

Two Gunmen Elude Area Road Blocks After Holdup

Two masked gunmen robbed and have eluded a task force of the Glennie branch of Farmers local and state police agencies. and Merchants State Bank at An undisclosed amount of 12:50 p. m. Monday, then sped money was taken in the holdup, north on M-65 in a pickup truck the first armed bank robbery in that Alcona County community in about 50 years and the first in this area since the 1967 holdup of the Whittemore branch of Farmers and Merchants State Bank.

The two suspects, both white males in their mid-20s, were wearing ski masks and armed with a pistol and a rifle or shotgun.

There were no customers in the office at the time. Two bank employees were working behind teller windows and a third was in the lounge having coffee. After announcing "this is a stick-up—let's go," the gunmen ordered the two employees to remove money from cash drawers. They were then forced into the vault at gunpoint.

A female customer entering the bank was met at the door by one of the gunmen, who took her purse. Three cars of customers pulled into the bank parking lot and the two bandits, leaving the women in the bank vault, hurried out of the building with their loot.

During the getaway, the gunmen pointed their weapons at customers walking toward the entrance and at those persons still in their cars.

The two men drove north on M-65 in a blue pickup truck. A deputy sheriff at Glennie was notified of the robbery and a call was made to the Alcona County Sheriff's Department at Harrisville and the Michigan State Police Post at East Tawas was notified.

Road blocks were established at key points throughout Northeastern Michigan, but the bandits apparently turned off on one of the dirt trails leading into the wooded area of either Alcona or Oscoda County.

An extensive search was made of hunting camps in the area and road blocks were continued Monday night and Tuesday.

Initial investigation at the scene was conducted by crime technicians of the state police, followed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Richard Parkinson of Hale, president of Farmers and Merchants State Bank, said that employees had told him that the two bandits appeared to be "calm and collected" during the approximately four or five minutes which they spent inside the bank office during the holdup.

Parkinson said the employees had followed bank procedures to the letter and no physical violence was involved.

CATHY MERVYN, nine years old, Whittemore, was the style revue winner during the Saturday evening program of 4-H spring achievement day held at Hale Elementary School. She is shown here with the two judges, Marian Ulman and Sheila Mund. Over 200 youngsters, leaders and parents participated in the evening of fun. Board Unhappy With Wording

TA School Seeks One-Half-Mill Levy

Tawas Area Board of Education authorized placing proposals before the electorate at the June 9 annual election seeking renewal of one-half mill of taxes to establish a sinking fund for maintenance and repair of school property, but members are not happy with the wording which the law requires to be printed on ballots.

In this day and age of taxpayer revolt and defeat of millage issues, the board of education wished to explicitly state on the ballot that money from the one-half-mill levy would be used exclusively for maintenance and repair of buildings.

An examination of school election law by the school district's attorney indicates, however, that the word, "maintenance," cannot be used on the ballot. In addition, the ballot cannot make mention of a millage renewal and the ballot wording must treat the proposal as a new tax.

Actually, the one-half-mill proposal for five years is a renewal of the levy which financed construction of the junior and senior high school 25 years ago and expires with this year's tax statements.

The one-half-mill tax levy would raise approximately $51,000 annually. Since discussion began on the proposal two months ago, board members have emphasized that the money would not be used for operation of the school, but would be earmarked strictly for maintenance.

Another confusing word on the ballot is "construction." Although board members admit the word could possibly apply to the building of a proposed new road along the west side of the high school, the money would not be used for any major projects.

The roof on the junior and senior high school, installed in 1956, will soon be due for replacement, as will the boiler at the Tawas City Elementary Unit. The money would also be used for window and lighting replacement in the junior and senior high school building for energy conservation measures.

Other items in the five-year maintenance plan would include landscaping at the East Tawas Elementary Unit, landscaping and parking lot improvement at the Tawas City Elementary Unit, plumbing maintenance, painting and installation of a shallow well at the football field. This would provide water for lawn sprinkling rather than to use the more expensive municipal water supply.

Other needed maintenance items include replacement of doors at the East Tawas unit, replacement of a bell system in that building as well as replacement of the public address system in the high school and the gymnasium. A diesel fuel storage tank, security lighting and measures to comply with barrier free design would also be considered.

