Medical Arts Building Gets County and City Approval

Following a public hearing Wednesday, Iosco County Board of Commissioners approved and established a project designating boundaries for a proposed medical arts facility at Tawas Hospital. Hearings were held both by the commission and the Tawas City Council to give an opportunity for interested persons to be heard concerning the project.

The proposed medical arts facility, to be located east of the present hospital, is to be financed through a federal loan program under direction of the Iosco Economic Development Corporation.

Plans were reviewed by the Iosco County Planning Commission, the Iosco EDC and Tawas City Planning Commission. In other matters, the commission established its next meeting Friday, September 7, due to the state convention on September 5. The commission adopted a resolution endorsing a Housing and Urban Development grant for the purpose of assisting permanent Iosco County home owners, particularly the elderly and limited income families, to improve existing homes.

The commission endorsed an application of the City of Tawas for state funds to assist in construction of new bridges on Sixth Avenue and Whittemore Street. The resolution stated that the bridges provided direct access to county offices from outlying areas, as well as serving commercial shopping and medical facilities. The resolution also noted that the bridges were vital to assume quick and safe access to areas of the county for fire protection, sheriff's department services and school transportation services.

The commission endorsed a basic grant program to provide group foster care for juveniles within Iosco, Arenac and Ogemaw Counties and requested the state legislature to appropriate funds so that the program can be continued.

Attendance of personnel of the Iosco County Equalization Department at short courses conducted by the Michigan Assessor's Association was approved. John Rose, Denise Brown and Barbara Eppert are to attend a session September 18-20 at Ann Arbor, while William Olsen and Richard Brown are to attend a session October 31-November 2 at Traverse City.

AuGres Man Killed in Iosco Motorcycle Crash

A 61-year-old AuGres man was killed Friday night in a motorcycle-car collision on M-65, Plainfield Township. Dead at the scene was Bernard W. Thaut, whose motorcycle was struck by a car driven by James W. Lewis, 25, Farmington Hills. Lewis was treated for injuries at Tawas Ho pital.

Investigating Iosco County Sheriff's Department officers said that Thaut and a friend, Clarence J. Dewald, 51, Turner, were southbound on their motorcycles and headed toward home after visiting at Oscoda. Thaut was about 10 feet ahead of Dewald when Lewis's northbound car attempted to pass a pickup truck ahead of him. The driver said he saw the oncoming headlights, but felt he had enough room to pass.

Dewald swerved his motorcycle left of the centerline to avoid the collision, but Thaut's machine was struck by the oncoming car. He was dead at the scene.

Investigators Had Busy Week in Iosco County

Three larcenies, a breaking and entering, a vandalism complaint and a suspected arson case were investigated last week by Iosco County Sheriff's Department.

Arson as an attempt to cover a burglary is suspected in a fire August 21 at the residence of Charles Nunn, 416 East Main Street, Hale.

Nunn and his wife had left home around 3:30 p. m. to go to the doctor's office for an appointment. Neighbors noticed the house was on fire about 20 minutes later and kicked open the front door, believing the Nunnns were still inside the building.

Plainfield Township firemen believe that a combustible liquid was used to start the fire in a bedroom.

The vandalism complaint concerned a report by Consumers Power Company that 20 windows at Loud Dam had been smashed by rocks.

George Batchelder, Algonac, reported that four tires and a wheel had been stolen from a pickup truck parked at his cabin in Plainfield Township. Also missing is a 100-pound propane gas tank.

A breaking and entering was reported at the Paul Volkman cottage, old US-23, Oscoda Township. The burglary was discovered by a neighbor only a few hours after Volkman left the premises.

Rose Marie Peterson, Turtle Road, Turner, reported the theft of fishing equipment from a car and Floyd D. McDonald, Oscoda, reported the theft of an outboard motor and fuel tank from his boat at Foote Pond.

