D&M Donates Locomotive and Four Cars to Greenfield Village

Details for a program Tuesday, June 12, formally turning over a train composed of a steam locomotive and four antique railroad cars to Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum, Dearborn, is being prepared by the museum and officials of the Detroit and Mackinac Railway.

It is believed that the contribution of the train will be one of the largest ever made to the nationally-known museum by a single donor, with a value of approximately one-half million dollars.

Tentative announcement that the transaction was in the making was revealed early last February by Lyle D. Hughes, director of general services for Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum. Hughes is a former Tawas City resident and attended high school here.

Hughes met Wednesday of last week with Charles A. Pinkerton II, newly-elected president of the railroad's board of directors. Two members of the museum's public relations staff were here to assist with preliminary details for the program.

It is expected that the formal presentation will be made at mid-morning on June 12, with the director of Greenfield Village and Henry Ford Museum participating, along with Mrs. Charles A. Pinkerton Jr. A complete program is to be announced at a later date.

THIS ANCIENT steam locomotive restored in the shop of the Detroit and Mackinac Railway, along with four restored wooden cars, has been donated to Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum. The locomotive and caboose are shown here on a test run in 1974. In the cab are Charles A. Pinkerton Jr. and his son, Charles A. Pinkerton III. A ceremony is to be held here June 12 turning the equipment over to the world famous museum.—Tawas Herald Photo.

TAWAS CITY Axis Dream of World Supremacy Ends According To Law Tawas Boy Sees First Atomic Bomb Explosion EAST TAWAS

THIS BANNER HEADLINE was printed across the top of the Herald's front page on August 17, 1945, three days after the unconditional surrender of Japan. The sub head at right tells of one of the most famous pictures of the war, this bomb was dropped three days after the first one devastated Hiroshima with an explosive force of 20,000 tons of TNT.

During World War II, Isosco County's young men and women served around the globe in the nearly four-year battle against the Axis partners—from the China-Burma and Pacific theatres of war to the battles of the Atlantic, the Mediterranean, Italy, the beaches of Normandy and Continental Europe—practically anywhere there was fighting, this county was represented.

MUSHROOM over Nagasaki is left by the second atomic bomb to be used in the war. One of the most famous pictures of the war, this bomb was dropped three days after the first one devastated Hiroshima with an explosive force of 20,000 tons of TNT.

More than 25 of this county's men made the supreme sacrifice—they gave their lives for their country in those far-flung corners of the globe: One drowned in the China Sea as a forgotten prisoner of war, another died in a tank battle on the African desert, others fell on beaches, in jungles, in the air and in battered towns.

The same can be said for practically every other community in the nation, but Isosco County holds the distinction of having a son whose contribution was of a far different nature to the war effort, in that he had a part in a revolutionary discovery which brought a sudden end to hostilities. That discovery was later turned to peacetime purposes and is much in the news today.

The importance or weight of a news story can usually be judged by the size of the headline that story commands. One of the largest headlines ever appearing in The Tawas Herald during its 55-year history was one line, "Peace," which was spread in bold type across the top of the front page on August 17, 1945, three days after the unconditional surrender of Japan.

away for 10 miles around, the scientists and their staffs crouched behind massive concrete shields and shelters at about that distance. "Suddenly, everything went white, a glaring white, brighter than anything that I had ever before experienced," said Fitzhugh in the letter reprinted by the Herald.

Pointing out there were still strict security regulations "and I will say no more than what was officially released in the papers and news broadcasts." Fitzhugh said, "I won't waste any more space giving details about what you have already read, except one thing which I was fortunate enough to witness. That was the world's first man-made atomic explosion that took place a few weeks ago in a desert south of here. I had a grandstand view from the top of a mountain 20 miles away from where the world's first atomic bomb was fired.

As a youth growing up in Tawas City, he lived with his aunt and uncle in the house west of today's Consumers Appliance Store. Local friends from the late 1930s recall that "Bob" was constantly conducting chemistry, electrical and other scientific experiments in his home laboratory, but none could even dream that he would one day be an engineer-technician working on the Manhattan Project leading to development of the atomic bomb.

"Iosco County, along with all other communities of the nation, heard with joy President Truman's confirmation of the long awaited end of the war. When the message was broadcast Tuesday evening, places of business closed in the Tawas and everyone rushed out on the streets to celebrate," reported the Herald.

A smaller subhead next to the lead story revealed, for the first time, one of the great secrets of the war. The Herald's headline had a local angle, "Tawas Boy Sees First Atomic Bomb Explosion."

