new mooring facilities within the harbor area completed two years ago, plus rehabilitation of the existing piers and constructing of a new finger pier.

Also included will be a new parking lot, walkway, lighting and a comfort station.

When completed, the new harbor will provide some of the finest boating and fishing facilities on Lake Huron.

PINE TREES with roots close to the top of the ground were particularly vulnerable to last Thursday's storm. A high wind ranging up to 60 miles per hour knocked down trees and utility poles in the area, but the local storm was not as severe as in other parts of the state. These two pictures were snapped at East Tawas Friday afternoon and show how shallow-rooted trees toppled before the wind.—Tawas Herald Photos.

No Jumping in Streets, but TA Back in Good Graces of U of M

Tawas Area High School has been placed back on the accredited list of the University of Michigan Bureau of School Services.

Formal announcement that the school now meets or exceeds all U of M accreditation standards came through a report from Philip F. Hanson, university consultant, who visited the school February 28.

Although citizens of the district, students and administrators are not expected to perform hand-springs in the streets over the announcement, there can be cause for mild rejoicing.

The high school lost its accreditation July 1, 1973, when a visitation report indicated five violations of 12 standards. The school had been accredited on a provisional basis for the preceding two years, but the school had a long history of accreditation which extended back beyond the days of reorganization.

Accreditation by the university is considered a measuring stick for comparing state school programs. When the school lost this high rating, the high school building was overcrowded and the upper six grades were forced into attending classes on a split day basis. With a drop in enrollment, the school is now back on a normal school schedule.

Lack of adequate space was not the only reason for losing accreditation, as reported by Hanson. He pointed out that the school had been improving programs for students for the past several years.

"Activities for students have improved and increased in numbers with the full days of school. On the day of the visit, 120 of 700 students were participating in a day-long forensic contest," said Hanson.

He also said that staff and student morale was much better than previous visits during the split day schedule. "There is much greater participation in all extra class activities, including sports for both boys and girls," he said.

"The course of studies has been changing over the years to provide better opportunities for students. The emphasis has been on increasing the career, pre-vocational and vocational offerings. For example, an off-campus program in health occupations takes place at the local hospital and is thriving. Also, a home-building program builds a house each year, providing many experiences in various skill trades for those students," said Hanson.

In addition, Hanson said, "the building looks clean and well tended. The staff has been especially productive to keep up the school while it was on double sessions for several years."

The visitation found no violations, but Hanson said the school has been very timely in the past several years "to keep the curriculum serving the changing needs of the student population." He said this effort should continue.

He also pointed out that the library-media center is "about full of materials." As more materials come in, more space will be needed, "maybe soon," said Hanson.

That was the major point stressed nearly 10 years ago when the U of M visitor found the library overcrowded. Despite lowering of enrollment, the library still has a space problem.

Annual TA School Election on June 11

At its regular meeting Monday night, Tawas Area Board of Education established Monday, June 11, as the date for the annual school election.

Monday, May 14, 5:00 p. m., is the last day for registering for the election.

In other business, Gerald Bellen, representing the Iosco County Fair Society, was present at the meeting to invite the Tawas Area High School Marching Band to participate in the county fair parade on July 28.

Bellen said the school band had participated in the annual fair parade some years ago, but had discontinued its participation. Bellen emphasized the fair was a county-wide event and encouraged participation. He said the fair society would contribute $50 to the school to help defray costs.

Trustee Susan Rieth was appointed to represent this school district in the annual election of officers June 4 for the Iosco Intermediate School District. One member from each school district in the county will elect trustees to fill two six-year vacancies. Terms of Robert Elliott and Josephine DiLoreto are expiring.

Marilyn Barry, junior high mathematics teacher and chairman of the regional mathematics competition May 6, 7 and 8 at Oscoda, sponsored by the Michigan Council of Teachers of Mathematics, explained the upcoming program and invited members of the board of education to attend.

Three hundred students are expected to compete in the tournament and a total of 1,000 persons are expected for a mini-open house to be held at Wurtsmith Air Force Base.

She stressed that the competition provides one of the few outside academic activities for students at the top 75 junior high school level. The top 75 students will receive T-shirts imprinted with the words, "Math Expert," and will be competing at the state level.

Mrs. Barry said that service clubs and teachers organizations were assisting with financing the program.

Routine Matters for County Board

Routine matters were handled Wednesday by the Iosco County Board of Commissioners, but one saw the continuance of agitation between the commission and the friend of the court's office.

A voucher submitted by Stephen H. Naegele, prosecuting attorney, for the sum of $1,250, was denied by the commission. The bill was for legal assistance to the friend of the court in collecting support money from parents.

Under a cooperative reimbursement program with the state, local government is given an incentive for tracing down fathers who owe support money as a means to reduce the cost of Aid to Dependent Children.

A percentage of the money collected goes to the county's general fund and the state provides legal assistance funds to the friend of the court to handle the matter.

In this instance, however, the county commission pointed out in its denial that Naegele is a full time county prosecutor and receives a salary from the county for such service.

The commission directed that cooperative reimbursement funds be used to retain attorneys not under full time employment with the county.

In other matters, Roger Samuels was appointed county building custodian immediately at a rate of $4 per hour. Other custodians receive an hourly rate of $3.75 per hour effective April 9 and a custodian helper receives $3 per hour. (See COMMISSION, page 6.)

Pitts Stands Mute, Court Enters 'Not Guilty Plea'

Standing mute at his arraignment Monday, a plea of not guilty to a first degree murder charge was entered for Donald Pitts, 39, Wilber Township.

Judge Allan C. Miller established a pretrial date for May 3, 1:30 p. m. The defendant was granted a $1,000 nonlegal fee budget for investigative work.

Pitts has been held without bond at the Iosco County Jail since March 24, when he allegedly fired a shotgun blast which killed Kenneth E. Hoepfner, 28, Oscoda.