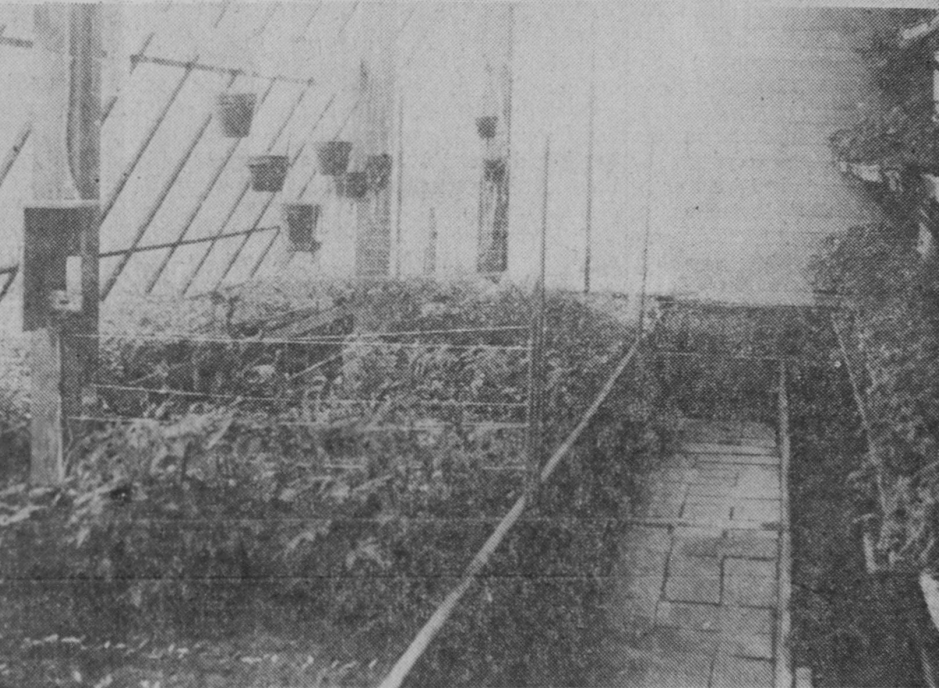

If approved, the one-half-mill of taxes would raise one-quarter-million dollars over the next five years. At the end of the five-year period, the maintenance program would be reviewed.

Supt. Allan Dighera is checking with the school district's attorney again this week in an effort to clarify state law in regard to millage proposals in the hope that the intent of the board of education concerning its maintenance plans can clearly be stated on the ballot.

KENNETH KERNSTOCK, Iosco County agricultural agent, was master of ceremonies for the ribbon cutting ceremony held Monday afternoon at the Hale Multiple Purpose Center's new solar heated greenhouse. In May 1979, application was made on behalf of Hale Senior Citizens for money to provide a solar heated greenhouse which would augment the community gardening activities at the multiple purpose center. Major construction was completed in January and interior work progressed under the direction of Douglas Brown and William Hund. The first seeds were planted January 31. Final expenditure has been estimated to be in the region of $6,000. Labor costs were virtually eliminated, thanks to the many Hale area senior citizens who volunteered their time. A noon luncheon recognized all those whose advice and assistance insured the success of the project.—Tawas Herald Photos.

County Workers Accept Contract

Iosco County Building workers represented by United Steelworkers Union ratified a new one year contract with the county board of commissioners which granted a seven percent increase in salaries.

A representative of the union took issue with figures furnished by the board's finance chairman, David George, and quoted last week by the Herald.

Rather than gross pay of $9,678.61 as the average for 27 employees, the union representative said that the 20 employees were actually covered under the contract and that the average salary was $9,172.80. It was also pointed out that fringe benefits averaged out at $893.88 for Blue Cross insurance, life insurance of $45.60 and retirement benefits of $1,009.01 for a total average salary and benefits of $11,121.29.

Starting salary for a clerk-typist is $3.93 per hour, with increments leading up to $4.58 at the end of three years; stenographers receive a base salary of $4.33 with increments leading up to $4.88 in three years; a description clerk in the equalization department receives a base wage of $4.61 per hour, with increments leading up to $5.23 per hour in three years; deputies in the various departments have a base salary of $4.80, leading up to $5.96 in three years; appraisers receive a base hourly rate of $5.01, leading up to $5.69 in three years.

Employees receive additional pay based on longevity. Terms of the contract were approved two weeks ago by a four to one vote of the board of commissioners.

Four Candidates File for TA Board of Education

Four candidates have filed nominating petitions for Tawas Area Board of Education at the annual election on June 9.

There will be two vacancies to be filled at the end of the school year on June 30. Board Pres. Randall DeWyse is not a candidate for re-election and the term of Trustee Robert Curry also expires.

Curry is one of the four candidates filing nominating petitions. The other candidates include Terry L. Montgomery, 317 Church Street, East Tawas; Gwain Earl Teuscher, 620 Maple Street, Tawas City; Richard G. Anderson, 928 M-55, Tawas City.

County Prosecutor Issues Felonious Assault Warrants

Four Genesee County men were to be arraigned Tuesday in 81st District Court on a felonious assault charge in the April 19 beating of an off-duty Iosco County deputy sheriff.

Following review of the incident, Pros. Atty, Stephen Naegle issued warrants for the arrest of Thomas W. Ross, 32, Birch Run; Roger M. Ross, 30, Clio; Edward D. Holbrook, 29, from a ditch. Michigan State Police were called and the four men were apprehended within 15 minutes.

Lundquist shortly before midnight on Saturday, April 19. Lundquist was not in uniform and was at the residence of a Benson Road neighbor.

A car pulled off the road and the occupants appeared to be heading toward Mason Creek to dip smelt. An altercation ensued and Lundquist lost his service revolver in the scuffle. The firearm was later recovered and Roland G. Schimank, 31, both of Birch Run.