"Following the release by the government of information about the world revolutionizing discovery, Tsgt. Robert Fitzhugh divulges that he has been employed for months as an engineer in the various government plants devoted to developing the atomic bomb," stated the news story.

In 1945, no responsible scientist would predict what would happen when the first full-scale atomic explosion was tried. Were these bombs useless or were they annihilating? The New Mexico test proved that the bomb had been "born," but no one could yet measure the immediate military consequences of the discovery. Today, more than 30 years later, the discovery is still being measured in its peacetime uses.

Following the war, he continued his employment with the federal government and is a resident today at Los Alamos, New Mexico, still engaged in atomic research—both militarily and for peacetime purposes.

A few years ago, Fitzhugh called quits to one of his favorite enjoyments in life—flying—and he had flown his own plane here several times over the years to be with relatives. The distance in miles today between New Mexico and Tawas City is not so great as the distance in time—between youth and that point in life when one is nearing retirement age.

In a letter to his aunt and uncle, Margaret and William Fitzhugh of Tawas City, Sergeant Fitzhugh gave a graphic description of the historic trial shot of the first atomic bomb explosion on July 17, 1945.

Detonated at the top of a pylon 100 feet high in the New Mexico desert, everyone had been cleared

"With a flashlight, another fellow and I climbed the mountain at 3:30 a. m. to see the event at 5:30 a. m. Just as it was getting light, it was fired. Due to confused warning signals, I was not expecting it but, fortunately, I was standing with my back turned, so I was not looking at it," said Fitzhugh in his letter.

But in 1945, this new weapon meant that the Allies would not have to turn to Russia to wage a combined land-sea war against Japan. An ultimatum calling for an immediate unconditional surrender of the armed forces of Japan was published on July 26, 1945. Its terms were rejected by the military rulers of Japan and the United States Air Force made its plans accordingly to cast one atomic bomb on Hiroshima and another on Nagasaki. The rest is history as the bombs were dropped on August 6 and 9, 1945, which led to the Herald's largest headline in its history.

"It would be a mistake to suppose that the fate of Japan was settled by the atomic bomb," Winston Churchill wrote later in his memoirs, "The Second World War." Japan's defeat was certain before the first bomb fell, but unlimited effusion of American blood was saved—including that of numerous Isosco County boys who were poised to make the landings—but dropping the bomb made it no longer necessary to take those islands by force.

ROBERT FITZHUGH is shown here as a youngster growing up in Tawas City. His great interest in science led to an engineering degree and secret work on the atomic bomb. He is a resident today of Los Alamos, New Mexico, and is still employed in atomic research.

"I dropped to the ground, not knowing what to expect. I hid my face in my arm, but nothing could shut out the light. It seemed I could see right through my eyelids, clothes and arm—and that was merely the light reflected from the sky and ground, the source being 20 miles away.

"After the white glare began to die down, I peeked over my arm and there, was one of the biggest explosions taking place. It seemed only about a half-mile away. The great sun-like ball of fire was rapidly expanding and changing from white to yellow to red. The planes above were finally lost in the great clouds of smoke and dust which rose quickly and mushroomed out, glowing with a peculiar violet color. Another column of smoke arose out of this and went straight up to the level of the rain clouds.

"About a minute and a half after the flash, the shock and sound wave hit us. It was a loud, sharp crack, followed by a thundering reverberation that rose to a peak and died away. All that was left was a mist of dust and a long thin column of smoke."

That letter appearing in the Herald and written by a local boy was one of the best descriptions of the first atomic blast which appeared in any publication.

"Knowing Sergeant Fitzhugh's great interest from childhood in science, friends will be pleased that he has been privileged to take part in this work, the outcome of which has been the dream of scientists since the days of ancient alchemy," stated Editor P. N. Thornton of the Herald.

In 1945, no responsible scientist would predict what would happen when the first full-scale atomic explosion was tried. Were these bombs useless or were they annihilating? The New Mexico test proved that the bomb had been "born," but no one could yet measure the immediate military consequences of the discovery. Today, more than 30 years later, the discovery is still being measured in its peacetime uses.

TODAY, Robert Fitzhugh has a stable of three riding horses on his ranch in New Mexico.

Behind the four-hit pitching of Todd Horn, Whittemore-Prescott Area Cardinals turned back the Tawas Braves, 4-2, in a nine-inning game played Wednesday night at the losers' home field.

Hero of the night until Pipesh's blast was Revord, who hit a solo homer in the top of the seventh inning to tie the game.

Horn struck out 15 batters to receive credit for the win. The loser was Look, who pitched in relief of Grant Mousseau, starting Tawas pitcher.
