Smelt Fishing Spotty

THE SILVER HORDE of smelt made its appearance in streams emptying into Saginaw Bay last week, but its timing did not coincide with the nights downstate dippers were here to harvest the' fish. The area from the Singing Bridge to the Tawases was jammed with fishermen Friday and Saturday nights, but the best run of smelt came earlier in the week. These pictures were snapped Saturday night at the mouth of the Tawas River. Fishermen were dipping one or two smelt at a time (top photo), but most of the visitors waited around fires on shore for the big run-it just did not happen.-Tawas Herald Photos.

New Retirement Trends Still Not Clear

by Cy Brickfield Ever since the Age Discrimi nation in Employment Act was imended two years ago to curtail tirement policies and practices, there has been almost continuous 'speculation about how the law will affect the nation's business and worklife in the foreseeable future.

As director of the world's largest association of older and/or retired people, I am repeatedly asked about the law's expected impact by reporters, corporate planners, students, researchers and visiting foreign government officials who are intently interested in how the United States is planning to cope with situations similar to those which they expect their countries to be facing before many more years go by

Unfortunately, the most appropriate response I've been able to come up with at this time is an invitation for them to return and pose the question again in, say, five to eight years by which time we will hopefully have a better idea of what is really happening in the rapidly changing world of work

For the moment, however, those of us who are supposed to be knowledgeable about such matters are simply stymied in our efforts to detect a dominant trend in older workers' reactions to the new rules which protect most employees from being forced into retirement before age 70 and eliminates retirement entirely for most federal government employes. While clues have been anything but scarce, they have also been confusingly contradictory.

On a recent Sunday, for instance. I came across an item in

The Washington Post reporting on separate studies conducted by a Chicago consulting firm and the federal Labor Department, both of which agreed that relatively few older workers were remaining - or planning to' remain — on the job past age 65

The survey by Charles D Spencer & Associates analyzed retirement patterns at 100 major companies and found virtually no change in the number of workers "age 65 or older" in the six months following the law's taking effect in January 1979

The very next day, I opened a copy of U.S News & World Report to find a brief story about another study, this one drawing a conclusion directly opposite the one I had read some 24 hours earlier This study, conducted by Hewitt Associates, also of Chicago, covered 582 companies. and revealed that 45 percent of the salaried employes reaching age 65 continue to work '

It seems fair to assume that all of the studies cited were accurate and therefore true, and that neither truth was more self-evident or greater than the other ---which leaves us right back where we started!

So, now we know - or at least have a pretty good idea of -what we don't know about the present and future plans of older workers. To understand why the situation is so confusing and difficult to predict, let's take a quick look at just two of the factors ---inflation and unemployment --that are expected to influence any decisions they make. .

Any consideration of work and retirement today has to begin with inflation which may be the factor most capable of convincing older workers to change their plans. For some years, there has been a growing trend toward voluntary early retirement (especially among workers with private pension coverage) and a general willingness among some older workers to call it quits a year or two short of the mandatory retirement cut-off date. Thus, the ADEA amendments were enacted to make retirement a matter of personal choice rather than company policy.

If inflation continues to worsen - or even remains steady at a relatively high rate - the number of older workers choosing to leave the workforce may very well drop dramatically After all, the older person's best defense against inflation is the income derived from gainful employment, so we could be seeing a rapid growth in the numbers and percentages of older workers choosing to stay on the job for as long as they can.

At the same time, President Carter's anti-inflation strategies are expected to result in increased unemployment which could put additional pressure on older workers to retire. Under the law, employers can't force older workers into retirement, but they can offer them incentives to retire ---or find ways to legally fire them for reasons other than age. On the other hand, employers may decide to stand pat with the older, more experienced employees they already have and know, and to make their labor cuts elsewhere.

Faced with these new realities of retirement, it's entirely possible that we may already know all of the answers, but will simply have to wait to find out until we find the right questions.

Horses Used to Skid Logs

ONE OF THE LAST logging operations in this area to use horses in skidding timber out of the woods is shown here. The crew was bossed by the late Walter Anschuetz of Tawas City.—Tawas Herald Photo.

Throughout much of Iosco County's history, the family name of Anschuetz has been connected with small scale lumbering operations. A member of one branch of the family still operates a small sawmill and another harvests hardwood for marketing stove wood.

Before the turn of the century, Henry Anschuetz of Tawas Township cleared 80 acres of timberland west of Sand Lake for farm use under the Homestead Act. Fifty-six years later, in March 1956, his son, Walter Anschuetz of Tawas City, had charge of a crew of men lumbering this same 80 acres.

What made the story unique in 1956 was the fact that Anschuetz employed the same. methods of harvesting the timber his father had used in the 1890s; in fact, it is believed to have been the last time in Northern Michigan that draft horses provided the power to skid logs out of the woods.

Horses and oxen in large numbers had provided the power to skid logs out of the pineries to banking grounds during Michigan's white pine era and were still in use after World War I as farmers and small operators continued in the cleanup of the few remaining stands of imber.

HORSES once provided the major power for moving logs during the white pine days but, when these pictures were snapped in 1956, there were only a few draft horses remaining and still fewer experienced teamsters. This logging operation found that horsepower was still the most efficient means of skidding logs in deep snow.-Tawas Herald Photo.