The four men are alleged to have beaten Dep. Sheriff Lee

"MICHIGAN NURSES: We Are Family," is the motto for Michigan Nurses' Week, April 27 through May 3. The motto befits the camaraderie that prevails in the nursing field and points out that, despite an increasingly more technical field of practice, nurses are truly the patients' temporary family while they are hospitalized. Tawas Hospital employs 44 registered nurses and 24 licensed practical nurses in a variety of positions. Some of the nurses and patients shown here are, top left, Francie Szymanski, RN, con-

Tawas Board Split Vote on New Auditor Contract

A split vote Monday night saw Tawas Area Board of Education accepting the bid of Schilling, Werner and Brilinski as the school's auditor during the next three years.

The firm's proposal was $500 higher than the low bid submitted by Terry Grabow of East Tawas. Represented locally by James Presson, Schilling, Werner and Brilinski served last term as the school's auditor and has offices at Oscoda and Tawas City.

During discussion on the proposals, it was pointed out that Grabow had sold his business here, that he would be moving to another state and some members felt there was insufficient information concerning the new owner.

Those in favor of Schilling, Werner and Brilinski were satisfied with that firm's work last year, that it had a large staff to perform the work and wished to have a consistency in auditing by hiring the same firm for a three-year period.

Three members felt that credentials of the new owner of the Grabow firm were acceptable and the district could save money by accepting the low bid. They emphasized, however, that they were satisfied with the work of the present auditor.

Opposed were Stanley Brockebrough, James Russo and Thomas Huck.

In other business, a sealed offer to purchase the building trades house was accepted and placed on file to await opening on May 12. The board authorized advertising the house for sale and offers will be accepted up to the above date.

Two different appraisals of the house have been furnished by local real estate agents, ranging from $49,500 to $55,500. The latter appraisal includes landscaping and carpeting.

Supt. Allan Dighera reported that a review of costs indicated that the school district has $52,277 invested in salaries and materials for construction of the house by building trades students and there were still a few outstanding bills. It was stated the district is to receive $9,436 in vocational education reimbursement funds from the state for salaries paid to teachers on the project.

The superintendent said that the one cash offer received thus far was good news for the building trades program. Concern had been expressed that an offer would not be received because of the current slump in housing sales.

The regular building trades course is to be continued next term rather than to have the class involved in a proposed project to construct an addition at the Iosco County Museum at East Tawas.

Administrators felt that the school should not get involved in such a project for a number of reasons, one of which was the fact that CETA workers would probably be employed in the program and students would be taking jobs from unemployed persons.

Four Escape Serious Hurts in Collision

Four persons escaped serious injury Monday night in a crash with a truck on US-23 at Dyer Road, Arenac County.

Treated at Tawas Hospital and released were John D. O'Connor, 40; Rose M. O'Connor, 30; Donald A. O'Connor, 15, and Wendy Sue Letson, 10 years of age, all of Tawas City.

Investigating state police said that O'Connor was southbound on US-23 when he applied his brakes because of another vehicle stopped partially on the highway.

O'Connor's car crossed the center line and into the path of a northbound truck operated by Ignacio Gomce, 43, Salamanca, New York.

Feds Take Over Management of Fisheries in Michigan Waters

The federal government, which has been working behind the scenes for the past five years compiling information in a thrust to take over or share control of inland waterways and inland lakes of Michigan, has now taken a bold step to take management of Great Lakes fisheries away from the state.

Unless the state wins its appeal of the federal court decision, the matter of Indian fishing rights has been established, but there is no sane reason to destroy fish stocks with killer gill nets.

The predictable has happened—the lake trout market is now so glutted that the price on these fish has dropped from $2.20 per pound to just 45 cents. It may also be interesting to know that the ancestors of today's Indians never fished for lake trout—they set their box nets strictly for white fish. Perch and walleye have also been listed as commercial species for Indians.

State officials had been negotiating with Cecil B. Andrus, interior department secretary, for a month in an effort to reach a compromise on Indian fishing rights in treaty waters in compliance with a federal court decision. This controversial problem has been pending for many months and a workable solution—use of trap or pound nets rather than gill nets—would be the answer.

Non-Indian commercial fishermen were forced to discontinue the use of the controversial gill nets in the early 1970s after several years of study, yet the department of interior has ignored good conservation practices by permitting Indian fishermen to use this nonselective gear.

Much has been learned about the destructive effect of gill nets on fish stocks since 1965 and it would be well for the federal government to review its own findings in 1970-71 which urged discontinuance of that type of gear.

(Read Philippians 1:27-2:4) "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 2:5) A friend of mine is a veterinarian employed by the federal government as a food inspector. It is his responsibility to inspect 75,000 chickens a week as they are processed through a local poultry company.

Not long ago, he made the interesting comment, "I have never seen a good chicken." Then, he explained that startling statement. Through the years of inspecting millions of chickens, it has become necessary for him to train his eyes to see only the bad chickens—the ones that should be rejected.