Councilmen File Suit; Ask Court to Stop Recall

Claiming there were misrepresentation in the procuring of signatures on petitions and questioning the sufficiency of petition wording relative to state statutes, five members of the Tawas City Council scheduled for a recall election October 2 have brought suit in Iosco County Circuit Court to stop the election.

Seeking an injunction forbidding the election are James Lansky, Jerry Cotter, Donald Hayes, Hugo Jack Keiser and Charles Landon. Named as respondents were the county clerk, the city clerk and the county's special elections committee.

Recall petitions circulated by an organization calling itself Allied Taxpayers were filed prior to the August 7 primary election. Two of the councilmen, Cotter and Landon, were among six candidates renominated by voters for the November general election. Hayes, who was appointed to fill a vacancy on the council, is a candidate to fill two years remaining on a four-year term, while Lansky and Keiser have two years remaining on their four-year terms.

The recall petitions had been certified by City Clerk Rachel Sue McCready, approved or accepted by County Clerk D. Keith Pappas and a recall election was set for October 2 by the county's special elections committee.

In asking the court to issue a declaratory judgment and writ of mandamus, attorneys for the five candidates express the belief that "there was misrepresentation in the procuring of signatures on said recall petitions."

It is claimed by the councilmen that petitions were being "interchanged with other petitions concerning a possible ward system for Tawas City, which were being passed amongst the body politic of Tawas City, so as to create confusion regarding the nature of circulators' complaint (s) against the five councilmen so as to result in the signers' confusion as to what was actually being signed and for what reason said document was being signed."

The five councilmen also claim that in the course of prior litigation regarding ward petitions, some of the signatures on possibly both the recall as well as the ward petitions were invalid. Three weeks ago, the circuit judge dismissed a suit brought by citizens against the city clerk, who had ruled that petitions seeking a charter amendment referendum to return to the ward system for electing councilmen were insufficient.

It is also claimed that circulators of the recall petitions "falsely certified petitions contrary to the certificate of circulator affixed to the recall petitions."

The five candidates claim that the recall petitions do not contain reasons, either in terms of sufficiency and or clarity so as to comply with the relevant Michigan statutes or relevant case law. (The reason for the recall, as stated at the top of each petition, was: "We are dissatisfied with his decision and recommendations.")

Councilmen named in the recall petitions claim they "have a right for the respondents to correctly follow the relevant statutory procedure concerning the recall election; that they deem themselves to be in need of the protection provided by the court; that their personal, as well as professional, reputations have been damaged "by the abuse of the general recall process."

The five councilmen claim that state and federal constitutional rights have been violated and the protection afforded to them by the relevant statutes or case law has been denied.

AUTHORITIES continued investigation this week into last week's derailment of a Detroit and Mackinac Railroad freight train near Black River. Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation are checking the pileup, which destroyed 13 freight cars and derailed two diesel locomotives. There were no injuries. The railroad has offered a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for tampering with a switch.

No Increase for TA Students' Lunches; Adults Get Hike

Although a $1,101 deficit is expected between revenues and expenditures, hot lunch prices for students of Tawas Area Schools will not be increased at the start of the term, according to action taken Monday night by Tawas Area Board of Education.

A 20-cent increase was authorized for adult lunches served in the cafeteria, raising the daily price from 75 to 95 cents.

Supt. Allan D. Dighera told board members that the state had authorized increased reimbursement for the school hot lunch program and believed the 50-cent daily charge for high school students and 40-cent charge for elementary students was sufficient to cover expenses at this time.

He said, however, that the charges should be reviewed prior to the start of the second semester to make sure the school was not losing money on the program.

The only increase for some students will be in the a la carte line, where one-half pint of milk, either white or chocolate, will cost 10 cents per carton, rather than the seven and eight-cent charge of previous years.

This was done to reduce the need for making change with copper pennies.

Elementary students, who all buy a weekly milk ticket, will pay 50 cents a week for white milk and 50 cents for chocolate. Adults will pay a daily price of 15 cents for white milk and 20 cents for chocolate milk.