Injured in the blast was Marilyn Pitts, 33, estranged wife of the defendant. She was released later from Tawas Hospital.

The shooting took place at Mrs. Pitts' trailer home at 2887 Sherman Road, Wilber Township. Pitts was arrested later at his own home and offered no resistance.

Wind Played Havoc With Trees-Utility Lines in Storm

Gale winds up to 60 miles per hour and blowing snow last Thursday night interrupted service to some 15,000 Consumers Power customers in the northern region.

Starting on the west side of the upper half of the Lower Peninsula and working its way in an easterly-northeasterly direction across the state, the storm played havoc with trees here in Iosco County.

Ornamental pine trees in yards of residences at East Tawas were particularly hard hit, the high wind pushing trees over on residential and garage roofs in a number of instances. Sand Lake Road west of Tawas City was partially blocked by fallen trees.

This area escaped the worst part of the week-end storm, which saw 230,000 homes without power in the Detroit-Oakland County area and 800 trees were blown over in the ice storm which hit Detroit.

Consumers Power Company linemen and customer service representatives in this region spent 3 1/2 days working around the clock in an attempt to restore service to customers in the top 31 counties of the Lower Peninsula.

By 10:00 a. m. Sunday, the utility had completely restored service to all of its customers.

Much of the service interruption was caused by trees being blown over and poles being flattened, both contributing to downed lines and extremely difficult locations to reach.

Several of the utility's vehicles were stuck in mud and wet ground in the restoration process.

In at least two instances, state police reported that the utility made emergency repairs to residences where elderly people were patients on life support machines.

The solid shelf of ice on Tawas Bay soon disintegrated and was blown out into Lake Huron, only to return Sunday during a shift of the wind.

"Hopefully, old man winter has had his last fling in Northern Michigan," states H. Rex Spell, district personnel assistant for Consumers Power Company. The utility extends its appreciation to customers for being patient while service was being restored.

Hale School Studies Vocational Change

An important new change in vocational training is being studied by Hale Area School administrators for possible incorporation into the curriculum this year.

According to a report given at Monday night's meeting of the board of education, the state department of education has agreed to establish a pilot vocational program next term in Hale Area School District.

Karen Schmidt, special education director for the school, said the principal change in this new program would be a dramatic reduction in the number of students per certified instructor.

Rather than having eight to 20 students, the instructor will be working in various business places with only one or two students.

Supt. Wayne Case said the administration is now investigating the possibility of accepting this pilot program, which would have openings for 20 to 30 students.

In other business, the board of education approved a six-week summer recreational program to be handled at the elementary unit by Janet Mayes, physical education teacher.

The low bid of Powers Aluminum for completing the second phase of energy saving improvements at the elementary unit was accepted. Under this program, five windows in each classroom will be replaced by two windows. In addition, the rooms will be insulated, rewired and ceilings will be dropped.

Rooms to be remodeled are located in the original wing of the school. Last year, four rooms were remodeled in the first phase of this important program.

The board of education received and reviewed the school's preliminary athletic budget for next term, discussed remodeling for energy saving and barrier free design in the administration office and gave consideration to replacing a nine-year-old pickup truck.

Approval was given to install sanitary sewer to one of the relocatable classrooms.

Easter vacation started Monday at Hale Area School and students are to return to classes next Monday.

IT WAS A TOUGH WINTER on bridges in Tawas City. Work started Tuesday by the department of public works on making repairs to the Mathews Street bridge, which was damaged months ago when an automobile went out of control and crashed into the railing. ### Alley's Bill Aid to Wood Harvesters

State Rep. Tom Alley has co-sponsored legislation to enable wood harvesters to buy farm license plates for their vehicles, rather than the more costly commercial plates.

"Wood harvesters should have this tax break," Alley said. "They are engaged in a business which provides us with needed raw products, as is the farmer. The trucks and truck-tractors they need to harvest our forest products should rightfully receive the same consideration we give to farm vehicles."

Farm vehicles are taxed at the rate of 74 cents per 100 pounds empty weight. Commercial plates for a truck range upwards from $1.08 per hundred pounds, depending on weight. A truck or truck-tractor used to haul a trailer is taxed at a fee ranging from $243 depending on the weight.

"The bill would mean a considerable savings for wood harvesters," Alley said. "This is particularly important since many of them are independent small businessmen, working at a narrow margin of profit. They need whatever tax savings we can give them."

The bill has been referred to the house committee on roads and bridges and has been placed on the agenda for consideration on April 11 (today). "We are working within a time limit in order to gain the maximum benefit through passage of this legislation," Alley explained. He added that he is optimistic that the bill will be approved and later signed into law, pointing out that would be beneficial to the wood harvesters in the 105th house district.

"I can see no serious objections to the bill," Alley said, "other than that it would mean a modest loss of revenue for the state, but I feel that those who harvest our wood products need the money more than the state."

Utilities Expand Protection System

Michigan's "Miss Dig" program, the utility communication system that has reduced damage to underground utility lines in the state, is expanding its protection system to cover overhead electric lines in the entire Lower Peninsula in an effort to reduce public contact with these lines.

The date for the expansion of the program was April 2, according to J. E. Wessels, district manager for Consumers Power Company. The expanded program will cover all of the electric service area of Consumers Power Company, as well as the service area of the Detroit Edison Company.

Consumers Power Company and Detroit Edison are the primary participants of this new overhead electric safety program. Other major electric systems participating are Indiana and Michigan Electric Company and Michigan Power Company. A number of municipal and cooperative electric utilities are also participating. The eventual goal is to have all electric systems in Michigan in the program.

Anyone working near overhead electric lines or excavating should call the Miss Dig toll-free number, 800-482-7171, at least two working days (48 hours) before beginning their project.

Wessels said the call will be answered by a trained operator who will request information of the work location, the type of work being done, the caller's name and telephone number, etc. This information is dispatched on a private line teletype system to the participating utilities and governmental agencies.

