

JULY 4
INDEPENDENCE DAY

WORDS OF FREEDOM

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

City Manager Presents Program

Compromise City Hall Site Proposed

Pointing out that Tawas City has a critical need for new municipal facilities and the fact that $500,000 allocated by Farmers Home Administration is reserved to November 1 through the federal government's current fiscal year, City Mgr. Lowell Thomas Monday night urged the city council to take steps to develop another proposal for voters.

Location and scope of the previous project seems to be two controversial elements in the last vote held in November, said Thomas.

"The council's recent purchase of the Adamek property as the first step in controlled development and improvement of the important '500' block has also contributed to some controversy," he stated.

The city manager felt that all should agree that "the ultimate objectives of these projects are important—yes, essential—to the future viability of our community. It is my hope that the controversies are limited to the means of achieving those objectives."

Thomas proposed some courses of action which he said would "require a cooperative spirit of compromise from all concerned and interested parties." He said every-one would not be totally happy, "but 'Old Abe' said that was an impossible feat, anyway."

The city manager felt that, hopefully, a portion of everybody's concerns would be sufficiently satisfied to permit forward movement rather than "the stagnation and frustrations we are now experiencing."

Thomas suggested that the scope and location of the municipal complex take one of the following two alternatives in order of preference:

1. A single new complex, perhaps scaled down somewhat from the original proposal and located on the corner of Fourth Avenue and Mathews Street;

2. A split complex with new fire hall and library at Fourth Avenue and Mathews Street and the present city hall building renovated for offices and council chamber.

Thomas felt that advantages of a single, integrated complex were:

1. One building should mean long-term savings in maintenance and upkeep.

2. New construction can be financed with the five percent, 40-year term FmHA money. He said it was his understanding that such funds could not be used for renovation.

3. The city offices would also be off US-23, as a number of people have wished.

The city manager said that the disadvantage of putting the entire complex at Fourth Avenue and Mathews Street is that land, in addition to the Borosch and D&M parcels, would likely need to be purchased.

Advantages cited for the Fourth and Mathews Street parcel for either a portion or all of the municipal facilities include:

1. For the fire barn, it is convenient to both the primary commercial and major residential areas.

2. Arthur Ziehl of the recently formed fire hall study committee has informed Thomas of his support of the site and Fire Chief Herbert Blust has expressed his support of the location. (Blust said he would prefer the station be located right at a railroad crossing rather than some distance away where one must travel toward it at a significant rate of speed.)

3. Although the site is in a residential area, just behind the commercial strip on US-23, Thomas said it may someday face the commercial area if the "500" block becomes river oriented, as has been proposed.

4. The location is ideal for the library. It is within an easy walk of the major residential area and elementary school with minimal traffic problems.

5. The area between the bridge and the intersection of Fourth and Mathews Street is the historic seat of government for both the township, village and later City of Tawas City. The first city hall was located at the northeast corner of the Mathews Street bridge, serving until 1924 when the present city hall was constructed.

Thomas suggested that the city establish an economic development corporation or a downtown development authority and assign the Adamek land contract to this new entity. The development authority would have the power to issue bonds and buy, sell or lease property.

"It can actively pursue how best to use the property and sell or lease it as part of an over-all 500 block improvement program. This alternative provides control over the use and development of that parcel, but removes most of its cost from general tax obligations," he stated.

Thomas said that if the decision is made to move the city offices and council chamber to the Fourth and Mathews Street site, he recommended that the present city hall property also be sold or conveyed to the development authority.

He suggested the following sequence of actions:

1. Retain an architect to assist in determining which of the two alternatives involving location and scope of the project is most feasible and cost efficient;

2. Using qualified appraisers, determine the value of properties in question, negotiate a sale price and enter into buy or sell agreements contingent on voter approval;

3. After architectural evaluation, the council should decide on which alternative to pursue;

4. Prepare necessary resolutions

so that the project and financing approval can be taken to the voters, either in a special election, but not later than the November election.