Training the eyes to see only the bad is permissible for food inspectors. But, if we are not careful, we, too, can fall into the habit of training our eyes to see only the bad, the ugly and the evil in everything around us. Christ calls us to train our eyes to see the good. The apostle Paul reminds us to let Christ Jesus be our example as to what our attitude should be.

PRAYER
Dear God, open our eyes and hearts to see the good in others. Help us to be more like Christ each day. Amen.

Memorial Fund for TB Artists

Tawas Bay Artists are establishing a memorial fund for artists or patrons who have donated time, talents or invariable services to the organization. In retrospect, one of the first donations was a potter's wheel that was donated by Helen Hertzler in memory of her late husband, Herbert Hertzler.

This year, the fund will be in honor of Ruth Betts. So far, the club has the donation of one of her paintings to grace the gallery, her art supplies and a monetary donation.

Anyone interested in donating to the fund may call Gail Blury at 362-2106. Plans are to use the money to further interest in art for a senior citizen by paying for lessons, buying supplies or getting needed transportation, whatever the case may be or however far the money will go.

The song, "America," with Timothy Freel at the piano, was sung to open the Cub Scout Pack No. 3911 Tuesday, April 22, meeting, which was held at Tawas Area High School gymnasium.

Mrs. Michael Freel was given an appreciation certificate from the pack "for always being there when needed" and a plant for appreciation for all the work she has done for the pack.

Awards for the month of April included: A boat patch to Tyler Cross; wolf patches to Kelly Ferguson, Andrew Ernst, Jason Schaar, Mark Johnson, Robert Roulo, Matthew Jurczyk and Steven Hammond; a bear patch to Scott Foss; silver arrows to James Mahon, Hammond, Christopher Eckerd; gold arrows to Ernst, Schaar and Hammond, and recruiter patches to Mahon and Tony Lapeer. Todd Houser, Neil Spencer, Hammond and Schaar earned one year pins.

Webeoes awards were presented to Timothy Kendall, athlete and engineer; Thomas McLavy, athlete; Freel, engineer, geologist, scientist, craftsman, scholar and forester; Christopher Walkup, geologist, scientist, engineer, traveler, citizen, craftsman and naturalist. Walkup was also awarded the arrow of light, the highest award a scout can earn and the only award he can carry into boy scouts.

Freel and Walkup crossed the bridge into boy scouts and Daniel VanSickle, Leslie Heckman and Kenneth Williamson crossed the bridge into webeoes.

For the parents' enjoyment, den two played a song on washboards and an action song with everyone participating left all breathless. A game was then played with cubs and their fathers participating and the mothers and other guests getting quite a few chuckles from their antics.

Den three closed the meeting by leading everyone in singing "Taps."

Tawas A. Band Received State 1st Division Rating

Tawas Area Symphonic Band traveled to Traverse City Saturday to participate in the State Band and Orchestra Festival sponsored by the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association.

Competing in the class "B" category, the Tawas Symphonic Band received four ones, the highest possible rating, for an over-all first division rating.

At the state level the bands have received 12 firsts and three second division ratings in the past 15 years.

At the festival, bands and orchestras compete against set standards which vary slightly between classes of schools. Each band performs three numbers before three judges, then sight reads two selections before a fourth judge. There are a combined total of 34 categories which the judges adjudicate each band. This year, Tawas band received 32 A and two B grades.

Adjudicators were George Wilson, Traverse City; Kent Krive, Ferris State College; Harold Luoma, Muskegon Community College; John Whitwell, Ann Arbor Huron.

"To my knowledge, there are only six bands in the state with better records in district and state competition," says Band Director Gene Salamony. "The quality of our students remains quite high, the band has worked hard this year in all their activities, again showing that parents, school and community can be justifiably proud of the Tawas bands."

Coming events for the Tawas band include its annual tag day, May 17. Also on May 17 will be the spring concert, "Potpourri of Sound" featuring the beginning, cadet and symphonic bands.

Immunity Abolishment Law

State Sen. Mitch Irwin said today it is time the senate took action on a recently introduced constitutional amendment resolution to abolish certain legislative immunity privileges. The proposed constitutional amendment was introduced last January by the senate majority leader and would exempt civil infractions from the privileges of legislative immunity.

"I think we need to make legislators responsible for their actions in every respect. We hear so much talk about accountability in matters concerning campaign finance and votes for bills but little attention is paid to unbecoming conduct that would get the everyday citizen in trouble with the law," said the chairman of the senate municipalities and elections committee.

Irwin noted that minor traffic violations were recently decriminalized and made civil infractions which means legislators could escape penalties under the immunity privilege. "I do not believe that it was the intent of that law to allow legislators to slip through without punishment and so we should take the necessary corrective action."

As stated in Article IV, Section II of the Michigan Constitution, "Senators and representatives shall be privileged from civil arrest and civil process during sessions of the legislature and for five days before the commencement and after the termination thereof."