Work Progressing After Winter Delay on Tawas City Unit Classroom Addition

Young Scout's Dedication Leads to Eagle Ceremony

Mark L. Baughn, 13-year-old Houghton Lake Middle School student, is not only dedicated to the Boy Scouts of America movement, but he has been persistent. A member of Troop No. 974 of Tawas City, the youngster received his Eagle Scout badge Saturday afternoon during a ceremony held at the Jesse C. Hodder American Legion Hall, Tawas City. Pinning this highest award of scouting on Mark's multi-award decorated chest was Thomas Pockrandt, scoutmaster of Troop No. 974. Pockrandt was a leader when the youngster started in scouting at Oscoda. When Mark's parents moved to Houghton Lake, he commuted to Tawas City each week in order to advance in his scout training. He has had perfect attendance. Of every 100 boys who start in scouting, only three reach the high rank of Eagle. Pockrandt said that Mark, who has been senior patrol leader for nine months, had made every rank on schedule and that it was a rare event for one to reach the rank of Eagle at the age of 13½ years.

Of those 100 boys starting scouting, 12 receive their first church contact through scouting, one enters the clergy, 18 develop hobbies, one uses skills developed through scouting to save a life and 17 become leaders.

Introduced during the ceremony was James F. Mark, a long time local leader, who became an Eagle Scout in 1929.

James French, Mark's principal at Houghton Lake, was guest speaker. Other speakers included Philip Labadie and John N. Brugger, who represented the local sponsoring organization, Jesse C. Hodder American Legion Post.

IN THE SERVICE—

Member of Top SAC Squadron

AIC James W. Pirtle Jr., son of Mrs. James Pirtle, Oscoda, is a member of the best civil engineering squadron in the Strategic Air Command (SAC).

Airman Pirtle is a construction equipment operator at Wurtsmith Air Force Base, with the 379th Civil Engineering Squadron.

The squadron, which is responsible for the maintenance of all facilities at Wurtsmith, has an outstanding record in the SAC competition. In 1975, the unit was selected as squadron of the year and first runner-up in 1974, 1976 and 1977.

The airman is a 1976 graduate of Oscoda Area High School.

Poppe Promoted in Air Force

Michael E. Poppe, son of Mrs. Rhea J. Poppe, East Tawas, has been promoted to airman first class in the United States Air Force.

The airman, an aerospace ground equipment repairman at Beale Air Force Base, California, serves with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

Airman Poppe, a 1973 graduate of Tawas Area High School, received an associate applied science degree in mechanics from Ferris State College, Big Rapids. His wife, Tina, is the daughter of Mari L. MacMurray, Tawas City.

Although temporarily delayed by cold weather and snow, construction is progressing rapidly on the six-classroom addition at the Tawas City Elementary Unit.

In a report to the board of education Monday night, Irvin Hacker, architect, said that the structure had been completely enclosed and the interior was being heated in a drying out process.

The architect reported that the next step would be for Mako Construction Company, general contractor, to complete compaction of soil and to pour the concrete slab.

He could foresee no holdup on delivery of materials and reported that the furnace was in operation and electrical work was partially completed.

Hacker was here Monday to inspect work and he said only minor corrections were required.

Members of the board of education viewed suggested plans for two science classrooms and two alternative plans for remodeling the boys' rest-room.

The board of education accepted a report from administrators which recommended the purchase of $19,095 worth of furniture and equipment for the science rooms. Inasmuch as the total exceeds the amount allocated for this purpose by $1,500, the board of education directed its budget committee to review finances and proposed expenditures this week prior to giving its final approval.

Supt. Robert Halle and Prin. Herman Rollin said that furniture being used in existing classrooms would be moved to the new classrooms after completion of the structure. Rollin pointed out that some of the equipment would have to be replaced in the near future, but he said that existing desks were adequate to start the new term.

The administration obtained bids on tables, chairs and lockers and recommended that proposals be awarded as follows: Farnell Company, 30 tables at a cost of $46 each for a total of $1,380; Farnell Company, 60 chairs, $780; McFadden Corporation, 234 lockers, $9,289; Farnell Company, base and wall cabinets, $7,646.

The superintendent reported that the budget at the start of the term totaled $20,000 for furniture and equipment. He said that it is hoped that additional desks may be obtained for the school if the budget permits.

He also stressed the need for equipping the unit's new library with furniture. The library is to be moved into larger quarters and temporary furniture will be used. He felt that fixtures would have to be upgraded in future years.

The elementary principal also stressed the need for acquiring a public address system for the unit to make announcements. He said it was difficult to make announcements in the various classrooms at the present time and would be even more complicated when the unit is expanded to 20 rooms.

Outright purchase of the equipment as recommended by the administration was defeated by a four to two roll call of the board of education. An amending motion calling for a review of the budget prior to authorization was given unanimous approval.

Trustee Randall DeWyse expressed the opinion that the purchase should be tabled for two weeks, but received no support to his motion when other members pointed out that bids were good for only 30 days, that there probably would be a price increase after that time and the trucking industry strike could cause a delay in delivery.

DeWyse was critical of the administration for not reviewing bids with the board of education before making recommendations on furniture and equipment purchases.

During discussion, the school architect said that the manner in which gas is to be provided the science rooms to heat Bunsen burners is still in question, due to a change in pipes for the heating system. Because of the small amount of gas used in experiments, propane gas may be utilized.

Commission

The commission authorized signing of a contract with the City of Tawas City for providing police service for one year. Cost of this service to Tawas City for 1979 will be $38,930, an increase of $7,322 over 1978.

Under the contract, the county agrees to provide 24-hour police protection and to enforce city ordinances. The city appropriation finances the hiring of two additional deputies for the sheriff's department, plus expense of operating a patrol car, but the two deputies are not limited to patrol only in the city limits.

A new fee schedule recommended by the Iosco County Building and Safety Inspection Department was approved.

