

Power Company Official to Discuss Area Energy Needs

John D. Selby, president and chief executive officer of Consumers Power Company, is to share his thoughts regarding the energy picture in Michigan and its effect on the business climate at a breakfast Thursday morning, 8 o'clock, at the Holland House, East Tawas.

Community leaders of the Tawas area have been invited by J. E. Wessels, district manager of the power company, to attend the program.

A week ago, Gov. William G. Milliken announced that the state is launching a campaign to encourage development of a "new" power source in Michigan: Hydroelectric power.

This source of energy is definitely not new in this area for the AuSable River has provided electrical power for nearly 70 years through Consumers Power Company's hydroelectric dams.

But the governor reports that "recent studies by the Michigan Department of Commerce's Energy Administration and the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission indicate that Michigan has a great potential to convert many of the state's 61 existing dams into producers of low cost electricity."

The governor said final approval is expected June 4 from the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission on a Michigan request for $30,250 to provide expert advice and feasibility studies for communities interested in reviving power generation at dam sites.

Milliken said since many of the dams which are most likely for re-conversion are in Northern Lower Michigan, the hydropower assistance program will be located at Ferris State College at Big Rapids.

The governor said that since 1960, hydropower production by Michigan utilities has decreased from 6.6 to 1.3 percent of total electrical generation. The number of dams used for electrical production has dropped from 100 to 66 during this time. Many former heavy producers of electricity have been dismantled and sold by power companies to local communities at a token price.

The dams decommissioned between 1960 and 1970 had an average annual generating capacity of one million kilowatt hours. None of the AuSable River plants were decommissioned.

"Reharnessing these dams represents an opportunity Michigan cannot afford to miss if we are to succeed in developing alternative sources of power that do not depend on dwindling supplies of oil and gas," Milliken said.

The program also could play an important role in the state's tourism industry, since many of the deteriorating dams are in prime recreational areas.

Three of the buses equipped with chair lifts will go into regular route service and three buses will operate on a demand service. All are 16-passenger vehicles and furnished under a state program.

Among those serving on the advisory council are Timothy Wendler, supervisor of program services for Bright Horizons; David Westcott, transportation supervisor, Tawas Area School; John Wallace, transportation supervisor, Oscoda Area School; Dorothy Alexander, outreach worker with Trio Council; Stanley Brockenbrough, superintendent of Northeast Michigan Rehabilitation and Opportunity Centers; Lea Bergeron, former voluntary director of the first Dial-A-Ride bus system in this county.

Supplier Files Suit Against GGL Firm

Supplier of materials used in recent water projects in the Tawas has commenced suit in Iosco County Circuit Court to collect payment for those materials.

A petition filed by the East Jordan Iron Works names GGL Contracting, Incorporated, and Western Casualty and Surety Company as the defendants.

The four-count suit claims that GGL owes $1,551.25 for materials used in the Tawas City water extension and $10,478.04 for materials used in the East Tawas project.

Among those visiting this community's "sister city" were Mayor Herbert Cholger and his wife, Councilmen James Lansky and Donald Hayes, City Mgr. Lowell Thomas, City Clerk Rachel Sue

Raise Funds for New Wilber Church

A new church will soon rise on the site of one which was destroyed by fire on January 18. The 35 members of Wilber United Methodist Church gave final approval of preliminary plans at a meeting May 23.

Only the bell was salvaged from the 92-year-old church after it burned to the ground nearly five months ago. Men of the congregation rescued the old bell from the burned out basement, where it had fallen from the belfry without being broken.

The old bell will be installed in the new structure to be constructed by Ken Schaaf Builders. The new church's dimensions will be 35 by 70 feet and have seating for 70 persons.

The congregation is involved in raising funds to finish the interior and members plan to do this work themselves with community help. One of the projects planned will be a miscellaneous auction on July 14.