"In general, every effort should be made to keep the costs of the new facilities to a minimum. With inflation and tax pressures being what they are, we must investigate innovative ways to provide low maintenance, durable, no frills, yet aesthetically pleasing facilities," said Thomas.

A CONTINUING PROCESS—Equipment of the Tawas City Department of Public Works swung into action Friday to open the mouth of the Tawas River, which had become partially clogged in recent weeks by shifting sand. Sand removed from the river bottom was used to fill an old boat slip on city property according to regulations of the United States Army Corps of Engineers and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. It is expected that the latest work will keep the river open until the fall fishing season. —Tawas Herald Photo.

Parade-Fireworks to Feature Fourth

L. G. McKay, area businessman, has been selected as grand marshal for the Fourth of July parade in the Tawas. Units will assemble at East Tawas Elementary School at 12:30 p. m. for the 2½-mile route down Newman Street to US-23 to Mathews Street in Tawas City.

Tom Alley, 105th District representative from West Branch, and Col. Jesse Hacker, wing commander at Wurtsmith Air Force Base, will also be riding in the parade. A total of 35 units will include Tawas Area High School Band, three floats from area senior citizens representing American Association of Retired Persons, Tawas Area Senior Citizens and residents of Provincial House Nursing Home with their rhythm band, Rebel Rousers, comprised of 80 and 90-year-olds.

Legal Fireworks Fun, but Dangerous

Michigan residents and visitors to the state whose July 4 celebrations may include setting off fireworks are reminded by the state police fire marshal division that only Class C fireworks are legal and approved for use in Michigan.

Those who may purchase these legal fireworks are cautioned by the division that extreme care should be exercised in using the devices.

Past experience has shown, fire marshal officers emphasize, that fireworks and firecrackers, especially those illegally manufactured, can seriously injure or even kill people using them. Those persons who may be bystanders in these cases may also be subject to possible harm. Improper or careless use is cited as the principal cause of fireworks accidents.

Officers point out that so-called homemade explosive devices also are involved in numerous injury and some fatal accidents each year throughout the country.

Michigan law allows the use of cylinder and cone fountains, sparklers, smoke devices, toy snakes, flitter sparklers and flat paper caps.

State police advise people to take the following precautions when purchasing any fireworks:

Make sure that there is a manufacturer's label on the device, as well as instructions for proper use. Illegally manufactured fireworks rarely have either.

Provide adult supervision for children and do not allow very young children to handle fireworks.

Light fireworks only outdoors in a clear area away from houses, dry brush or anything which might catch fire and keep water available.

Light only one device at a time. Dispose of fireworks property and pour water on malfunctioning devices to end their possible usage. Do not pick up any malfunctioned device.

Hobby-Antique Show Saturday

Annual hobby-antique show and sale under sponsorship of Tawas Bay Artists will be held Saturday, 9:00 a. m. until 7:00 p. m., at the East Tawas Elementary School.

The exhibition area utilizes both the lawn and the multipurpose room of the elementary unit.

This show, designed to provide a sales outlet for hobby craftsmen and dealers, has enjoyed considerable popularity with summer visitors, falling at the peak of the season.

MORE THAN 200 persons attended a get together Saturday afternoon and evening at Tawas Bay Yacht Club marking the 25th anniversary of starting work on the clubhouse. Some past and present members of the club posed for the picture at top. Inside, a Dixieland jazz band, left, was providing entertainment. Although weather was not favorable for sailing, Charles Schreck, shown at

Long-Range Plan Suggested to City

Following a recent two-day conference at Kalamazoo dealing with economic development for smaller communities, City Mgr. Lowell Thomas Monday night requested permission to develop a list of short and long-range administrative and planning projects for Tawas City.

In addition, he suggested that a survey or questionnaire be developed for public input. He would then present the package to the council for its review, revision and action.

Thomas said the Kalamazoo conference involved a study of mechanisms, programs and limitations which exist for smaller communities wishing to expand and stabilize economic environment.