The commission increased the rate of pay to a family service aide working out of cooperative extension service from $3.50 to $3.70 per hour, retroactive to January 1.

A new agreement was signed authorizing the Region 7-B Employment and Training Consortium to take over this county's administration of CETA responsibilities.

Roger Jackson, executive director of Tawas Chamber of Commerce, was appointed to fill the vacancy of Leo Gartland on the county planning commission. Edward J. Barry, representing the county parks and recreation commission, outlined current plans for submitting application for federal funds to assist local units of government in recreational projects. Among projects being considered in the application are expansion of the East Tawas City Park, the AuSable River Mouth Park and development of facilities at the mouth of the Tawas River. Other projects are expected to be added to the application.

Barry reported that Consumers Power Company and the United States Forest Service are currently negotiating for a parcel of land on the AuSable River below Foote Dam for development of a boat launching ramp. At the present time, fishermen are camping in unauthorized areas of Consumers Power Company property.

Barry is assisting all local units of government in writing applications for grants.

Delay Force Main for Possible Federal Grant Consideration

A much discussed force main connecting the Second Avenue lift station with the waste water treatment plant is expected to have another construction delay; only this delay will be intentional.

City Mgr. Lowell Thomas advised the Tawas City Water Board Monday night that, because of the fact that the second step of a federal grant application is nearly ready for approval, further action on the force main should be shelved for the present.

Thomas pointed out that the project would be eligible for 80 percent participation if the grant is approved.

The matter had been brought up again Monday night by the water board after years of consideration. Voters approved bonding for the project a number of years ago, but the project hit a number of snags through delay in permits from the state.

Following two different methods of testing for ground water infiltration into the system, the project was approved by the state.

The proposed ductile steel main would be constructed along leased right-of-way owned by the Detroit and Mackinac Railway, connecting the Second Avenue station with the sewage treatment plant. The main would cross Dead Creek near the railroad bridge.

Because of serious flooding conditions in the spring, the force main was deemed a necessity by the water board many years ago.

Tawas Kiwanis Club Presented With Plaque

It is an honor which reflects the dedicated efforts of each club member under the able leadership of Robert Richter, who was president during 1977-78.

The Ruby Section is a category of clubs with 45-75 members. The Tawas club is one of 52 clubs.

New Cancer Organization Aids Patients

A new organization to aid cancer patients and their families to overcome the fears, problems and anxieties of their condition and to promote strength, understanding and feeling is announced by Dorothy Taylor, moderator. Sponsored by American Cancer Society, the Self-Help Group for Cancer Patients and Families, as it is officially called, is also approved by local medical staff.

DESPITE THE RETURN of winter weather late last week, the annual smelt dipping season will return to the Tawas River and Whitney Drain this week-end or during the next week or two. Scenes such as the one above will be re-enacted on both streams when the silvery horde of fish is met by downstate and local dippers. What will be missing again this year, thankfully say residents of Whitney Township, will be the annual orgy of demolished property and rowdiness at the "Big Ditch." The change to a rather calm atmosphere last season was no accident, through cooperation of Michigan State Police, the Department of Natural Resources and Arenac County Sheriff's Department in stepping up patrols during the heavy influx of fishermen. Officers also will be stationed at the Singing Bridge public access site to prevent camping or parking of trailers. A ban on open fires has been placed in Whitney Township between the hours of 6:00 p. m. and 6:00 a. m. As the result of all this added police protection, residents of Whitney Township have been given peace of mind, following years of abuse by drunken visitors.—Tawas Herald Photo.

NO LONGER DO THEY SAY: OVER THE HILL TO THE POOR FARM

Of all the changes in national conscience and attitudes during past generations, none has been more dramatic or far-reaching than the aid provided poor and unfortunate persons through social welfare.