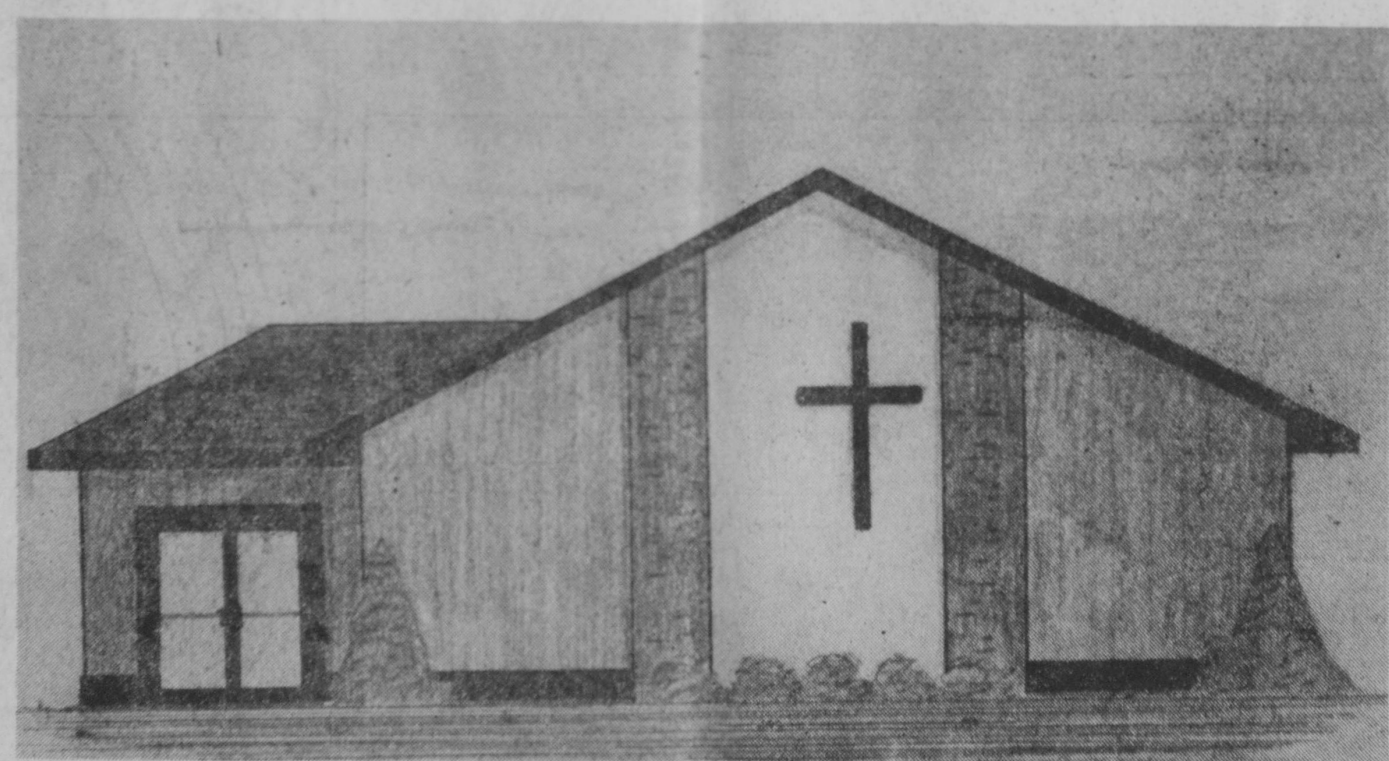

Between insurance money and pledges from members, enough money has been raised to rebuild on the same site this summer and plans are to have church services by Christmas.

The old church, which had been the social and religious center of the Wilber Township community, had survived the 1953 tornado which roared through that area of the county. During its nearly 100 years of service to farm families, it had witnessed countless weddings, baptisms and funerals. The old church, measuring 28 by 44-foot and hand hewn from native pine, was dedicated March 9, 1887, after being under construction for about a year.

Farmers of the community cleared the site and cut the timber, which was sawed into lumber at the Ebenezer Laidlaw mill in Tawas Township. Labor on constructing the church was provided by men of the community.

The small building looked like most churches in rural areas of the country, but it was more than a religious center because of its use for social activities. It was the

Kroger Spending High in Michigan

The Kroger Company, which operates 107 supermarkets in Michigan, recently released figures indicating it also is one of the state's good customers.

In its annual report of purchases by state, Kroger reported that it spent $44-million dollars for Michigan products and services in 1978.

David Burt, vice president of the marketing area which operates the stores in this area, said that approximately 307-million dollars of the total represents purchases of products from Michigan farms and plants.

"While much of this product was bought for sale in our stores in Michigan," Burt said, "we also buy products here for sale in Kroger stores throughout the South and Midwest, thus broadening the market for Michigan products."

Kroger spent four-million dollars to buy dairy products and eggs here last year; 96-million dollars for meats and poultry; 136-million dollars for canned and packaged foods; 16.2-million dollars for fresh fruits and vegetables, and $5.2-million dollars for products other than food which are sold in its stores.

The state's economy also benefited from other needs of Kroger stores, Burt points out. For example, the company's 8,369 employees in the state were paid 123.4-million dollars in wages, most of which was returned to the local community. In addition, the 2,184 Kroger shareowners who live in Michigan received $577,703 in dividends.

Kroger also paid rent of approximately 8.4-million dollars for stores and other facilities owned by Michigan landlords. Other expenses needed to run the business, such as heat, light, power, advertising and other goods and services brought 104-million dollars additional to the state's economy.

GARDEN VARIETY ITCHES

With food prices in supermarkets at record high, millions of Americans will attempt this year to hold down their food costs by hoeing down their own vegetable gardens.