Conference subjects included the need for local organization toward economic development; various industrial development mechanisms available through existing state legislation; the effect of the Headlee amendment on bonding programs; criteria for industry seeking new sites; programs available for downtown development; various federal programs available; specific case studies involving a number of communities participating in specific improvement programs.

He felt it was critical that a community organize and organize itself well. "A solid organizational foundation is imperative for any kind of effective economic growth and development," he stated.

A successful comprehensive economic stabilization and growth must involve a partnership between the local government and the private business and industrial community, he stated. He emphasized that enlisting effective, capable leaders within the community is vital.

"It is essential that those individuals involved in the program for economic growth and stabilization must have an attitude characterized by eagerness, enthusiasm and a strong desire to attract economic growth, industries and commercial establishments to the community," said Thomas.

He said that federal funds are available to assist in economic development. (See THOMAS, page 2.)

Burglaries and Larcenies Kept Officers Busy

Four larcenies and three breakings and enterings were investigated last week by Iosco County Sheriff's Department.

On Saturday, $150 in currency was stolen from Rainbow Service in Tawas City. Gary Stephan, owner, reported that he and his assistant were busy when two customers came into the station and requested minor repairs on their car. One customer stayed in the sales area while the car was being inspected. Both men left without having the car repaired and it was discovered that money had been stolen from the cash register.

Stanley Beaver, Long Lake, reported the theft of an outboard motor; Fred Garchow of Latham Road, Grant Township, reported the theft of a fiberglass canoe; Roger Mott, Webb Road, Hale, reported the theft of 450 bricks.

Burglaries were reported by Charles Case, Long Lake, breaking in of mobile home; Alice White, Long Lake, mobile home ransacked; Louis C. Konrad, Wilber Township, television and radio stolen from cabin.

Thomas

(Continued from page 1.) growth and development, "but you must be well organized, your needs well documented and you must be aggressive in acquiring grants and loans for this purpose," he said.

He said that it was obvious that certain federal assistance programs consider community involvement and participation to be very important elements of the grant application process.

Thomas believed that prior to finalizing any long or short-range capital program, it was important to develop a mechanism through which public input could be obtained.

"I am not sure that the traditional public hearing method or approach is the most effective or comprehensive means of obtaining such input. Perhaps it would be appropriate to develop a detailed questionnaire and survey to be distributed to the citizens of the community for their completion, to be returned for tabulation," he stated. Thomas said a significant portion of his first three months on the job had been spent on the budget making process for the community. "It is important now, after having had an opportunity to analyze the problems, needs, resources of the community, that I set out and establish a list of projects which I personally need to be involved in and then prioritize them," he stated.

National Forest Sets 2nd Firewood Sale

Huron National Forest, Tawas Ranger District, is advertising its second annual group of oak firewood sales this week. The district has prepared 15 individual oak sales ranging in size from 12 cunits (15 standard cords, four feet high by four feet wide by eight feet long) to 63 cunits (80 standard cords, a cunit is equal to 1.27 standard cords).

Although national forest timber sales are generally large commercial sales, the Tawas District is preparing a number of fuelwood sales each year in response to increasing public demand for firewood. These are sales of small volumes so that home owners or families can cut and remove all wood in a two-year period.

These will be sealed bid sales with the individual units being awarded to the highest bidder. Interested people may bid on any number of sales, however, only one sale will be awarded per individual or household. The purpose of these sales is to provide as many people as possible with the privilege of cutting their own firewood.

The sealed bids will be received until 11:00 a. m. Monday, July 16, which is the time of bid opening at the district ranger's office located on the second floor of the Federal Building, East Tawas. Additional sale information, maps and bid forms are available at the district ranger's office.

Letter to the Editor

This open letter is written to all of my neighbors in Tawas City and I say neighbors because we must have unity in order to have progress. I was appointed to your city council and not elected and I accepted this appointment for one reason—my interest is in the future of Tawas City because I'm going to spend the rest of my life here.