The board of education accepted the bid of London Farm Dairy, Port Huron, for furnishing dairy products and Scnafker Bakery was awarded the contract to provide baked goods.

Dighera told the board of education that the school could be forced to serve breakfasts in some buildings according to a state-mandated, three-year program. If 50 percent of the students in any building are eligible for free or reduced lunches, breakfast must be served daily. Next year, the breakfast eligibility requirement drops to 30 percent and 20 percent the following year.

TA Administration Given Authority to Fill AD Slot

Administration of Tawas Area School was given authority Monday night to fill the position of athletic director, if necessary, in the best interest of the district.

Supt. Allan D. Dighera told members that he had pursued rumors during the past few weeks regarding the possible resignation of T. D. Haskin, athletic director. He was appointed to that position last year.

The athletic director presently receives an additional $1,350 and one release period daily for performing the duties.

"I informed Haskin that I could not authorize extra pay since we do have a binding agreement through the 1980-81 school year. He indicated he did not want to put the board on the spot; however, time was his most precious commodity. We explored a number of alternatives without arriving at a satisfactory solution," said Dighera in his printed report.

The athletic director apparently desires an additional hour of released time to perform the duties because of daily work required in scheduling, particularly during spring. Board of education members generally seemed to be opposed to the additional hour because of the cost of hiring a replacement teacher.

Dighera said that at the present time, he was leaning toward granting one additional hour of released time on a one year trial basis and restudy the situation for the 1980-81 school year. If that alternative was not suitable, he said he would report the position and, in the event there are no applicants, he would have to assign someone as the athletic director.

A survey of other schools in the conference indicated that all districts had part-time athletic directors, the same as Tawas. An assistant principal serves at Pinconning, the community school director serves at Gladwin, the middle school principal at Whittemore-Prescott and a teacher at Standish-Sterling.

In other business, the board of education endorsed the effort of the City of Tawas City in attempting to obtain state funds to aid in the replacement of the Sixth Avenue Bridge over Dead Creek. This bridge is presently closed to all truck traffic and results in a detour of 15 to 20 miles daily for school buses traveling that route.

Miss Biba Jennings, who has two years of teaching experience at Saginaw, was hired as the reading teacher at Tawas City Elementary Unit. Jeri Larkin, a recent graduate of Central Michigan University, was hired as the girls physical education instructor at the high school.

Boat Impaled on Piling

A Dearborn man and his family, whose 18-foot wooden in-board boat was impaled on a submerged piling Friday night in Tawas Bay behind the former McKay Sales Company building, were rescued and taken to shore by two marine units of Iosco County Sheriff's Department.

The boat, operated by Lyle Hughes, was headed toward the Tawas City Park dock when it struck a submerged piling left from the old Prescott lumber mill. A two-foot hole was knocked in the bottom of the boat, which settled on the piling and remained barely above water.

Hughes' son, Craig, 29, swam to shore and notified the sheriff's department. Removed from the swamped boat were the operator; his wife, Jean; daughter, Debra, and daughter-in-law, Debra.

The sheriff's department transported them to the mouth of the Tawas River where their car was parked.

When a Federal Order Restricted Railroadmen in Politics

One of the most sensational wartime acts of the federal government took place in January 1918, when President Woodrow Wilson took over the control and management of all railroads in the United States, together with all equipment and connecting water transportation lines.

A giant wave of patriotism swept this country in 1917-18, which was probably unmatched later during World War II. To fight the "Hun" with every available resource was the thing to do for Americans and it seemed only a natural course to take when railroads came under government control.

"All officers and employees of the railroads," stated William McAdoo, director general, "now serve the government and the public interest only." He asked them to get the "spirit of this new era—a supreme devotion to country and an invincible determination to perform the imperative duties of the hour to save America, to save the world from despotism."

THIS PASSENGER TRAIN of the Detroit and Mackinac Railway is stopped at the First Street crossing at the Tawas City depot to take on a contingent of Iosco County men being inducted into the army for service during World War I. The locomotive was decorated with American flags and bunting and several hundred local residents were on hand to see the local boys off to the war.