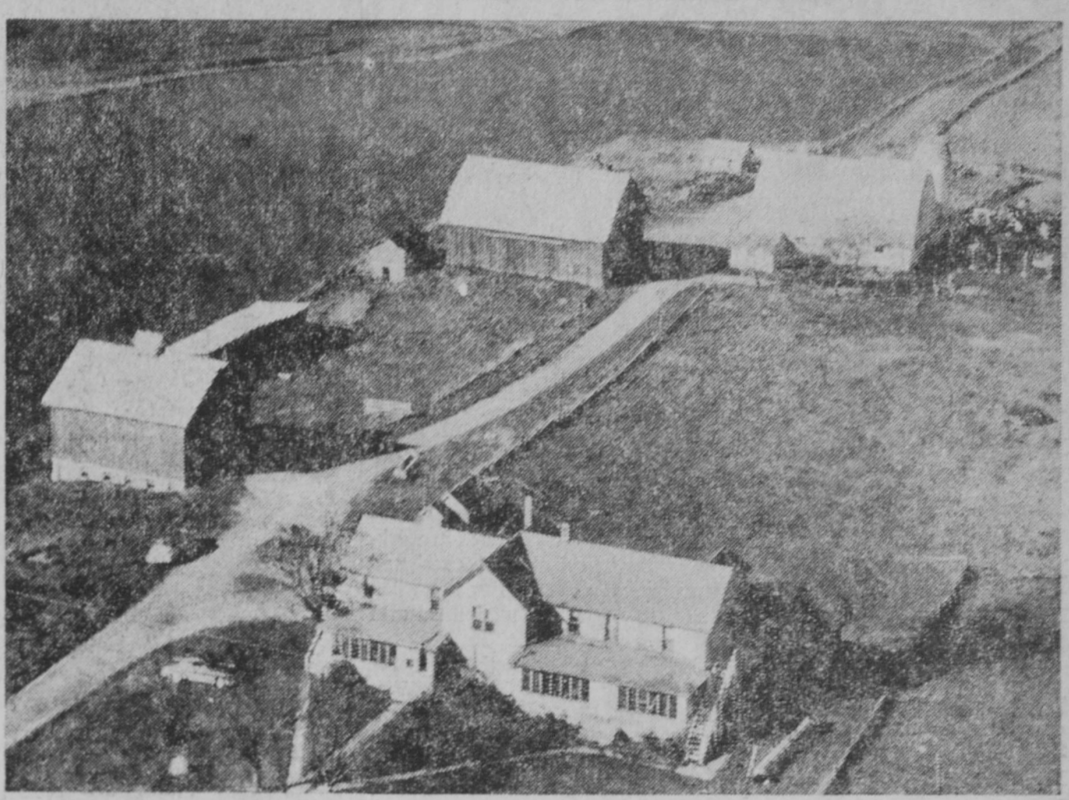

This featurette is not intended to take an in-depth look at services provided today, the reasons for changes or cost to the public; it provides but a brief, backward glimpse of the former county poor commission, its activities during more than 70 years of Isosco's history and some of the changes wrought since 1939 when the old poor commission was replaced by an entirely new system of social welfare.

Today's Isosco County Medical Care Facility is but one outgrowth of that new system and new thinking. When opened in 1965, it was dedicated to "adding life to years, rather than adding years to life."

A vastly different picture was portrayed in an earlier era when the lot of hundreds of persons—indigent, old, sick or homeless adults and children—was alleviated at the county poor farm. No comparison can nor should be made between the old county poor farm and today's medical care facility—the philosophy behind each would be worlds apart, especially since enactment of the Social Security Act and other social welfare laws.

The term, "welfare system," has been the subject of a variety of interpretations and definitions during the past four decades. The majority of citizens do not expect to need its services and may term the system a "taxpayer's burden;" on the other hand, others feel that being on welfare is not a matter of personal failure, but of social conditions created by a larger economy.

In earlier times, it was possible for family, religious organizations and neighbors to provide for those in need during uncomplicated days when life was closely tied to the land. Public welfare's roots were founded on the religious belief that man is his brother's keeper, but it was generally felt that pauperism for an adult was the end result of one's indolence, immorality or intemperance. It was no disgrace for one to be poor; it was a disgrace, however, to be a pauper and a ward of society.

THIS AERIAL VIEW snapped in 1956 shows the former infirmary and Isosco County Farm barns on M-55, long considered as one of the best agricultural operations in the area. At the time the picture was snapped, the old poorhouse was known as Huron Rest Home, a nursing facility for elderly people. The building was unoccupied when destroyed by fire in August 1972.

Historically, poor laws and poor relief in this country were patterned after the English Poor Law System and, when Michigan became a state in 1837, counties were authorized to appoint three superintendents of the poor to administer the poorhouse and care for the destitute.

Isosco County was organized in 1857 and, as early as 1869, had a poorhouse. In the fall of that year, the county board of supervisors voted to purchase 320 acres of land from Atty. J. A. F. Scheffler of Tawas City for a poor farm. That property was located in Tawas Township on today's Sparton Road off Plank Road.

In 1871, the general form of poor relief was established by the legislature with the State Board of Charities, which assumed general supervision of poorhouses. An agent of the board was selected in each county to care for dependent children.

By 1883, 100 acres of land had been cleared and under cultivation on Isosco County's poor farm. The property included a house for the superintendent and his family, as well as providing residential quarters to care for needy persons.

The entire idea behind Isosco County's system was to make the poor farm a self-sustaining operation. Produce and crops grown on the farm were sold at a profit to help defray expenses.

A complete record of the county poor commission and poor farm operation is found in three large ledgers still in the files of the Isosco County Register of Deeds. On those ledgers stamped in gold leaf is the title, "Record of the Superintendents of the Poor."

Those ledgers contain minutes of monthly meetings of the county poor commission, a record of the names of inmates, the cause for their pauperism, discharge dates and cost to the county for operation of the institution.

Those ledgers reveal that from April 1874 to July 1893, a total of 207 different inmates had resided at the poor farm at one time or another. Some of the causes of pauperism were listed as follows: Paralyzed by accident, intemperance of parents, weak mind, death of father, insane, desertion of husband or parents, fits, old age and a wide range of illnesses ranging from consumption to frozen feet.

Ernest Brown was listed as superintendent of the poor farm in 1905 and 1906, and John Leggatt supervised the operation in 1912. Lewis Pringle was superintendent of the farm in 1911 and received an annual salary of $600. Among well-known names serving on the poor commission were Thomas Bradley and Thomas Davison.

According to one ledger, produce and stock sold by the poor farm in 1906 amounted to $994.81 and $791.96 in 1909.

The original dwelling on the county poor farm was destroyed by fire sometime after 1900. In 1921, the county purchased a large farm from Edward Ely on Hemlock Road (M-55). One of the finest farms in the county, it was originally developed by Reuben Wade, a Civil War veteran. A resident of Tawas City, he was one of the original subdividers of recreational lots around Sand Lake.

In January 1921, the old county farm on Sparton Road comprising 165 acres was sold to William Schmalz for $8,000. It was estimated that an additional 75 acres owned by the county and not included in the transaction would bring another $2,000.

The new farm of 120 acres was purchased at a cost of $9,500. With necessary changes and additions to the house, the total cost was $14,000.

People of the county had voted in 1920 to issue bonds for construction of the new infirmary on the old farm, but purchase of the Ely property was at a figure considerably less than had the supervisors gone ahead and built a new infirmary.

"It is estimated that, had the latter course been pursued, the total investment would have been between $20,000 and $25,000," reported The Tawas Herald.

A 1925 act of the Michigan legislature consolidated the poor laws of the state, but introduced no changes in the philosophy and character of relief. Administration of relief was provided by superintendents of the poor, who were responsible to county boards of supervisors.

Cost of operating the poor farm was $6,596 in 1920, according to a report from Charles W. Curry, superintendent of the poor. With credits amounting to $1,689.58, received through the sale of cattle, horses and potatoes, the net expense was $4,906.42. Total number of inmates that year was nine.