If you are as proud of Tawas City as I am, then take a long look at the mayor you have elected and his cohort. They are pushing for disunity, dissension, and disapproval of good citizens who would seek election to city council. The councilmen they would seek to recall are outstanding citizens who are interested in the progress of our city and will not stoop to backbiting, recrimination, or stuffing your daily newspaper with circulars that would persuade you to join the dissident group that would stymie all progress in Tawas City.

The future of our city, in my opinion, can be determined for a number of years to come during the next few months. We can go forward and show progress from year to year which, of course, is essential in order to exist; or we can come to a standstill, which immediately would start the downhill slide that will bring Tawas City to oblivion. Take time to meet and know your candidates. If you are not registered to vote please do so, and then exercise your right to vote.

Tawas City Councilman
Donald M. Hayes

Bible Scholar Starts Seminar Here July 10

"You can really understand what is happening in our world today and about to happen, through the Book of Daniel," says Robert Wiese, Bible scholar. He will be sharing practical and prophetic insights with seminar participants in our area beginning Tuesday, July 10. Brought here by a local committee, studies in Daniel will continue for 10 Tuesday evening sessions through September 11. The seminar will begin at 7:30 p. m. at the Tawas Area High School Cafeteria, 255 West M-55, Tawas City. Anyone interested in prophesy is invited to attend.

"The amazing Book of Daniel," says Wiese, "has through the centuries intrigued scholars—not only leading theologians, but remarkable laymen, government thought leaders and scientists. Widespread revivals of scholarly interest in the book have significantly changed the course of history on several occasions."

Wiese, who has lectured to thousands throughout the country, comments, "Fortunately, this book, which has been largely ignored for over a century, is being rediscovered by many scholars of today and is being investigated by growing thousands in communities across North America."

"Many have at times looked upon Daniel as a closed book, but interestingly, it is the only book that Jesus specifically mentioned should be read and understood." The illustrated classes will draw upon the harmonious scholarship of leading exponents through the centuries, bringing fresh insights as it focuses upon our day in history. This book, marked with gripping stories in prophetic-cartoon style, previews in detailed outline the course of history from the fall of Babylon, to our time and the earth-shattering events soon to take place.

Those wishing to attend the seminar may preregister by calling (517) 362-5408 or 362-4923. Seminar participants are encouraged to bring a King James Bible for class use.

THE CAT'S FULL OF SURPRISES

ONE AREA service station displayed "out of gas" signs at its pumps last Wednesday, but indications are that gasoline supplies should be adequate in general for the holiday unless there is a blockage of storage facilities by striking independent truckers. —Tawas Herald Photos.

Tourist Business Operators Hope to be Busy Over Fourth

Michigan tourism operators are hoping the 30-hour Fourth of July holiday will bring a sharp reversal in the approximate nine percent drop in vacation activity so far this year.

Hardest hit by poor weather and fears over gasoline availability, especially during the past two week-ends, have been businesses dependent on tourism north of a line from Petoskey to Bay City.

While the Iosco County area apparently has not been hit as hard as resort areas further north-crossings at the Mackinac Bridge were down 18 percent for the Memorial Day week-end and are running three percent below 1978—the businesses of this area dependent on tourist traffic are hurting.

Despite a record number of travel inquiries for Michigan vacations this year, Michigan Department of Transportation forecasts a one percent decrease in the expected number of miles to be traveled this Fourth of July. Because of the recent developments in gasoline availability, that prediction seems to be on the conservative side.

While northern areas of the state have been hard hit by the drop in traffic, Southeast Michigan tourism was up two percent through May as compared with the first five months of last year. This is a good indication that metropolitan area vacationers are sticking close to home and may continue to do so over the upcoming holiday.

Attractions near major metropolitan areas reporting larger business volumes than last year include Dearborn's Greenfield Village, the Detroit Zoo and the Kalamazoo Nature Center.

Tourism is down 10 to 15 percent in Eastern Michigan, down about five percent in Western Michigan and about 20 percent below 1978 in the Upper Peninsula.

Locally, Donald Watson, owner-operator of the Sunset Motel in Tawas City, said Wednesday that his business had "nothing to speak of" in the line of reservations for the Fourth of July holiday. Normally, mid-week holidays attract fewer vacationers to this area and he expects a rather dramatic decrease this year.