Action by the federal government was considered necessary for the best interests of the country, as under the competitive system of railroad operation, "the expense was unduly high and service was unsatisfactory, each line naturally endeavoring to get the maximum amount of business regardless of the capacity for handling it."

McAdoo, who was secretary of treasury in the Wilson cabinet, was given practically unlimited authority in the operation of railroads and congress was asked to make a large appropriation to supply a deficiency in rolling stock needed to handle the immense traffic induced by the war.

The immediate effect of government action seemed to be the faster movement of railroad traffic, which was routed over the quickest route regardless of what railroad carried it.

But governmental intervention also appeared to be taking a different track. The government guaranteed to stockholders of the railroads that a certain dividend would be paid on investments, but profits of the business, over and above that amount, went into the federal treasury. One of the government's first acts was to place a maximum salary of $10,000 for railroad executives, some of whom had been receiving from $50,000 to $150,000 on the larger lines. The difference was applied to the raising of wages of men actually engaged in operation of the roads.

That kind of action was a pleasant surprise to railroad employees and the general public. Newspaper editors around the country supported the move, railroads having long been the whipping boy in newspaper editorial columns for a good many years and probably with some justification.

"The idea has been advanced that this action is merely preliminary to eventual governmental ownership of the railroads and transportation companies," stated Editor James E. Ballard of The Tawas Herald.

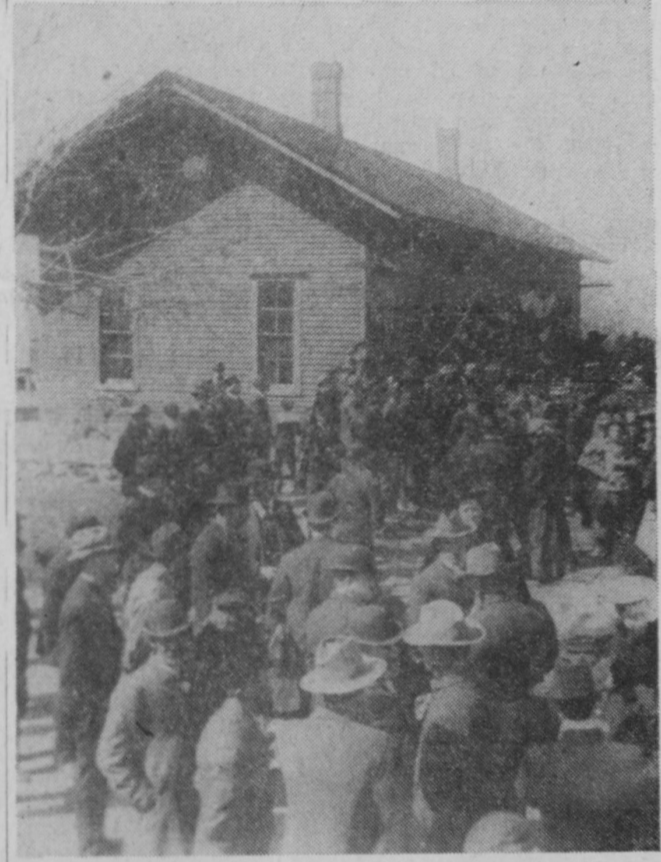

Shades of another later era, Ballard stated in January 1918 that "there is no question in the mind of most men that the government could operate the business much more efficiently and economically than has been done under private ownership. Despite big subsidies granted by the government in the form of immense land grants, the railroads have always pleaded poverty."

Ballard was not pointing his finger at the local Detroit and Mackinac Railway, however, for that railroad has never received a subsidy in the form of a land grant, using its own funds to purchase right-of-way.