Irwin said he supports Senator Faust's corrective language that would change the section of the Michigan Constitution by inserting "except for civil arrest and civil process resulting from civil infractions," before the word, "senators." Civil infractions are defined as violations of state law or local ordinances that are punishable by fine.

Legislative immunity from civil suits is still left intact by the amendment. The purpose of legislative immunity is to protect legislators from frivolous lawsuits which may hinder them from conducting their lawmaking duties. The concept dates back to medieval England when the king used the power of arrest to harass members of Parliament.

The resolution is currently before the senate administrative rules committee.

Commences Suit Over Fatal M-65 Crash

The mother of a 17-year-old youth, Donald F. Cohee Jr., killed September 30, 1979, in a crash on M-65, has commenced suit against the driver of the car and owners of two taverns.

Ann Kennedy, in her suit filed in Iosco County Circuit Court, named Barry Dean Moran of Owosso, driver, and David L. McNew and Norman Mesack of Long Lake Bar and Mary Tepass of Whispering Pines as defendants in the case.

The petition accuses Moran of gross negligence when he lost control of his car on a curve. It is also claimed that Moran was underage and purchased two cases of beer at Long Lake Bar and was further sold and consumed a substantial number of beers at the Whispering Pines contributing to the intoxication of the driver.

No specific amount of damages were asked in the three-count suit.

Injured in M-55 Crash

Barbara D. Jordan, West Branch, received minor injuries last week in a crash on M-55. She told officers that a passing van truck cut in front of her vehicle and she swerved to avoid a collision. Her car struck several guard rails along the highway and she was treated at Tawas Hospital.

RENOVATION work scheduled for Lumbermen's Monument area moved a step closer to completion recently by the acceptance of the interpretive plan and displays for the site. General Exhibits, Incorporated, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, visual display contractor, will begin constructing the exhibits early in May for delivery later this summer. The artist's conception of the new visitor information center and displays captures the basic theme of the river drive era before the turn of the century. The exhibits are designed to provide an opportunity for the visitor to not only learn the history of that era, but also experience "hands-on" involvement. For example, the visitor will be able to use a log marking hammer, get the feel of riding a floating log in a mill pond or roll and move logs with a peavee. Other static displays include a log sculpture depicting a log jam and another representing a rollways in readiness for the spring drive. General Exhibits will also produce an audio visual display of the logging era. It will include an assembly of photos, documentary information, maps and historic motion picture films. Construction of the new information center is expected to begin in September as will the expansion and resurfacing of parking facilities at the area.

Citizens Against AuGres Drain Held Meeting

Citizens Against AuGres River Intercounty Drain held its second public meeting Friday, April 25, at the Arenac Eastern High School. Estimated attendance was 170 persons, of which about 155 persons came to hear the progress report on opposition to the AuGres River Watershed.

The meeting was opened by William Olar, president, with reading of the previous meeting minutes by Larry Shaffer, secretary. The treasurer reported on contributions received and cash balance on hand.

The bylaws drawn up by the executive committee and approved by the group's legal adviser were read in the entirety and adopted. Olar reported the increase in cost of the project since March 1977 is now over 40 percent.

Vice Pres. Pearl Schliep reported the group is affiliated with the National Tax Limitation Committee of Washington, D. C., having over 350,000 members, and with Taxpayers United Federation, Incorporated, of Lansing. Articles of incorporation were filed and registered at Lansing.

There followed a question and answer period at which time one of the sponsors contradicted prices quoted by members of the opposition, as of cost per acre and length of time assessments will be levied against all property in Arenac County. Mrs. Schliep answered, "All figures we have used were previously published in the Arenac County Independent. None of the sponsors contradicted them at any time. The sponsors were present at the meetings and hearings when figures were discussed and allowed them to stand without correction. We accept them as true."

A sponsor's wife defended the cost of assessment and spread at up to 50 years as a way of reducing the burden of paying larger amount at one time. The retort from the floor was, "No more taxes. The project was of no benefit to outlying farmers and increased amount of assessments due to extended percentage through the years. Sponsors were told to pay it themselves."

Harry Krueger, Iosco County drain commissioner, was questioned on Public Law 566 and explained its implementation at the start of the project. He reported that all federally funded projects have enforced yearly maintenance at local cost, contradicting comments made by the sponsors.

Further clarification on statements of percentage spread at large on county property on previous drains was explained by Leland Johnson, Arenac County drain commissioner, that some have been spread at 15 percent and some at 25 percent.

Julia Chiroi reported the cleanout project planned in March 1977 was to start at Turtle Road in Iosco County about two miles north of the Iosco-Arenac County line and was to include widening, deepening and straightening the river its length to AuGres. Including cleanout of county tributary drains, the cost amounted to $4,400,800. Through the years, this has been dropped. At present, it may start south of the Turner Road or somewhere north of the Twining Road. The river will not be deepened, just widened. County tributaries are all dropped from the project and cleanout of the river will stop north of the City of AuGres. Roughly five to six miles of river on the northern end would not be touched and the county drains would not be cleaned. At this time, the cost is in the six-million-dollar price range.