Watson noted, however, that his own motel's business had "picked up" over the past two week-ends and, although not optimistic about business over the upcoming holiday, he felt that business could hold its own.

site of Mooney's Ben Franklin, is at right. The Winchester House's saloon was the scene July 4, 1878, of the shooting of Jack Hayes by Constable Robert (Brave Bob) Johnson, who received an engraved revolver for his act of heroism.

A Lake Forest, Illinois, gun collector and historian, M. Brooks Smith, has asked Tawas residents to conduct some armchair detective work in order to find and preserve a bit of local Americana.

As an author of articles dealing with gun collecting, Smith is constantly hunting leads for unusual stories which would be interesting to the collector fraternity. He spends considerable time searching old books and records for ideas.

Recently, Smith was researching the personal records of L. D. Nimschke, noted New York engraver of the post Civil War era. Included in the files were rubbings of engravings which the artist had performed on numerous handguns and rifles.

A Nimschke-engraved handgun or rifle is truly an historical and valuable treasure for his floral pattern work graces some of the finest firearms to be found in museums and private collections in this country. Despite his reputation, however, such work in those days did not command high fees and Nimschke made his living by engraving silver bowls and metal objects of all kinds.

In paging through the random pencil rubbings of Nimschke's work, one "tracing" immediately caught Historian Smith's attention. Obviously engraved on the backstrap of a revolver, wording on the panel stated:

"Presented to Robert Johnson by the Citizens of East Tawas."

Smith checked through several state atlases before finding that East Tawas was located in Michigan. He telephoned this newspaper office in an effort to learn the story why the citizens of East Tawas had presented this revolver to Robert Johnson, thinking that the tale might be good for a future article in one of the gun collector magazines.

He felt the story relayed by telephone concerning Johnson would make an excellent feature, "but could you find a picture of, or the actual handgun which Nimschke engraved?" was Smith's response.

During the Iosco County centennial celebration in 1957, a Smith and Weston revolver with the above mentioned engraving on its backstrap was displayed in a temporary museum set up at the East Tawas Community Building. It had been loaned to the late Miss Edna Otis, who had charge of the display.

Following the centennial, the handgun was returned to its owner, either a local resident or an out-of-town member of the family of Robert Johnson, who has no known relatives living here.

The story behind the presentation was this: In the summer of 1878, the citizens of East Tawas awarded the chased, pearl-handled revolver "as a token of their appreciation of Johnson's courage and fidelity as a police officer."

Miss Otis was the official county historian in 1957 and prepared a feature story for the Iosco County centennial edition of the Herald. The story of Brave Bob Johnson was told in that feature.

Back of the display and the inscription was a story of the lumbering days and a man who earned the name of "desperado" in the 1870s. "The story is being revived and, piecing together the second and third-hand versions of it, we feel safe in offering our version to the public," stated Miss Otis.

The story is as follows:

"Picture Newman Street in the late 1870s. Where the Evans Store building (now Family Home Furnishings) is located stood several wooden buildings, one or more of them always housing a saloon. Across the street on the north side of the lot whereon William Look has his garage, stood a one-story house, back several feet from the sidewalk. South of it and running to the corner of Newman Street and Westover Street were several store buildings, known for so many years as the Dr. Gates block. Across the street and south, the Carlson building is now located (today the site of Mooney's Ben Franklin Store). It stood there some 80-odd years ago and was a hotel—the American House, run by L. Curry.

"A fight developed in the saloon and there was gun play. Did Jack Hayes, the desperado, fire the shot? The innocent bystander was Owen McDonald, who lived in the house across the street. Small of stature, McDonald, when in his cups, always described himself as 'Wee Ownie'.

"Wee Ownie" was shot in the foot and his cries of 'I'm mortifying, I'm mortifying,' were groundless, because he suffered only a flesh wound.