That's the word from the U.S. Department of Agriculture which reports that 35 million citizens will take to the soil in 1979, an increase of 4 percent over last year.

Gardens will again sprout the standard varieties of flowers, too, since the "pleasure of growing something" is as important as the production of food, says Evelyn Kaitz, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Medical specialists warn, however, that while the spirit and appetite of home gardeners may be gratified by their sweat and honest toil, the skins of many of them may pay a price. Face, hands, neck and legs will be exposed to a host of garden variety skin irritations.

Newtimers, as well as old-timers, in the garden should be forewarned that while the worst skin irritants—poison ivy and poison oak—may spring up as garden weeds, there are also any number of "good" plants—vegetables and flowers that can and do irritate the skin.

Says Maurice I. Shinefield, M.D. of New Jersey, a Fellow of the American College of Allergists: "A number of vegetable plants, including carrots, celery, garlic, okra, onions, asparagus, and more can cause a rash with accompanying intense itching."

In fact, says another medical specialist, almost any plant in the garden can cause a rash on some individual.

And flower gardeners too may find some irritants among their blossoms.

"Allergic skin reactions can be caused by such standards in the garden as chrysanthemums, hyacinths, and tulips...and the common, ever present ragweed," says Jerome Z. Litt, M.D. Assistant Clinical Professor of Dermatology, Case Western Reserve School of Medicine.

Biting bugs seem to relish their yearly crop of gardeners. While mosquitoes, bees and biting flies are familiar, gardeners should be aware of the tiny chigger, known also as the "red bug."

So small that it easily slips unnoticed from plant to clothes, the chigger migrates until it finds a tasty spot of skin to sample.

In "The Gardener's Bug Book," Cynthia Westcott, a plant pathologist, notes: "Chigger bites occur most frequently on the legs, just above the shoes and belt line. In addition to intense itching, chiggers produce large papules which persist for about two weeks."

What to do about these evils in the garden? Long pants, long-sleeved shirts and gloves help, but if exposure is unavoidable, or if a rash is developing, wash the exposed area thoroughly with warm water and soap. Keep available an analgesic/anesthetic product, such as Rhusispray or Rhuicream, to treat an irritated area.

Rhuli can calm the itch before repeated scratching seriously irritates the skin. A visit to a physician is recommended in any case of plant rash or insect bite or sting in which the irritation persists.

With these minimal precautions and some Rhuli relief ready, it's happy harvesting.

Potts Cools AuGres Bats, 8-1, With Two-Hitter and Homer

Tawas Indies scored five runs on three hits in the second inning of Sunday's game to defeat AuGres, 8-1.

Brad Potts, who allowed only three hits in a losing cause two weeks ago, turned in another fine pitching performance and gave up only two hits to AuGres.

The losers scored their lone run in the first inning on two errors and Potts closed the door. After that, he struck out eight batters and did not walk a man.

Singles by Potts, Milan and Zink, coupled with a double by F. Jordan, were the big blows in the Indies' five-run uprising in the second inning. A walk and two errors hurt AuGres' cause. Potts helped his own cause in the seventh inning when he cracked a two-run homer. The only other Tawas player to get more than one hit was Link, who had two singles.

Keep Cool When Hot Days Hit

Throughout the nation Citizens Band radio operators have earned a reputation for passing on helpful information that has helped reduce traffic congestion and frequently has saved lives.

Looking toward a sudden hot spell that will bring on a rash of boiling radiators, Automotive Cooling System Institute offers some advice that might be disseminated via C.B. radio. If you're stuck on a limited access highway clogged with overheated cars, don't add to the congestion by causing your own car to boil over. Turn off your air conditioner! It can be worth the discomfort.

According to the Institute, some hot weather traffic tie-ups are self-perpetuating—one stalled car begets another. A marginal cooling system will overheat when it is subjected to abnormal periods of idling, especially when the added burden of an air conditioner is placed on the engine. CB'ers could help alleviate the situation by advising fellow CB'ers to keep their cool through the "parking lot" (CB lingo for traffic jam).

To further reduce the burden on your cooling system, put your car in neutral while you're stopped and run the engine at slightly more than a fast idle so that the fan can pull extra air through the radiator.

And if your car does overheat, pull it off the road as quickly as possible and do not attempt to remove the radiator cap until the temperature has dropped. When you do remove the cap, do it with extreme caution, protecting yourself with a wad of rags. Scalding water could spew into your face.

Whether or not you have a CB radio in your car, the following advice from ACSI can help you avoid engine overheating:

1. Give your car a good cooling system check-up before the hot weather hits. This should include a pressure test of the system plus a careful inspection of all belts, hoses, connections and the radiator pressure cap.
2. Have the cooling system flushed and install new antifreeze coolant if you have not had this done during the past year. Be sure you use the correct fifty-fifty solution of antifreeze and water. It's just as important in the summer as it is in the winter.