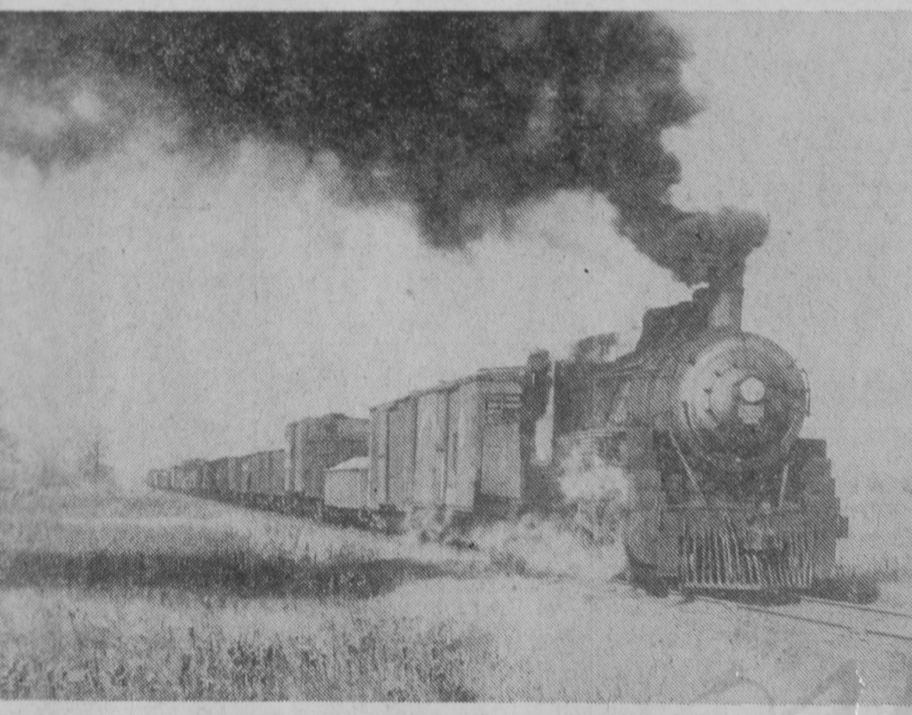

Poverty of the larger railroads, said Ballard, was "mostly due to the fact that they were over-capitalized and were paying dividends on a large amount of stock that was mostly water."

The local editor also commented that "if the government should finally decide to own the business, all this unnecessary expense would be eliminated, together with the enormous salaries paid to a few favored men and the transportation business would be put upon a basis of service and efficiency as it should be."

The take-over of railroads was but one wartime plan to "save the world from despotism." The homefront was sub-

ANOTHER CROWD of area residents jammed the platform at the East Tawas depot. The federal government took over control of all railroads in the country during World War I, the only time in history that has happened, and did not turn back control to owners until 18 months after hostilities ceased. A national railroad strike resulted.

FEDERAL OPERATION of the railroad caused some concern in the Tawas when an order came down from Washington directing that railroad employees were not eligible to serve in elected positions. Mayors of both cities were railroad employees, as were a number of councilmen.

jected to cutbacks in coal for home and office heating; wheat and sugar were rationed; automobiles were put up on blocks or used only in emergency in order to conserve gasoline; American Red Cross workers made sweaters, sox, mufflers and trench caps for the boys at the front in France; war boards were organized in each county and Liberty Loan campaigns financed by the people helped to finance the war effort.

Before 1918 was to end, the local editor was to change his mind about government ownership of railroads, for the director general ordered that employees of railroads should not hold office or engage in politics in any way—like all good federal employees.

"Tawas City and East Tawas are affected by this order, both cities having railroad men in official positions in the municipality," reported the Herald.

Ballard, who served as city clerk, immediately sent off a letter to Washington, D. C., questioning if railroad men serving in municipal position could serve out their terms.

McAdoo's reply by telegram stated that General Order No. 42 did not require the railroadmen to resign the office to which they were elected before that order was issued and would be permitted to complete their terms.