"But a fight in the lumbering days could have serious consequences, especially if there was gun play. There were no telephones, but someone ran for Bob Johnson, the constable. By the time he arrived on the scene, Jack Hayes and some of his pals had moved over to the American House. It was a belligerent mob, but they knew when they saw Bob Johnson that he was after their man.

"Cried out a boastful fellow, 'If you take him it will be over my dead body.'

"But Bob Johnson paid no attention to the boast. He strode over to Hayes and announced that he was under arrest. Hayes resisted him. One version of the story that has come to our attention is one recalling that Hayes had been released from jail a few days previously, because of a misdemeanor. Was he celebrating? It could be. It was the Fourth of July.

"A few weeks ago, when the Kunze building was being torn down," said Miss Otis in her 1957 feature, "workmen came across a book of old cemetery records. There is an entry that reads: John Henry, better known as Jack Hayes, shot while resisting an officer, July 4, 1878. He was buried in Greenwood Cemetery on July 6, 1878.

"A grateful citizenry gave Brave Bob Johnson the revolver a few weeks later. And soon afterwards he removed from the community. In the passing of years, he was lost even to memory."

Additional information about

Brave Bob Johnson was included in Roy L. Dodge's book, "Ticket to Hell—A Saga of Michigan's Bad Men," published in 1975.

Dodge's research into old newspaper files of the region revealed that Hayes was accompanied to East Tawas in 1878 by one Daniel Dunn, then of the Saginaw Valley and one of the most notorious badmen in Michigan's history. According to Dodge, Constable Johnson was actually trying to arrest Dunn at the American House when Hayes reached for his revolver to try to prevent the arrest.

"Johnson fired two shots in quick succession before Hayes could draw. Hayes fell to the floor mortally wounded. Dunn saw what was coming and during the excitement ran out through a side door of the saloon unnoticed. He disappeared into the crowded street, unaware of his friend's death until later that evening when he was apprehended and jailed," states Dodge in his book.

A notation in the diary of Sheriff L. B. Smith states: Dan Dunn brought here (the jail in Tawas City) today by Constable Davey. Constable Johnson killed Jack Hayes." (The sheriff's diaries are in the collection of the editor of this newspaper.)

A coroner's jury was summoned and its verdict was that Constable Johnson killed Hayes in self defense and in the line of duty. Dodge states in his book that "the following day, Dunn paid a fine and was released from jail. This is the only record of Dunn's arrest during his lawless career in Lower Michigan."

Author Dodge was mistaken on this point for the diary of Sheriff Smith reveals that, on September 25, 1878, "Daniel Dunn was tried for resisting an officer. He was found guilty and sentenced to 18 months in the state prison."

The sheriff's diary states that on September 27, 1878, Smith left Tawas aboard the Steamer Dunlop to take Dunn to the state prison. Dunn was placed overnight in the Bay County Jail at Bay City and, the next day, Sheriff Smith and his prisoner boarded a Jackson, Lansing and Saginaw Railroad passenger train. "Stopped at Lansing and let Detective Jas. H. Boher take Dunn to Jackson," stated the sheriff's diary.

After serving his time in prison, Dunn left Lower Michigan and headed for Seney in the Upper Peninsula, described by state historians as "the toughest town in Michigan." On July 26, 1891, Dunn was shot to death in a Seney saloon.

If the revolver which was presented to Constable Bob Johnson by a "grateful East Tawas citizenry" in 1878 could be located, it would make a fine addition to loan to the collection of the Iosco County Museum at East Tawas.

This is where some armchair detective work in locating its whereabouts would be appreciated, especially by Historian Smith of Lake Forest, Illinois, who is anxious to write his story.

SEVERAL SALOONS lined the west side of Newman Street, one of which was the scene of a fight leading to gunplay on July 4, 1878. Sheriff L. B. Smith had warned all saloon keepers that too much celebration by patrons on the national holiday could lead to trouble.

Editorial—Use Some Common Sense

Many viewers of a television commercial being repeated during these slow sales days for four-wheel-drive vehicles should be questioning the manufacturer's insistent reasoning that its vehicles can travel anywhere.