Olar questioned the sponsors on how high they would pay per acre and the answer was that they want it even at $150 or more per acre of their river property.

A Soil Conservation Service meeting for sponsors, drain commissioners and drainage boards is to be held at AuGres High School gymnasium Thursday, May 22, 8:00 p. m. to hear opinions pro and con. All interested persons are welcome.

A request was made for continued contributions to help in the opposition to the watershed project. Send checks or payments to: Julia Chiroi, treasurer, 2397 Stowell Road, Turner 48765.

The Horse Era

HORSES provided the major power for transportation until replaced early in the century by the automobile. This elderly couple shows off a neat rig for A. G. Emery, East Tawas photographer. The barn in the background provided a stable for the horse, parking for the buggy and storage for hay—a renewable resource grown locally for market.

At the dawn of the twentieth century, the clapping of hooves was a familiar sound throughout the country.

While men like Henry Ford experimented with gasoline-engined buggies and envisioned Detroit's streets jammed with cars, it would be another few years until the chugging of a gasoline engine would be familiar to rural folks.

The years between 1900 and 1917 were perhaps the most significant in the automobile's meteoric rise from novelty to necessity—the 8,000 cars registered in 1900 were chiefly playthings for the wealthy.

Although the popping and belching carriage powered by a "hydrocarbon" engine was becoming a part of the urban scene, people laughed at the notion that an evil-smelling and noisy automobile could nudge the uncomplaining, oat-burning horse off the roads.

The relationship between man and his horse was something which never could be achieved between man and his automobile—the horse was a breathing, living thing. For instance, the following notice appeared on the front page of The Tawas Herald for years: "Be kind to your horse and all dumb creatures. It shows the gentleman."

As an example of the unconcern toward this new "toy," A. G. Emery of East Tawas, the commercial photographer who documented the community's everyday life from 1890 to 1904, apparently failed to take note of the first automobile which labored through the ankle deep sawdust which "paved" Newman Street.

In Emery's massive collection of several hundred glass plate negatives, not one survives showing a view of an early automobile, although it is known that the automobile had made its appearance here before Emery's leaving.

On the other hand, Emery trained his big view camera in the direction of many horses and numerous negatives from his collection provide a glimpse of man's trusted friend.

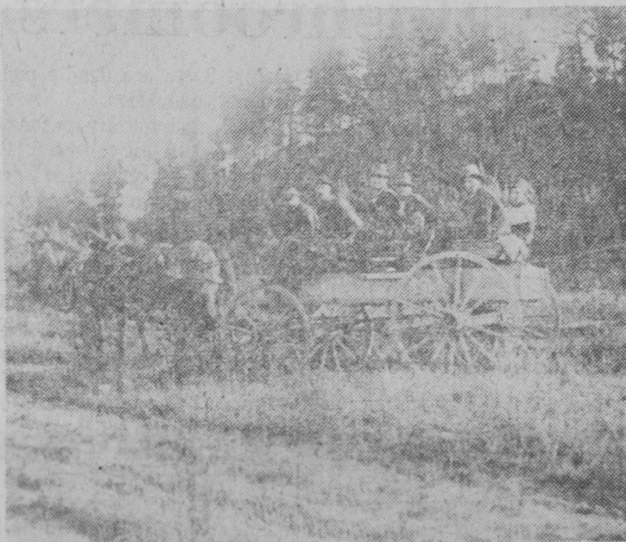

However, the horse had already been doomed as the major provider of transportation. In 1914, the face of America was changed when thousands of men left the farms to seek employment in the Ford factory at Detroit—all drawn in the "gold rush" to the new automobile assembly lines for the minimum daily wage of $5.

Today, as America seeks new sources of energy to power its automobiles, the Amish farmers of Iosco County are the only persons on the highways still dependent on the horse for transportation. It is not expected that there will be any rush toward hitching up "Old Dobbin" again, once the cost of gasoline becomes prohibitive for use in pulling stalled automobiles.

These pictures snapped by Emery more than 70 years ago offer visual proof of man's mode of transportation which had existed since the earliest civilization and then faded away in the mechanical age of the twentieth century.