Your automotive service dealer can check these important cooling system components for you. Or, if you're a do-it-yourselfer, write to AUTOMOTIVE COOLING SYSTEM INSTITUTE for their new booklet, "A QUICK COURSE IN CAR CARE." Send a stamped, self-addressed number 10 envelope to the Institute at 222 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

HOME ENERGY CONSULTANT

QUESTIONS MOST ASKED ABOUT REFRIGERATORS

"Why does my new refrigerator sound different than my old one?" This is the question most frequently asked about refrigerators. There is no single answer to this question, because there are many factors that contribute to overall sound. If it is bigger than the old one (which it probably is), it will be noisier simply because more mechanical equipment is required to cool the additional space. Most modern-day refrigerators utilize a rigid foam insulation. This type of insulation is very desirable because it has excellent insulating capabilities. It saves energy but does have a tendency to amplify sounds. Automatic or partially automatic defrost systems, automatic icemakers and cube or ice-water dispensers — common in newer models but not found in many older ones — all add to the operating noise.

"Does it cost more to operate a 'frost clear' refrigerator?" The average consumer will find the convenience of this feature does add slightly to the cost of operation. Manual defrost models use the least amount of energy but require the most maintenance. However, if a manual defrost refrigerator were used carelessly, such as letting too much frost build up, the difference in energy use would virtually disappear.

"Why does my new refrigerator run more frequently than my old one?" The modern refrigerator system is more precisely engineered — just powerful enough to handle normal use conditions. This proper sizing makes today's refrigerators more energy-efficient. The older refrigerators became colder before shutting off, and warmer before turning on again. Although the newer refrigerators run more often, the overall running time may actually be lower.

"How long should foods be allowed to 'cool down' before I put them in the refrigerator?" The Food and Drug Administration and the Energy Department advise that food should be refrigerated as soon as possible (but a boiling pot of soup does not have to be popped into the refrigerator immediately). Hot foods do make refrigerators work harder. However, by the time a meal is served, anything left over has usually cooled to a point where it can be refrigerated without putting too much of a burden on the modern refrigerator. The problem, FDA says, is that people tend to forget the food and let it cool too long, which can result in food-borne illness. FDA's advice is to put leftovers in the refrigerator as soon as you finish your meal and to refrigerate other foods before the temperature falls to 140°F (at this temperature the container is hot, but not too hot to touch).

THREE COUNTY BANKS CLOSE DOORS MONDAY

Liquidation of Assets Forced by Troubles in Ealy Banks of Thumb District

L. G. McKay Assures Depositors That Assets Should Cover Liabilities

When A Poor Bean Crop Caused

BANK FAILURES

Failure of a bean crop in the Thumb of Michigan once touched off a series of bank failures in Northeastern Michigan which stunned Iosco County depositors and paralyzed business. In all, 16 banks were toppled in a domino-like action.

It was November 1, 1926—a "Black Monday," indeed—when the three local banks of Ealy, McKay and Company were notified that all assets were being liquidated and the banks were being forced into receivership.

This disastrous situation resulted because privately-owned banks at East Tawas, Tawas City and Hale had interlocking ownership with the 13 banks of Ealy and Company located in the Thumb territory, along with banks at Prescott and West Branch.

Banks of the Thumb had been closed the previous Friday because of "frozen" loans and other contributing factors. Farmers of that area were dependent, to a large extent, upon beans and sugar beets as cash crops.

The 1926 bean crop was reported to be a 50 percent failure due to wet weather just at harvest time, while continued rain made harvest of sugar beets so costly there was little profit left to the growers.

Instead of loans being paid, farmers were demanding increased credit and ready cash became more and more scarce so some of the banks were not always in a position to meet demands of depositors. A "run" developed at the Caro bank and tipped Ealy and Company's banking world upside down.

Although the three Iosco County banks were independent, solvent units, they were forced into receivership because of the interlocking ownership of stock. This was caused by a 1925 law stopping the sale of stock in private-owned banks; otherwise, interest of Thumb banks in local institutions could have been estimated and sold. In fact, an offer had been received for purchase of this stock.

Besides the disastrous effect to business by holding up money for current operation, there was a natural uneasiness over an impending loss to depositors who had invested in commercial and savings deposits.

The Ealy firm had a long history in Iosco County, the firm of Carson, Ealy and Company Bank of Caro having established a bank at East Tawas in 1902. The bank was located in the present law office of Michael Freel and Thomas Huck.