It is a proven fact that those modern off road vehicles can and do travel over the roughest terrain—just watch the television commercial which shows ORVs practically flying up hills. In the process, much public and private land is being irreparably damaged and it would be foolish to make repairs because the damaging action would be repeated.

Only last week, the Herald printed two pictures which graphically illustrated the damage being done at Silver Valley by ORVs—four-wheel-drives and motorcycles. The hill-climbing ORVs have cut deeply through the fragile sod of the forest and left wide areas of sterile soil open to wind and water erosion.

A few years ago, Silver Valley was temporarily closed to all vehicles because of damage caused by heavy traffic. Quotation marks should be placed around the word closed, for numerous numskulls evaded blockades with their vehicles and continued to have "fun" damaging that area.

Last week, legislation was being considered at Lansing to prohibit ORVs from using state forest lands due to similar damage. It would be a shame to tar all ORV drivers with the same brush which should be used on a minority, but stiffer regulations are needed and penalties provided for those who disregard the law.

Those persons with the ORV "bug" should drive on the trails clearly marked for vehicles. If the current gasoline crisis does not end such nonsense, then an aroused public should demand tougher laws.

Know Your Michigan Law
By Attorney General FRANK J. KELLEY

Each year, citizens are asked to vote on bond issues for public improvements ranging from parks to sewers.

Since voters are the ultimate consumers of public facilities, their decisions on the improvements will affect not only their taxes, but their community's growth and development. Voters often, however, are not adequately informed on the project on which they are voting.

Like all consumers, voters should be kept informed so they can decide whether a bond proposal will be a "good buy." Otherwise, proposals may pass or fail due to voter ignorance.

It is advisable that you, the voter, learn as much as possible about bond issues. Some projects should be purchased now, because the improvement is needed and its costs will go up if the project is delayed. Other projects have no priority and can be purchased at later dates.

Here is a list of questions a voter might ask himself when considering bond proposals:

- Do we need the project now, or can it be deferred?
- Is it acquired at a good price?
- Will it operate efficiently?
- How long will the improvement last?
- What is the community benefit?
- What are the operating and maintenance costs?
- What will the bonds cost in taxes?
- Will the taxes have to be paid beyond the useful life of the project?
- What will the project cost with the financing?
- How will we, the taxpayers, benefit from the project? In the short term? In the long run?
- Is the project a mere patch which will cost more in the long run or is it a long-term solution?
- What will be our over-all tax burden when this debt is added to it?
- What are the alternatives?
- What happens if nothing is done?
- If citizens are informed—as is necessary in a democracy—they will be able to fully appreciate or forcefully oppose public improvement projects, and be assured their tax dollars are spent wisely.

Servant '79 is the 16th musical ensemble to tour as part of Judson's summer reach out program. One of the Midwest's best known Christian groups, the Good News Circle, started as a Judson summer team.

Servant '79 is traveling more than 20,000 miles and performing in some 125 locales during the spring, summer and fall of 1979. Music ranges from works of contemporary Christian writers to traditional Gospel songs.

"This is how the judgment works: the light has come into the world, but people love the darkness rather than the light, because their deeds are evil." (John 3:19 TEV)

No matter where we live today, times are changing. The concepts of our homes, our churches, our social community life are quite different from those of 25-30 years ago. With our whole world in a state of constant change, issues become more complex. It is hard to know what is right. Since there is so much margin for error and a lack of clear-cut models, any type of behavior and philosophy of life may seem acceptable.

We often question, "What is right?" I believe our Lord was not so anxious that we know right as that we know truth. He said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." He also said, "Ye shall know the

America's Most Pressing Problem

By CONG. ROBERT DAVIS

To most Americans, the most pressing problem facing the country today is the energy shortage—especially the current gasoline crisis. The first thing people want to know is if the shortage is real, or if it is a hoax created by a few top oil company executives.