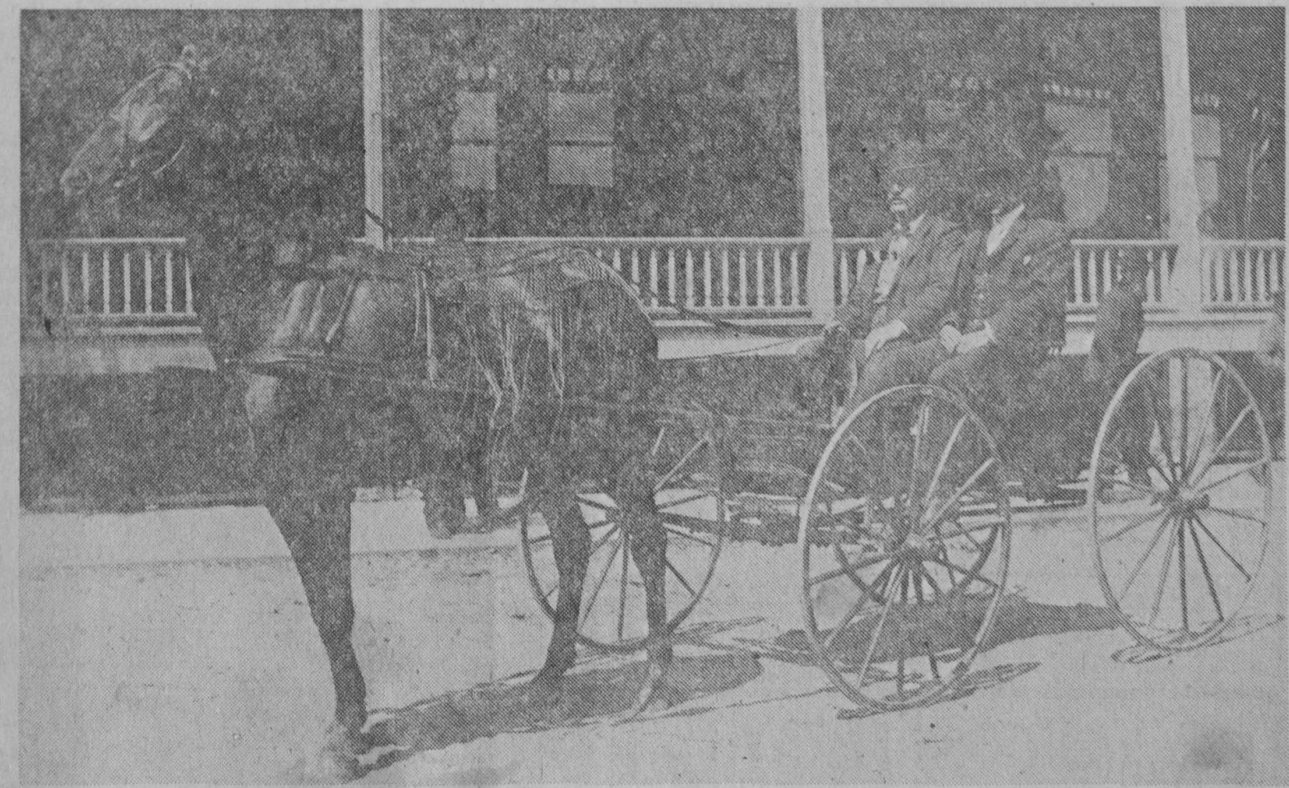

A TRIP into the interior of Iosco County was a major undertaking during the horse and wagon days. This group has left the sand trail in the foreground to pose against a hill, probably in Baldwin or Wilber Township.

PHOTOGRAPHER A. G. Emery snapped many pictures of horses during the time he was in business at East Tawas, but the collection of his glass plate negatives which has survived does not include one view of an early automobile.

THESE TWO MEN pose with their horse and buggy in the vicinity of present-day Tawas Beach Road. In the background can be seen the tall smokestack of the sugar beet factory, which was located on the bay side of US-23.

THE PROUD OWNER of this fine horse and buggy posed on Newman Street in front of the Holland Hotel. The entire outfit could be considered the equivalent of an expensive 1980 sport car in its day.

Rule Annexation Petitions Valid

Petitions submitted by the City of Tawas City for annexing adjoining portions of Alabaster and Tawas Townships were ruled to be sufficient April 22 by the Michigan State Boundary Commission.

Public hearings to receive testimony from representatives of the three involved governmental units, along with information which individual citizens may wish to enter, will be heard by the boundary commission on Friday, June 13.

The hearings have tentatively been scheduled at the county building at 10:00 a. m. and 1:00 p. m.

Representing Iosco County on the boundary commission hearing last week were George Stalker of Baldwin Township and John Brugger of Tawas City.

Both hearings on June 13, one for Alabaster Township and one for Tawas Township, are expected to bring out heated discussion as both townships are expected to oppose any annexation plans by the city. Representatives of the Michigan Township Association are also expected to be on hand to present the township's side of the proceedings.

On November 5, the Tawas City Council adopted a resolution and proposed maps which indicated that the city seeks to annex approximately 240 acres of Tawas Township territory and about 40 acres of Alabaster Township.

Under present state law, a vote would not be required in either township as the area under consideration for annexation contains less than 100 voters.

A bill before the state legislature at the present time sponsored by the township association would curtail future annexation proposals as the legislature proposes that a vote would be required regardless of population in the affected areas.

City Mgr. Lowell Thomas said last week that a questionnaire is expected shortly from the boundary commission which would provide pertinent information concerning the proposed annexation from the city's point of view. Similar questionnaires would also be provided by the townships.