When a new cashier was needed here in 1903, a young Caro banker attending the University of Michigan received an urgent call to come to East Tawas. A few years later, upon the death of W. H. Carson, the bank was reorganized and the former university student, L. G. McKay, was taken into partner-

LOYD G. MCKAY SR. recalled in 1961 "that it was a long, hard struggle" to assume responsibility of paying a $650,000 obligation of Ealy, McKay and Company banks in full. The local banks had interlocking ownership with a group of ship as vice president and cashier of the new Ealy, McKay and Company bank.

The new banking institution expanded its operation in Iosco County, establishing a Tawas City branch bank in 1906, along with a branch at Hale in 1911.

Under McKay's direction, the bank at East Tawas and its two branches flourished independently of other banks in the chain. Events which took place in the fall of 1926 proved to be one of the greatest challenges in McKay's life.

After closing of the local banks, the trust department of the First National Bank of Bay City was appointed receiver of Ealy, McKay and Company, under the supervision of I. H. Baker, vice president and general manager.

In a notice printed in the November 5, 1926, issue of the Herald, McKay addressed people of Iosco County as follows:

"After 20 years of living among you and having shared your perfect confidence, you can imagine my grief at having been forced to put this confidence and loyalty to the 'acid test' of the past few days' experience. It is beyond my power to express my appreciation of the loyal way that you have taken it."

Although McKay had no interest in the Thumb banks, he found that "in order to arrive at the value of the capital and surplus in the three Iosco banks, owned by outside members of the firm, it would be necessary to liquidate these banks and we were accordingly obliged to suspend business."

McKay took immediate steps to start legal formalities to organize a new state bank; at the same time, he fought bankruptcy proceedings brought against Ealy, McKay and Company, denying insolvency at any time on the part of the banks at Tawas City, East Tawas and Hale.

A new phase in the local banking situation was entered January 11, 1927, when McKay declared before Fed. Judge A. J. Tuttle that he was not insolvent, opposing his inclusion in any move made toward consolidating petitions for involuntary bankruptcy proceedings filed against McKay and Company banks. The bankruptcy petition filed against McKay was dismissed by Judge Tuttle, who commended the East Tawas banker for his energetic efforts in this perilous financial situation.

McKay was permitted to purchase assets of the three banks at the appraised value, then transferred and conveyed by trust deed the combined assets of the three banks to First National Bank of Bay City, plus his individual property appraised in the net amount of $116,104. The trust deeds provided that his property would remain in First National Bank as trustee until all of the creditors of the three banks were paid their lawful claims.

The first dividend of 10 percent amounting to $45,000 was paid to depositors of the suspended banks in May 1927.

Thirty-five years later, McKay was to recall in a Herald interview "that it was a long, hard struggle" to assume the responsibility of paying the $650,000 obligation of the Ealy, McKay and Company banks in full—but it was accomplished without going into bankruptcy proceedings, which would have meant a return of only a few cents on the dollar to the creditors.

Meanwhile, businessmen and personal friends in the Tawas area urged McKay to organize a new bank. Those friends rallied behind him with a subscription of $30,000. With this capital, McKay organized Peoples State Bank of East Tawas. Its charter was granted by the state banking commission on June 14, 1927.

Then came the bank holiday of February 22, 1933, during which all banks were closed. Although a great many banks did not reopen, assets of Peoples State Bank were liquid and the state expressed confidence in McKay's bank and it was authorized to resume complete operations.

The bean crop failure which touched off a run on Thumb area banks, followed by disaster for Iosco County banks, is a page of local history which is recalled today by only a few older residents.

THIS BRICK BUILDING on East Esmond Road, Hale, was the home of the Ealy, McKay and Company Bank in that community from 1911 until 1926, when all of the firm's banks failed. The firm had a building of similar architecture for its bank in Tawas City.—Tawas Herald Photo.

Editorial—

Draft Laws Should be Revised Before Return of Universal Military Training

Opposition to a peacetime military draft in this country is not new, but in this current age of social activism, the mild protest to a draft in 1940 (they were then termed pacifists) is expected to stand pale against the possible return of mob draft card burning demonstrations of recent times.

This corner will be the first to admit that it is in no position to comment with any degree of intelligence on the necessity for drafting young people into military service—like the average citizens, it must rely on the integrity of our national congress and national leaders for doing what is right to protect this country.

Despite the words of one letter writer to a daily newspaper last week stating that he was "horrified at attempts to resurrect that hideous relic of the past so kindly referred to as the military draft," maintenance of a strong military posture is still necessary for this country's self-protection. If one believes otherwise, he should analyze current world events and even study a little history.

Because of the anguish caused in this country by the Vietnam War involvement, acceptance of a peacetime draft by the American people remains to be seen. Persons calling themselves "social activists" are prepared to oppose a return of the draft, using the same methods brought to bear in this country during the 1960s and early 1970s.

It is hoped that clear-thinking young Americans will make their own decisions based on reason, rather than dramatic confrontations "against the establishment," so forcefully illustrated by a minority, as first, to endanger this country's military line of defense.