"These men will, therefore, be able to serve until the next election, but the electors will need to pick out other than railroad men to fill the positions

Tawas City Should Take the Gong Show Out of City Hall

Last week's meeting of the Tawas City Council was almost unbelievable, but for the fact that media representatives have become accustomed over the past couple of years to the "gong show" type of meeting being conducted.

The meeting was a repeat demonstration on how four or five political allies of one faction can disrupt orderly proceedings of an elected body by actually intimidating other representatives of the people by a constant vocal uproar from the audience.

American politics has never been known to be a sedate or even of a compassionate feeling—it is the nature of the "beast"—but on practically every question brought before the city council of late—during discussion, during roll call and after the vote—there has been vocal sparring from the gallery with individual councilmen; at various times during the meeting, media representatives covering the session were unable to hear discussion around the council table because of the constant uproar from spectator seats.

Attending on an average of two or more public meetings a week, the writer of this corner has covered his share—city council, board of education, board of commissioners and other public gatherings—over a period of about 30 years. During that time, this corner has heard—even participated in—public input from the floor, most of which has been of a legitimate nature and recognized by the meeting chairman; on the other hand, this corner's ears are not unaccustomed to hearing loud and vigorous protests from the gallery on certain issues and in no uncertain terms.

But the "gong show" atmosphere of Tawas City Council meetings of late—the format seemingly almost "rehearsed" prior to the session—is something else. It is to be deplored when one faction shouts down an elected representative during debate on an important measure. Those elected officials represent all of the people of this community and the gavel at the head of the table should have been used in all courtesy, but with a firm hand.

The editor came away from last week's council meeting with the conclusion that a few citizens had intentionally disrupted discussion in apparent concert with the mayor, whose belief on practically every question seems to be that it is going "to be his way or no way."

This corner has not disagreed on a number of points brought up by the mayor in the past — if this is important to anyone — believing that compromise is often necessary for a community to move ahead; but the "gong show" at city hall is a deplorable situation and can only be remedied by a thinking and responsive general public.

(Read Deuteronomy 30:15-20)

"Choose life, then, that you and your descendants may live, by loving the Lord, your God, hearing his voice and hold fast to him." (Deuteronomy 30:19-20) NAB

A young father was trying to relax over the evening paper but his lively little daughter kept begging for attention with all the artful ruses known to a four-year-old. Finally, she exclaimed, "Those are just pictures, Daddy, and I'm real."

His paper went to the floor and the little girl had the undivided attention of her father, at least until bedtime.

Life is constantly demanding that we make a choice. So often, we choose not to be disturbed by the real world around us. At other times, we give ourselves to unimportant matters, missing the most significant. We sacrifice deep relationships by simply being inattentive to persons.

The more we do "choose life," though, the easier it becomes; and it is then that we can experience the joy of being fully alive.

PRAYER

God, our Father, we come to You as a child comes to her father. We do not need to tell You we are real. We know You are waiting for our attention. Help us to choose life, that we may become our most real selves, filled with Your abundant life. Amen.

Davis Wants Public Input on Levels

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Although weather conditions have a great effect on lake levels, a six-man commission made up of three Americans and three Canadians is responsible for regulating the levels of Lake Superior—level of which also affects the other Great Lakes.

The International Joint Commission has proposed a plan for "systematic regulation of lake levels." This plan has drawn a lot of criticism from property owners along the Lake Superior shoreline, who claim their shore is disappearing because the lake's water levels are being maintained at an artificially high level.

Some people say that Lake Superior is being made a reservoir for the rest of the lakes. The IJC has announced an opportunity to comment on this proposal and Cong. Robert Davis of Northern Michigan wishes to receive local comments and will make sure those comments are forwarded.

"Because of my concern over the property damages resulting from such control of lake levels, I submitted an amendment to the Omnibus Water Resources bill which would provide for a mechanism to compensate these owners for damages," said Davis. "The amendment was successful and I am confident that the full committee will also approve the measure."

Do You Value Your Trees And Shrubs?