Before the 1930s, the relatively slight need for public relief made it possible for the old poor relief structure to function effectively. It was not adequate, however, for the new and complex need which was to come into existence during the depression era.

During the economic crisis of the 1930s, Michigan's unemployment reached a peak of approximately 34 percent of the state's gainful workers in 1932. In Detroit and other industrial cities of the acute, unemployment was more severe than in the state as a whole. As the depression deepened, the emergency became more critical and increasingly large numbers of people needed assistance. Being poor was no longer considered a sign of wilful laziness or immorality.

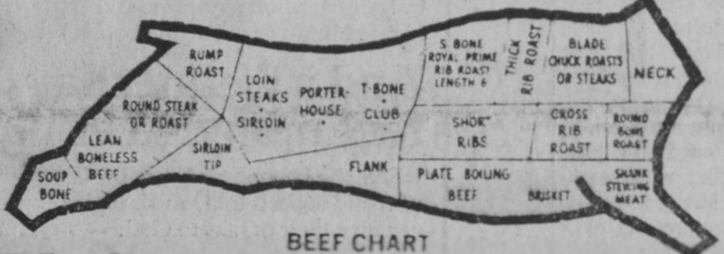

Although in 1932 the Isosco County poor farm still had only seven inmates and the cost of operation that year amounted to $4,561, organized charity in the state proved inadequate to meet the unprecedented need for relief and local governments assumed the greater part of the relief burden.

Swollen relief rolls and increasing tax delinquency soon brought local resources to the point of exhaustion and a gradual transition to centralized responsibility followed. A number of state and federal emergency relief acts were adopted and, in 1939, the state legislature passed the Michigan Social Welfare Act.

The new act gave the Michigan Social Welfare Commission responsibility for directing welfare and relief programs. County boards and departments of social welfare were provided to administer and carry out welfare and relief pro-

Hats Off to Building Trades Classes

It is always a great experience to watch eager, young faces moving into a new phase of their education and it was that way last week when this corner visited the new house being completed on Victoria Lane by building trades classes of Tawas Area High School.

Potential candidates for next fall's building trades I class were given the opportunity to observe older boys working on the house, followed by a briefing by one student and Robert Reasner of the vocational education department concerning the building trades program.

During the past six years, classes have taken part in planning and construction of six different houses which have been a valuable addition to the community. But, more importantly, numerous young people have acquired basic knowledge through this educational program which has provided necessary experience to gain employment in the building trades industry—locally and elsewhere.

In addition, others have gained experience and confidence in working with their hands which should prove invaluable in later life when they tackle jobs around their own homes.

Readers are invited to inspect the building trades house on Victoria Lane. They will see some remarkable craftsmanship displayed by youngsters under the close supervision of experienced teachers. The house is the finest yet constructed under the program and work will soon start on laying the foundation and pouring the concrete for next term's project.

This corner commends the boys and their teachers for their work and the school for an outstanding educational program.

Some Communities Are in Trouble

Iosco County residents can be thankful that its board of commissioners has long maintained a policy of adhering to federal guidelines concerning employment of persons under the CETA training act.

A number of counties, metropolitan areas and even smaller communities of this state are now in a wild scramble to find funds to retain regular hourly rated employees, financed under the CETA program.

Effective September 30, those persons hired under CETA for longer than 18 months will lose their jobs, unless local governments pick up the tab. In addition, there will be a drop in compensation for CETA-funded jobs.

Despite what is being said in many communities, the major thrust of CETA financing since its inception has been to provide training or retraining of persons on the unemployment rolls.

This much abused act was never intended to provide "free" financing to hire local police officers, road commission employees and other positions beyond a training period. When training was completed, the act required local governments to either fund the position or that CETA employee trained at federal expense could apply for a job elsewhere.

Readers will recall that some metropolitan areas laid off police officers and then rehired them under the CETA program, ignoring the fact that the officers were already trained. It was simply a device to take advantage of federal money and ignored all the guidelines.

This corner has no sympathy at all for those local units of government which tried to beat the act and now find themselves in a position where CETA employees have seniority under union contracts and will bump others out of jobs. It may not be that simple because of contract provisions with unions.

In Iosco's case, the commission adopted a policy of not retaining any employee under CETA for more than a year and has been commended for its program of training people, particularly property assessors, for this county and elsewhere in the state. The local board of commissioners should be commended for using good judgment.

Possible Roadblock for US-23 Plans

Last week's report on proposed present and future improvements to US-23 from Standish north to Alpena, appearing in this newspaper, neglected to say that there is one possible roadblock ahead.