If and before there is any need for a return to a military draft, there should be a complete revision of the system to eliminate built in loopholes for evasion; without such a revision, one cannot expect youth to respond favorably to any kind of universal military service—the recollection of unwarranted deferments granted college students, for instance, is just too painful for some to recall.

What is necessary for this country is to have a proven cadre of young people, trained during service of short duration, to stand prepared in time of need. That fact was proven in 1940 during another era and there are few who were drafted at that time, or during another emergency in the 1950s, who believe their call by Selective Service was a "barbarous anachronism," as the draft is termed today by one young activist letter writer.

Romney Cuts Ribbon to Open Trail

15 Years Ago— May 27, 1964—Gov. George Romney cut a ribbon Wednesday officially opening the shore-to-shore trail from Empire on Lake Michigan to the Tawas on Saginaw Bay-Lake Huron. Michigan Trail Riders Association plans a June 20-28 caravan of riders and hikers to take the full route.

First step in establishment of a railroad museum here was accomplished last week when an old wooden caboose was moved from the Detroit and Mackinac Railway yards to the Tawas City Park. Only two wooden cabooses remained in service on the north end of the line and D&M Pres. C. A. Pinkerton Jr. ordered that one of them be spared from the eventual scrap pile.

The Fred A. Manske, 10,000-ton carrier of the Boland and Cornelius Steamship Company crashed into the tangle of United States Gypsum Company's Alabaster installation and put the shipping operation out of commission for about three days.

The Rev. James Rockhoff will be installed as new pastor of Emanuel Lutheran Church, Tawas City, on June 14.

25 Years Ago— May 28, 1954—Tawas Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a "Ken Lawrence Day" honoring staff members of WNEM-TV. Besides Lawrence, staff members of the station attending a banquet here will be Dave Davis, Frank Benish and Virgil O'Dell.

James Hamilton has installed a new gas-fired oven at the East Tawas Bakery.

Pvt. Harry M. Morley of Tawas City has completed the turret artillery mechanic course at Ft. Knox, Kentucky.

Tawas Area Board of Education has set Monday, June 21, as election day for voting on the $775,000 bonding proposals for construction of new school buildings. All registered voters receive a ballot to increase the tax limitation, but only taxpayers may receive a ballot on the bonding proposition.

Seven concerts are scheduled in Tawas Area Band's summer schedule.

Alfred Baker, president of the junior class, was master of ceremonies at the junior-senior banquet held in the auditorium of the Plainfield Township Rural Agricultural School at Hale.

25 Years Ago— May 25, 1944—Voters of Tawas City are urged to adopt a $12,600 bond issue to complete the sewage system, which has been partially completed with CWA and FEERA funds. If approved, the federal government will provide $13,000 in labor for construction of the disposal plant. Opponents to the bond issue have emphasized that the city has gotten along 60 years without such a contrivance.

The Rev. Joshua Roberts plans to be in Tawas City toward the middle of June. If any one interested in the purchase of land on the Alabaster shore would write him in Virginia, he will arrange to meet them when he is here.

Linda Likka was severely injured Monday evening while playing at the beach. She climbed to the top of the slide and lost her balance. She fractured a leg and sustained bruises in the fall.

Lyle Hughes won the third grade arithmetic contest at Tawas City School.

TODAY'S Meditation from The World's Most Widely Used Devotional Guide. The Upper Room. (Read Matthew 28:16-20)

"Go, then, to all people everywhere and make them My disciples." (Matthew 28:19 TEV)

A dream to visit every home and apartment in our neighborhood with a copy of the Gospel of John and a booklet about our church became reality in "Operation Outreach."

For over 50 years our church had received members, but recently the stream dried up completely. Following a sermon on personal evangelism, over 20 members banded together for monthly visits to all our neighbors. We went with Jesus' promise before our eyes: "You did not choose Me, but I chose you and appointed you that you should go and bear fruit and that your fruit should abide." We went from door to door, with over 2,000 visits in two years.

What happened? Ten people joined our church and 15 new visitors came. Did we succeed? Not by business standards—a one-percent return is not very good. But over 20 evangelism callers disagree. Jesus left 99 to find the one and we have . . . rejoicing! Also, our neighbors are now our friends!

PRAYER O God, we rejoice in the opportunities to witness to Your love. Renew our commitment and zeal to reach out to all persons. Amen.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY When a church takes evangelism seriously, great things happen.—John Adam Fischer (Englewood, New Jersey)

Know Your Michigan Law By Attorney General FRANK J. KELLEY

"Committing" someone to a mental hospital is not generally a topic of conversation until it affects someone close to us.

But as a subject of today's "Know Your Michigan Law," it is appropriate to review the safeguards established in the 1974 Mental Health Code to guard against arbitrary or unnecessary commitment in any of the state's mental hospitals.