Writers Entertained

MICHIGAN OUTDOOR WRITERS were guests of the Tawases, AuGres and Oscoda for two days of trout and smelt fishing last Friday and Saturday. The guests were enter-tained at a fish fry Thursday night held at the Immaculate Heart of Mary Church Parish Hall, top picture. Shown at lower left are Troy Yoder, regional supervisor for the Michigan Department of Natural Resources; Roger Jackson, executive director of Tawas Chamber of Commerce; Gordon Charles, outdoor editor of the Traverse City Record-Eagle; William Western, president of Tawas Chamber of Commerce. A wide variety of fish taken from local waters was served, much to the liking of Mark Wesley of WNEM-Television, shown at right. The area is expected to re-ceive considerable publicity through this program, which was a repeat of one held earlier this year .- Tawas Herald Photos.

A DIME, TO BE EXACT.

a good, 5-minute shower costs you about a dime.

And that's about 15 gallons of water.

Enough to give a body something to sing about...at least when you consider what inflation's doing to other current costs.

No. we're not saying electricity is cheap. But the fact of the matter is that electricity uses up less of the average family's spendable income now than it did 20 years ago,

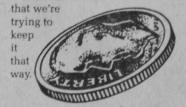

If you've got an electric water heater, cooking meals, running small appliances, and warming the water for countless baths and showers. Electricity - especially when you use it wisely - is still a very good buy.

> Baking a turkey for 5 hours in an electric oven today costs only about 55 cents. Doing a load of clothes in an electric dryer runs you about 131/2 cents.

Yes, the cost of energy as a whole way has increased in recent years. But there are still forms of energy that, in relation to all the other costs of living, serve us well and at reasonable expense.

At Consumers Power, we wanted you to know that electricity is one of them. And wood lot in the Pickett Creek area west of Sand Lake had been sold to C. W. Maine and Son of Saginaw, who purchased it from Henry Anschuetz in 19-42. The Maines operated a woodworking and cabinet shop at Saginaw and later purchased the old Anschuetz sawmill on Plank Road just west of M-55 to supply them with much of their raw materials.

The Maines immediately prepared for future harvesting of timber when about 22,000 trees of different species were planted on the 80 acres. Some of these trees, along with other second growth timber, were ready for harvesting in 1956 and Walter Anschuetz was hired to supervise the work. Some 30,000 feet of cedar, red pine, white pine and spruce were harvested that winter and several thousand more feet of timber were cut before spring thaws made roads impassable. Members of the Anschuetz crew included Victor Bouchard, Erwin Shover, Carl Schmalz

MUCH OF THE TIMBER harvested during the winter of 1956 was sawn into lumber at the former Henry Anschuetz sawmill, which had been moved from its former location on

Explain Medicare Reasonable Charges

Many people in the local area who have Medicare protection are not sure just what is meant by "reasonable charges," a social security spokesperson said recently.

Under the law, payment of benefits under the medical insurance part of Medicare is based on reasonable charges for covered services or supplies.

People probably would have less trouble understanding this term if they thought of it as the 'allowed'' or ''permitted'' charge. But that is not the complete story either.

The reasonable charge for a medical service is determined by the Medicare carrier for each year. First, the carrier determines the customary charge by each doctor and supplier for each separate service or supply.

This is generally the charge most often made. Then, the carrier figures the prevailing charge for each doctor charges is not limited. Medical insurance pays 80 percent of the reasonable charge after the $60 annual deductible has been met. If the then the total charge for the covered service will be the reasonable charge approved.

When a Medicare claim is covered service or supply. This ' submitted, the reasonable charge approved by the carrier will be the lowest of either the customary charge, the prevailing charge, or the actual charge.

The Medicare concept of Increases in the prevailing reasonable charge has nothing at all to do with whether a particular doctor's fees are reasonable in the usual sense of the word. It has only to do with the amount Medicare can pay.

Mild Weather Brought Out More Trappers

TWO TAWAS TRAPPERS are of the opinion that Michigan's recently completed season on beaver may have resulted in too many animals being harvested during one season and the too many animals being narvested during one season and the quality of pelts taken during the special season in Decem-ber was extremely poor. Randall Lanski of Tawas City, who has been trapping since he was 11 years of age, said Friday that beaver pelts taken during December were not of prime quality and in no way compared to those pelts taken during Lamany. "It takes cald weather to put a taken during January. "It takes cold weather to put a prime pelt on beaver—the weather was just too mild dur-ing the special season," said Lanski. He and his trapping partner, Donald Reinke of East Tawas, ran between 50 and 65 traps in an area from Arenac County to Hubbard Lake in Alcona County, with 50 percent of the traps set with If Alcona County, with 50 percent of the traps set with permission on private property and the remainder on public land, Lanski said the high price of furs at the start of the season brought out many new trappers and the Michigan market is glutted. He and Reinke are selling their pelts for a better price to an Illinois buyer. Both men work at reg-ular night jobs and run their trap line during the day, averaging 134 miles of daily travel. The two were fleshing and scraning the last of their hides last week and the work of stretching the hides was handled by Lanski's wife, Lois. Several of their beaver hides were in the 80-inch blanket class. It requires one hour to scrape the average hide and about one-half hour to nail the hide to a stretching board. Lanski said that the lack of snow during the winter made trapping relatively easy work.