By Dexter D. MacBride, ASA
 Executive Vice President
 American Society of Appraisers

Your trees, shrubs and other landscape plants are a valuable investment — an investment that grows. They contribute to the value of your property. As a homeowner you may not realize that, if these items are damaged or destroyed through a casualty event, you may be eligible to collect a casualty loss from an insurance company or deduct the loss from your federal income taxes. Generally, the damage must have been caused by an identifiable event of sudden, unexpected or unusual nature.

For the purposes of tax claims this can include mishaps that might come with wind or ice storms, lightning or floods, accidents such as a car running into a tree, or a wide range of other occurrences.

Most insurance policies, however, are somewhat more restrictive, and contain a provision that the company will be liable for loss to trees, shrubs, plants and lawns when loss is caused by fire, lightning, explosion, riot, civil commotion, malicious mischief, theft, aircraft, or vehicle not operated by an occupant of the premises.

In other words, if your trees or landscape plants suffer a casualty, avenues that may be open to you for the recovery of their financial worth are: Insurance Coverage, Income Tax Deduction, or Civil Damage Claim.

What are the steps you should take for recovery if you sustain such a loss?

1. An important step is to take pictures of your landscape plantings, now, while they are healthy.

2. Then, if a casualty occurs, take others immediately following the damage. These "before and after" photographs will be important evidence of the loss.

3. Consult your insurance policy to determine the amount and kind of coverage it provides. If you are still not sure whether or not your specific damage is included, contact your insurance agency or representative.

4. If the casualty is covered by insurance, have your agent arrange for an appraisal to be made by a competent tree or landscape professional.

5. If the casualty loss is not covered by your homeowners' insurance, or the amount of the loss is greater than the maximum provided in your policy, U.S. treasury regulations permit a tax deduction for non-business casualty losses to landscape trees and shrubs.

6. When the casualty results from action by an outside party, compensation is often available from the responsible individual, corporation or governmental agency. Legal counsel may be needed, and a competent appraisal by a professional tree or landscape consultant will be critical to establish the full extent of the loss.

OPEN HOUSE for the new Tawas Masonic Temple on M-55, Tawas City, was held Sunday afternoon. Ground for the building was broken last fall following a year of planning. This building replaces one constructed nearly 30 years ago adjacent to Tawas Hospital. That property is now owned by the hospital.

The new brick, masonry and steel building contains a dining room on the west side and meeting room on the east side, both featuring colorful interior decoration. Paving the parking lot remains to be completed. The new structure is a credit to the entire community.—Tawas Herald Photos.

SITE of one of the pioneer service stations-restaurants at Hale was razed last week to make way for the new branch office of Peoples State Bank of East Tawas. The northeast corner of the M-65 and Esmond Road intersection was once the site of a two-story frame building which was occupied by a variety of businesses over the years. It was occupied by a restaurant for a number of years before being swept by fire. A gasoline service station remained on the property, but had not been in use for some time when it was finally razed last week. —Tawas Herald Photo.

when their term expires," said Ballard.

In Tawas City's case, Mayor John A. Myles and Treasurer Ernest Kasischke were both railroad men, while Charles A. Pinkerton Sr., superintendent of the D&M's car service, served as mayor of East Tawas and the city council included several railroad employees.

Local politics did not suffer as a result of the federal order for the armistice signed with Germany on Monday, November 11, 1918, ended the war. "It is altogether likely that this will be the last war for hundreds of years, as the imperial idea of world domination has received a blow from which it will never recover," said Editor Ballard in his November 15, 1918, account of the armistice terms.

Although the railroad control act did not expire until 18 months after the war, government restrictions had no effect on the local political situation as the strict terms prohibiting railroad men from serving in public office were softened.

Railroads were "reconstructed" back into private ownership in the spring of 1920, the law providing for arbitration of wage disputes between the railroads and employees. There was created under the law a wage tribunal to be appointed by the president. In this manner, an entirely orderly procedures was evolved for the readjustment of wages of railroad workmen.