There are two ways in which an adult can be admitted to a mental hospital, voluntarily and involuntarily. For voluntary admission, the person simply requests that the hospital accept him or her for treatment and medical personnel determine that the person would legitimately benefit from inpatient treatment.

Involuntary commitment requires the services of probate court. Someone with firsthand knowledge which might indicate that a person is mentally ill must first file a petition with the court or apply directly to a mental hospital asking for the involuntary hospitalization of the other person.

The petition must state why the person is believed to be mentally disturbed and a doctor's certificate must concur that the person is in need of treatment.

The court or hospital can then order psychiatric examination to determine or verify some disorder. Once a person is deemed to have some mental or emotional disorder, the court can call a hearing to determine if the person should be committed.

A person who is the subject of an involuntary hospitalization attempt has many rights under Michigan's laws. He or she is entitled to copies of the admission petition and the physician's certificates to help prepare a defense; services of an attorney, paid for by the county if necessary; trial by jury, with the subject present; an independent examination by a physician.

It is important to note that being mentally ill is not enough to require that a person be hospitalized involuntarily. A person can be involuntarily hospitalized only if—in addition to being mentally ill—one of two conditions be established: First—there is reason to believe the person will harm someone in the near future. Second—there is reason to believe he or she is unable to attend to basic physical needs, such as food, clothing or shelter.

If the person was admitted as a voluntary patient, he or she is free to terminate their stay at any time. But if they have been involuntarily committed to the mental hospital by the court, it is up to the hospital staff to decide when to release the patient.

Highlights And Sidelights

State Sues Over Base's Toxic Discharge

LANSING—Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley has filed notice with appropriate federal officials that he intends to sue the Department of Defense and Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) for failure to stop the discharge of a toxic substance into the groundwater at Wurtsmith Air Force Base near Oscoda.

Specifically, Kelley's notice points out that the purpose of his suit is to end an immediate threat to Michigan's surface and groundwater, which EPA has acknowledged exists.

Kelley's notice includes joint findings by EPA and Michigan's Department of Natural Resources on October 18, 1978, that: 1. "The . . . air force has allowed a toxic hazardous substance, trichloroethylene (TCE), to be discharged to the groundwaters of the State of Michigan at Wurtsmith Air Force Base. . ."

2. "The TCE has seriously contaminated the groundwaters approximately four miles from the original point of contamination and the contamination poses an imminent threat to the surface waters of the state and nation."

3. "The continual seepage of TCE from the spill location and continued ineffective, improper corrective actions at the air force base . . . pose an imminent threat to . . . VanEtten Creek, VanEtten Lake and Lake Huron."

Kelley filed the notice with EPA Adm. Douglas Costle, Sec. of Defense Harold Brown, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and Sec. of the Air Force John S. Stetson, in compliance with federal regulations which require 60 days notice prior to the start of any civil action against the United States.

In his notice, Kelley points out that the EPA has been aware since 1977 that Trichloroethylene (TCE), a degreasing agent used extensively by the air force, has been discharged into the groundwater at Wurtsmith Air Force Base near Oscoda.

On October 18, 1978, the EPA and the DNR issued a joint administrative order requiring officials at the air force base to clean up the contaminated groundwater.

In an October 19 press release announcing the issuance of that administrative order, an EPA regional official in Chicago, Illinois, said: "It is suspected that migration of TCE in the groundwater may endanger VanEtten Lake, VanEtten Creek and Lake Huron. This order is aimed at tracking the exact migration of the contaminated groundwater and to require adequate treatment for its removal."

"Nothing of consequence has been done since that administrative order and press release were issued," Kelley said. "Six months later, the problem is worse."

Kelley is taking his action in cooperation with Howard A. Tanner, director of the DNR. Tanner and other DNR officials asked the attorney general to file suit after subsequent meetings between the EPA, air force officials and the DNR failed to show concrete results.

"Officials at Wurtsmith have not kept the promises they made to clean up the contamination and the EPA has done nothing to make them act," Kelley said. "The EPA has failed and refused to enforce its own order."

"There is evidence that the contamination has spread and is a potential hazard to nearby residential areas," Kelley said. Under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, the EPA has primary enforcement authority and continues to have a clear duty to enforce the law and its own administrative order, Kelley said.

SSI Eligibility Is Redetermined Yearly

People getting supplemental security income (SSI) payments shouldn't feel they're being singled out for investigation when they're contacted during the year by social security representatives, a social security representative said recently.

The SSI program makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 and over or blind or disabled. The law requires that eligibility for SSI and the amount of the monthly payments be redetermined once a year for everyone getting the payments, the spokesperson said.