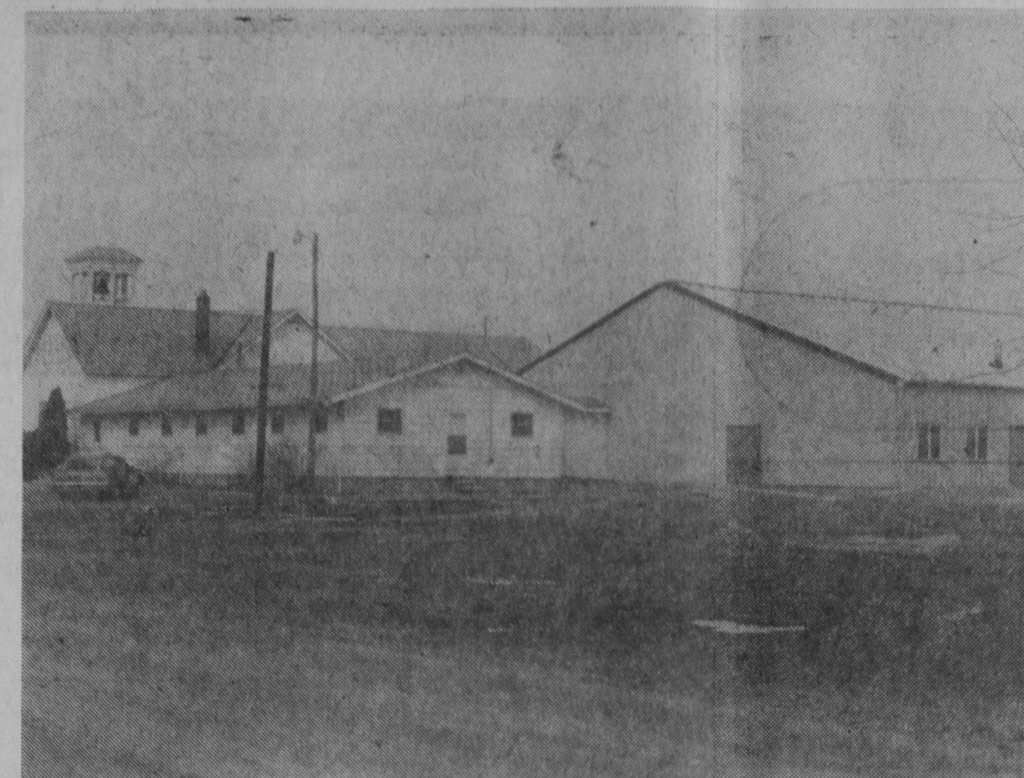

That possible roadblock is the current effort to roll back the transportation gas tax and license fee increases adopted last year by the legislature.

State transportation department officials say that if the petition drive to repeal these taxes is successful, the entire US-23 improvement program will be in jeopardy. Backers of the transportation package last year said that it would benefit all of Michigan and that outstate citizens would benefit in part through improved roads.

It is too bad that proposed US-23 improvements hinge on the outcome of the petition drive, which would place the entire transportation package before voters as a constitutional amendment. There are many controversial aspects of the total package and it stands a good chance of losing in any referendum.

TODAY'S Meditation

from The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide

The Upper Room

(Read Isaiah 53:1-11)

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." (John 12:32)

A successful writer once told me that during her first year as an author she had 77 rejections. But she did not give up.

Do you feel like a reject? Do friends seem cold and indifferent? Are your dreams not being realized? Rejection can make one feel like lepers of earlier times.

The lepers of Jesus' day were the rejects of society. They knew the pain of being shunned. It must have been hard until Jesus touched them and transformed their lives. Then, life took on meaning once again.

I felt rejected one day when I passed a former employee on the street and spoke to him. He lashed out, "Do not ever speak to me again." He was harboring an imagined grievance. Unsuccessfully, I tried to make amends. Yet, when sudden death invaded my home, he was the first to come to my assistance.

Rejection is only temporary. It must not prevent us from offering to the world the best that is in us.

PRAYER

Lord, when we experience rejection, give us strength. Enable us to know that we are accepted by You. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

The rejected Jesus is the hope of the world.—Martin S. Fidler (Columbia, Pennsylvania)

FLAMES WERE POURING out of the front porch and second story windows of the old Isosco County Infirmary the night of August 28, 1972, when equipment of the Tawas City Fire Department arrived at the scene. The property was operated by the county as a poor farm for about 35 years, first under supervision of Mr. and Mrs.

John Miller and later by Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Simons. It served more than 10 years as Huron Rest Home and its use was discontinued after the Isosco County Medical Care Facility was opened. The property was then purchased by Robert Curry, present owner.—Tawas Herald Photo.

County Farm

grams formerly under the jurisdiction of county superintendents of the poor, township supervisors and the county welfare relief commission.

The November 3, 1939, issue of The Tawas Herald reported that John Henry of East Tawas, a former member of the county poor commission, had been appointed chairman of the new Board of Social Welfare. Edgar Louks of Whittemore was named vice chairman and Willis Kraus of AuSable was the secretary.

Administration of the poor farm was relegated to a minor part of the new board's role in carrying out welfare and relief programs. Subsequent legislative acts saw an expansion of assistance caseloads which started immediately after World War II. Claims increased tremendously during 1949 and the rate of increase became more rapid than had been experienced before.

For many years, Charlie Simons Sr. was superintendent of the county farm. The farm had not only been used as a place for an infirmary, but under supervision of the county agricultural agent, it was developed as an experimental farm. Here, new kinds of crops and new farm procedures were tried out for the benefit of the county's agricultural industry.

Under Simons' direction, the poor farm was turned into one of the finest dairy operations in the region with an outstanding herd of Holstein cattle and excellent barns. The old residential building on the property was expanded for use as a county infirmary.

Because of continuing losses each year, operation of the property as a farming project was abandoned in the fall of 1953 by the Isosco Social Welfare Board. The livestock and equipment were sold at public auction and the farm was leased to Arthur Povish for one year.

Povish was high bidder to purchase the original farm, which included 120 acres, plus the infirmary and farm buildings, at a cost of $22,500. A second parcel added to the farm in later years was sold to Merlin Warner.

By November 1965, the Department of Social Welfare became known as the Department of Social Services. Change continued to be the keynote in the welfare system, bringing about many organizational, policy and program changes designed to improve coordination of delivery of financial and social services to people in need.

Consolidation of social services programs saw adoption of a new act in 1974 which saw a trend toward an increased assumption of local welfare costs by federal and state governments. During a five-year phasing out program, welfare costs to the county were dropped 20 percent annually, according to the base year cost of 1974. In 1979, the last year before the state takes over complete responsibility for paying welfare costs, Isosco's share is $3,300.

Administration of the program is handled by a three-member board, two appointed by the county board of commissioners and one by the governor. Board members represent the total community when accepting responsibility for serving on the board.

According to the state's handbook for members, "he represents the taxpayer, the board of commissioners, but in a more dramatic sense, he represents the clients to be served since they, too, are members of his community. He represents the conscience of society as he attempts to deal honestly with the human problems and needs created by the economic complexities of modern life."