No longer under the thumb of government control, railroad workers immediately went out on strike for higher wages and transportation was stalled throughout the nation. Before the strike was to end, government ownership, "with democratic operation of American railroads, was endorsed at the American Federation of Labor convention after a bitter fight."

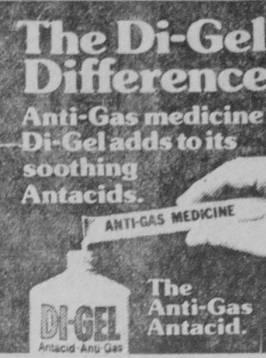

Endorsement of government ownership of the railroads was declared by labor leaders to have been the first genuine defeat Samuel Gompers, its veteran president, had suffered in years.

in congress and from labor, government ownership of railroads never became a reality and federal authorities left railroads in private hands during World War II.

Only in recent years has the federal government turned its attention to railroad operation, that being practically forced upon it by the bankruptcy of the Penn-Central Railroad. As a means of insuring continuation of railroad transportation, the government has taken over control of a number of railroads and subsidizes some other operations.

It is still too early to assess governmental operation of railroads but congress is unhappy with recent removal of "unprofitable" passenger trains.

FAMILY LIVING EDUCATION

BACK-TO-SCHOOL CLOTHING FOR KIDS

(Part one of three parts)

Preparation for back-to-school will mean an increased investment in clothing for children this year. With clothing prices inflated along with everything else, parents will want to make purchases carefully to insure that garments are durable, safe, comfortable and well-liked by their wearers, advises Isabel Jones, clothing specialist for Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Service.

Before shopping, look in the children's closets and take inventory. Have them try on last year's garments. Separate articles into three piles: Those that can be worn again as is, those which need updating or repair, and those which do not fit the child but may be worn by a younger child in the family after recycling. This will help determine the essential items needed to add to the child's wardrobe.

Parents should consider shopping for only the few essentially needed garments in the fall, rather than a wide range of clothes the child may outgrow or dislike by winter. Keeping children's wardrobes small also means clothes will be worn more often; thus clothing may wear out before it is outgrown.

In planning to buy clothing for children, remember that there is no set number of pieces of clothing a child has to have. It is only important that children have enough clothing to meet a variety of everyday needs. When planning, consider the child's special activities (what they do, where they go), the area lived in (city or country), what their friends wear, the size of the family and how much can be afforded on clothing for each child.

It is also important to remember the child's individual differences before buying. Growth rates, weight changes, show-size changes and rate of wear-out and tear-out differ for each child and will have an effect on the amount and kind of clothing needed.

Shopping together is a chance to teach children how to choose clothing that meets their needs. Color, texture and style of clothing is very important. Try to guide children toward solidly constructed garments. Mix-and-match separates that can be worn in several different combinations will stretch a wardrobe. Tightly woven or knit garments are most durable and will stand up longer under the rough and tumble play children enjoy. Remember, too, that most school age children are very conscious of peer acceptance and will want to buy clothing that everybody else has.

Read labels on garments before buying to make sure they are easy to care for. Clothing made from man-made fibers is usually easier to care for than that made from natural fibers. Take care of small repairs like loose buttons and small rips before the garment is beyond repair. Careful care of clothing by both parent and the children helps give it a longer life.

Though it is difficult to judge children's growth spurts, one can anticipate them by choosing skirts, dresses and pants with wide hems that can be let down as they grow taller. Allowing room for growth does not mean purchasing clothes that are too big, though. Buy clothes that allow for movement but are not so big or long as to get in the way of activity. Sleeves should not be too tight, armholes should be set about one inch below the armpit and pants need to be roomy in the crotch and across the seat. Shirts and blouses should be long enough to stay tucked into pants and skirts.

Finally, remember that high price does not always mean a good buy and it does not always have total influence on the construction of garments. Take time to look over purchases carefully to make sure the quality justifies the price of the product. Wait for a sale or do more comparison shopping to find better constructed merchandise at a price within the budget.