The Social Security Administration gets in touch with people to get information about income, living arrangements, and other factors that might affect their SSI payments. This may be done by a questionnaire in the mail or by personal interview in the home or social security office.

Social security representatives are glad to identify themselves. They never ask you to give them money to have something done. It's their duty to help people—in any way they can—to get SSI payments in the right amount.

People can get information about SSI payments by calling, visiting or writing any social security office. The address and telephone number of the nearest social security office can be found in the telephone directory.

Q. I will be going into the hospital soon for an operation and I may receive pathology services by a doctor. Will Medicare hospital insurance cover these services?

A. No. While you are an inpatient in a qualified hospital, Medicare medical insurance pays 100 percent of the reasonable charges for services by doctors in the fields of pathology and radiology, even if you haven't met your annual medical insurance deductible. Because the full reasonable charges are paid, however, they do not count toward meeting your $60 deductible.

Q. My doctor has scheduled me for some diagnostic tests at a nearby laboratory. Will my medical insurance under Medicare pay for the tests?

A. Medical insurance can help pay for diagnostic tests provided by an independent laboratory, but the laboratory must be certified by Medicare for the services you receive. Not all laboratories are certified by Medicare and some are certified only for certain kinds of tests. Your doctor should be able to tell you whether the laboratory is certified and whether the tests are covered by medical insurance.

Three-panel folder, "Your Medicare Recordkeeper," has pockets to hold your Medicare Handbook, "Request for Medicare Payment" forms, claims record sheets, ledgers, and other records and information that will help people keep track of expenses their Medicare health care insurance will help pay for. Single copies of the "Recordkeeper" and information publications are free on request at any social security office.

Questionnaires on Jury Service Need Prompt Attention

Residents receiving questionnaires from the Iosco County Jury Commission concerning prospective duties in district and circuit court should fill out the information and return questionnaires promptly within 10 days.

This was the word received last week from Mrs. Marion Killingbeck, jury commission president, who reported that questionnaires have been mailed out to 837 registered voters.

Jurors are now being selected for terms beginning September 1 through August 31, 1980, for both district and circuit courts.

Those persons furnishing satisfactory proof that they cannot or are unable to serve will be excused and the jury panel filled by drawing from names remaining.

Mio Youth Recognized by Iris Society

William Ziehl of Mio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ziehl, was recently named first runner-up for the National Youth Achievement Award at the American Iris Society convention at Huntsville, Alabama.

"Billy's" past record of growing irises and exhibiting iris specimens was a factor in determining the award.

Last year, he received the silver medal and the best of show award at the Mio Iris Show. In 1976, he received the bicentennial award at the Lansing AIS convention.

Mrs. Jane Ritchie of Renton, Washington, accepted the youth achievement award for him at the Huntsville convention.

His father, a former resident of Tawas City, reports that Billy is going to break up more than 80 plants this year and anyone wishing starters should contact him.

Michigan Consumers Council:

Tips on Choices of Automotive Rustproofing

By LINDA JOY
Executive Director
Michigan Consumers Council

The young woman wanted to keep her new sports car looking brand new for years. Although she had heard that she should get it rustproofed, she really did not know enough about it to make up her mind.

That is why she called the Consumers Council Guideline recently with questions about rustproofing.

As the guideline counselor explained, a rustproofing shop uses a sealant to help keep rust from forming. Although the visible rust is the most obvious, most rust begins on the inner surfaces of the car. Consequently, these sections also need to be coated with the gelatin-like material rustproofers use to seal off the car from rust. To do this, a rustproofing shop either removes some of the decorative trim panels on the car or drills small holes in certain spots to gain access to the inside of the car.

A sealant material is then applied. This substance settles on the surface to form a protective coating against moisture and chemicals which cause rust.

Before deciding on a particular shop, consumers should ask to see some work which the rustproofing shop has done. The rustproofing solution should cover the seams and welded areas of the car. The rustproofing should be able to provide the names and telephone numbers of satisfied customers. Consumers can then call to see if these people are satisfied with the job.

One of the most important things to shop for is the warranty which is offered by the rustproofing shop. Misunderstandings about the terms and limitations of the warranty often lead to problems later between the shop and the customer.

Consumers should find out beforehand exactly which parts of the car are covered by the warranty. Some warranties cover the whole car, while others only cover the parts of the car which are sprayed with the sealant. Some shops require the consumer to bring the car in for a periodic inspection. If this is the case, it is up to the consumer to ask if there is a charge for these check-ups.

If a nationally franchised rustproofing shop does the job, consumers should be sure the warranty is backed by the company itself—not just the individual franchise. This way, warranty service can still be obtained if there is a move to another area.

Consumers who have questions on this or any other consumer topic may call toll free the Consumers Council Guideline at 1-800-292-5680 Monday through Friday, 8:30 a. m. to 5:00 p. m.