One of those responsibilities is administrative and advisory policy making for the Isosco County Medical Care Facility constructed in 1965. During dedication of the facility, a representative of the state department of social services was reminded that in 1935, 81 of the 83 counties of Michigan had poorhouses. Only 18 remained in 1965 and he said he was thankful.

In receiving keys to the facility, County Welfare Board Chairman Henry remarked that, with construction of the new facility, people will not have to say they are "going over the hill to the poorhouse. I hope this facility is operated for what it was originally intended—to take care of our older people."

After sale of the county farm in 1954, the old infirmary was used for about 10 years as a private nursing home. Some patients, who recalled its early association as the county poorhouse, disliked staying there and more than one refused to do so. The county sheriff was called to pick up those who walked out and tried to make their way back to town along M-55. The old frame building, abandoned for years, finally burned to the ground—its long years of usefulness at an end.

WHAT CAUSES POTHOLE?—(1) Rain, sleet or snow works its way into the soil under the pavement. (2) When the temperature drops, the water freezes and expands. This pushes up the soil and pavement. (3) As thawing occurs, the water runs away and the soil recedes, creating a hole under the pavement. (4) A passing car or truck breaks the pavement, causing the familiar pothole. Tires can be seriously damaged by striking a pothole.

Pockmarked Streets Tough on Tires

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The winter of 1978-79, coldest and snowiest on the books for many sections of the United States, is expected to pockmark numerous streets and highways with a record number of potholes, the Tire Industry Safety Council reports.

Potholes can seriously damage tires, possibly leading to tire failure.

"Record-breaking snow, rain and cold weather in several areas of the nation are expected to cause millions of potholes, or chuckholes, in roadways from coast to coast," said Council Chairman Malcolm R. Lovell Jr. "Road builders estimate that if all the potholes were combined, there would be a crater at least 50 feet deep, one-fourth of a mile in diameter."

The National Weather Service says it has been the coldest winter on record from the northern Rockies across the Central Plains to the Midwestern States. Many of these previous records had been established only one year ago.

The cold lasted longer than usual in some areas. Four of the five Great Lakes were nearly 100 percent ice-covered for the first time in many years. New records were set for consecutive days of snow-covered ground from Montana through the Northern Plains eastward to Wisconsin and Illinois, forecasters noted.

MEA Blasts

Teacher Shortage

Report in State

EAST LANSING—Recent reports of potential teacher shortages have drawn criticism from the 92,000-member Michigan Education Association. Edith Swanson, vice president, said that "at best, such stories are misleading because they present a very narrow view of the total teacher supply picture."

Swanson was critical of reports which quoted Michigan State University officials as indicating that job prospects for potential teachers were considerably brighter than they were a few years ago.

"The job market for teachers is anything but good and our indication is that it will get worse," said Swanson.

She noted that a recent MSU study predicts an annual loss of 50,000 students in Michigan over the next several years. The results were based on a declining birth rate in the state.

"Despite the fact that boards of education now have the golden opportunity to reduce class sizes and thereby provide improved educational opportunities for children, their mind-set is in the other direction," observed Swanson. "Instead, they reduce the number of teachers. I can only assume that practice will continue. Consequently, there will be fewer teaching positions available to those already in the job market... let alone those who want to enter the field."

Forest Service

Lists Alternatives

Under Study

CADILLAC—The public is being asked to respond by June 8 to a series of five alternative forest service programs that would provide varying amounts of products and services from the nation's renewable resources in the next several decades.

The alternatives are presented in a draft report entitled "Alternative Program Directions, 1981-2030." Copies of the report are available from the Forest Service Regional Office in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and from the Forest Supervisor, Huron-Manistee National Forest, 421 South Mitchell Street, Cadillac, Michigan 49601.

Asst. Sec. of Agriculture M. Rupert Cutler said the report points out that shortages and higher prices of renewable resources are not inevitable. However, rising prices for goods and services obtained from wood, water, outdoor recreation and other renewable resources will have adverse economic, social and environmental impacts unless "we stop using these resources faster than we renew them."

The report states that the nation has a large forest and range base which, with more intensive management, could meet nearly all demands for those resources. The report analyzes the present and future demands for timber, water, range, forage, fish and wildlife, outdoor recreation and wilderness. "Everything the forest service does in the next several decades will be tied to this long-range plan and subsequent updates," Cutler said.

ASCS Talks Farm Income at Convention

About 500 farmer committeemen and employees of the Michigan Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) met in Grand Rapids April 3-5 to discuss farm income and ecology in rural areas. Attending from Iosco County were Harold Cholger, Donald Daniels and Kenneth Blake, county committeemen, and June Scott and Lillian Engle, office personnel.

Stewart N. Smith, Washington, D. C., told the group that the only way farmers would be able to get better prices for wheat and feed grains would be to cut plantings this spring. ASCS offers farmers who participate in government sponsored set-aside programs benefits such as loans, disaster protection and other incentives.

"Farmers must begin using the set-aside and diversion programs and begin balancing supply and demand so the market will pay reasonable profitable prices," said Smith. He warned that another seven-billion-bushel corn crop this year would depress prices to farmers.

On the ecology side of the meeting, Vernon L. Kretzschmer, chairman of ASCS in Michigan, spoke of the agricultural conservation program, aimed to clean Michigan streams and solve wind and water erosion problems.

Wood Burning Information Now Made Available

People thinking about using wood as a primary or supplementary home heating source will be interested in a new packet of information from the Energy Extension Service.

Developed especially for Michigan residents, the free packet includes five items. An article on wood stoves discusses their upkeep and use and the benefits of using wood rather than other heating fuels. A second article explores the mechanics of finding, cutting and collecting wood for fuel.

A fact sheet on fireplaces and a wood safety review are included, along with a bibliography of other articles on wood.

The packet is available by calling the energy hotline toll-free at 1-800-292-4704 or by writing Energy Extension Service, Energy Administration/Michigan Department of Commerce, Post Office Box 30228, Lansing, Michigan 48909.