The shortage is, indeed, real. We, as Americans, have enjoyed the conveniences resulting from plentiful oil supplies for several decades. Our consumption has increased in leaps and bounds and the demands are still increasing. We must realize that the warnings we have been hearing over the last several years are true. Oil is a nonrenewable resource. It will run out. We must change our ways.

The oil companies, along with government and the citizens of this country, must, however, do their part. They must continue to operate at full production, while looking for a means of extracting the petroleum from the earth.

The role of government is very important in dealing with the energy crisis. Those of us directly involved in the government process must make sure that we have a plan for the country to operate under. We also have to see that alternative sources of energy are developed.

As a member of the science and technology's subcommittees on Energy Development and Application, and Science, Research and Technology, I have had an opportunity to study first-hand several very promising alternatives to petroleum fuels.

Coal is by far the most abundant energy resource in the United States. Because of this, a great deal of time and money is being spent to develop new ways to extract coal and increase its uses. A major area we have been looking into in committee is coal liquefaction and coal gasification. The purpose of coal conversion is to convert the coal into either a gas or a liquid synthesized petroleum, or a solid which is then used like a super-efficient coal. The biggest problem in coal conversion at this time is cost. There are no plants in the United States which can convert the coal, but two plants—one to make the solid and the other to process the liquid—are being funded by the federal government. Although the costs of this alternative may be prohibitive in the near future, it is a very promising area.

Another area which deserves further research is peat gasification. Michigan has the third largest peat reserves in the country. I ad-

UNLIKE today's United States Navy, the Continental Navy that fought America's war for independence was small, weak and handicapped by coming into existence only after fighting with Britain had begun. In little more than 200 years, the navy has become the world's greatest seapower, challenged only by the Soviet fleet. Petty officer Third Class Raymond E. Paradise, a quartermaster stationed aboard the Spruance-class destroyer, USS Hewitt, is a modern-day sailor whose basic job has changed little since the Revolutionary War. "A quartermaster's job is to ensure the safe navigation of the ship," said the 24-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Paradise, 620 Main Street, Au Gres. Paradise explained the primary mission of the Hewitt is antisubmarine warfare. With the newest automated and computerized equipment, the Spruance-class destroyer can detect and destroy the newest subs put to sea today, requiring few manual actions from the first detection of a sub to the launching of an antisubmarine rocket torpedo.

HOW TO INSTALL INSULATION
Assemble all materials and equipment at work site. Do not unwrap insulation packages until ready to be used; insulation expands when wrappers are removed. Check attic roof for leaks and make repairs before installing insulation. Wet insulation is not effective. Caulk all openings where ducts, pipes or wires go through a floor, wall, etc.

Dress for safety and comfort when installing insulation. Wear loose-fitting, long-sleeve shirt and loose fitting trousers. Use gloves and a face mask. Provide good lighting.

Unfinished attic floors can be insulated with batt, blanket or loose-fill material. Press—but do not crush—the insulation between the joists or trusses. Begin at the outer edge and work toward the center where it is easier to cut and fit. Leave a ventilation path around the outside edges of the attic. Try not to cover electric wiring. If using loose-fill material, maintain a consistent density by using a rake. Do not crush the material. Follow similar instructions for finished attic floors after removing floor boards.

Unless access can be gained to existing sidewalls from the attic, they must be insulated by a contractor. Open frame walls are much easier to insulate. They are usually insulated with faced batt or blanket material. Cut the blankets slightly longer than the height of the wall so that they can be tucked at the top and bottom.

Insulation is needed under floors if the space below is unheated. Faced batt insulation is the easiest material to work with in this situation. The vapor barrier should face up; a ventilation space should be left between the vapor barrier and the floor.

Keep the insulation in place by lacing wire between the bottom of joists, or staple short sections of chicken wire across the joists and slide the insulation on top of the wire. Be sure not to leave gaps.

Follow the directions for installing insulation under floors for the overhead part of the crawl space.

For additional information contact Angela Ferguson Giles, extension energy assistant, at the Iosco County Cooperative Extension Service office, Post Office Box 599, County Building Annex, Tawas City, or call 362-3449