Involve Troop 974 in Scout O'Rama

Twenty boys from Tawas City Boy Scout Troop No. 974, sponsored by Jesse C. Hodder Post No. 189, American Legion, are involved with the Scout O'Rama to be held Saturday, May 17, at Surline Elementary School, West Branch. Lake Huron Area Council, AuSable District, is conducting its show this year in an effort to let people of each area in the district know just how much scouting activity is happening locally. The show offers the opportunity for a lot more people of the district to visit and see scouting and cub scouting in action. Thomas Pockrandt is leader of Troop 974.

The show will open at 10:00 a. m. and run nonstop until 5:30 p. m. The Order of the Arrow, scouting brotherhood of honor campers, will operate a food booth at the show.

The show is being planned and administered by a volunteer committee in the district. The chairman's committee has been working on the Scout O'Rama since the beginning of the year in order to provide the best show for cubs, scouts and the public.

Cub scout packs will be presenting craft items made in the past year as well as some special skills they have developed.

Cub scouting is operated with a monthly theme that affords specific projects for cubs on a changing monthly basis. Each pack has the chance to show off some of its more outstanding accomplishments from a particular month's program. Many cub dens and packs display their theatrical talents through skits they have written and performed. Some cubs will be involved in a puppet show to display some learned knowledge and craft abilities.

Scouting has an outdoor emphasis in its yearly program and the show will have the opportunity for outdoor displays for the troops, who will be setting up model campsites, cooking their specialties and demonstrating camping skills in their outdoor booths. Troops with indoor booths will be demonstrating skills used in any of the over 100 merit badge subject areas or the skill award areas. The materials for these indoor booths have been donated by Wurtsmith Air Force Base, Oscoda, and Schaaf Lumber Company, East Tawas.

Tickets for the show (donated by McDonalds in West Branch) are on sale now by cubs and scouts throughout the AuSable District.

SCHAAF Lumber Company's newly expanded and remodeled retail division will hold a grand opening Thursday, May 1. Included is a new paint department, plumbing and electrical departments. Don Correia, general manager, and Mark Lee, store manager, are shown waiting on customers.—Tawas Herald Photo.

THIS MODERN kitchen display is one of the features of the newly remodeled Schaaf Lumber Company. The firm also handles hardware, lumber, building materials and has a separate building contracting and truss construction division. All area residents are invited to inspect the new facilities.—Tawas Herald Photo.

Offer Safe Tips for Mushroomers

So, you want to reap the wild harvest of Michigan mushrooms. You can improve your chances of being safe rather than sorry by following these tips from experts at Michigan State University:

Learn how to identify a few edible species. Find out where they grow, when they are most likely to be found and how to distinguish them from similar looking but poisonous species. Know what you are after and collect only those species known to be safe for human consumption.

Have an authority confirm identifications so you know they are correct. Mushroom hunting with an authority—a real authority, not an overnight expert—is a good way to learn mushroom identification.

Collect only one kind of mushroom at a time.

Do not collect or eat overmature or spoiled mushrooms. Eat only the commercially produced mushrooms raw.

Eat only one kind of known edible mushroom at a time and that in small quantities for the first time. Some types of mushrooms contain toxins that may reach a certain level in the body before they begin to do any damage or cause poisoning symptoms. At lower levels, the body may tolerate the toxin. This is not true of all poisonous mushrooms.

Some are deadly poison in small quantities.

Check each mushroom for positive identity as collected. Poisonous mushrooms often grow alongside edible ones and can be swept up with them in a careless moment.

Always keep a sample of the fresh mushrooms and of the cooked product consumed. If you become ill, a physician or local poison control center can do more if they know what you have eaten.

Do not experiment on yourself or other living things. If a mushroom is not known to be edible, do not eat it and do not feed it to any other creature.

Avoid eating wild mushrooms if you know you are allergic to other fungi. You may have a serious allergic reaction to mushrooms that someone else could eat with no ill effects.

Whenever in doubt about the identification, about the quality of the mushrooms gathered or about the source of the "flu bug" that coincidentally struck after a mess of mushrooms—do not eat the mushrooms. It may save your life.

A variety of bulletins is available from Michigan State University. Information and cost of the bulletins may be secured by calling the local cooperative extension office, 362-3449.

run double by Shelly Blust. Cindy Stephan was Tawas' top hitter with three singles.

Tawas combined good pitching by Diane Nelkie with good defense and a 16-hit attack to soundly defeat Mio in five innings in the second game. Carol Saunders had a triple and a single while Stephan had a double and two singles.

Tawas Won Two Games Over Mio

In a brief discussion, Webb indicated that the program will still be 100% state funded for next year and that the funding formula has been revised for subsequent years, whereby the local share will not exceed one third of the cost.

In further discussion, Chairman Webb stated for public record that, although, regrettably, disagreements between himself and other board members and comments made relative thereto during committee work sessions have been aired by the news media in an unfavorable light, he feels they have a good board and that disagreements are normal, and that he respects David George and the other board members; further indicating that in the future, discussions with other board members of a private nature will be conducted in complete privacy.

Finance Chairman George expressed his concern in the matter of the county contractual obligation to fund the deficit for ambulance operation, noting that the payments-in-lieu-of-taxes (on federal forest lands) have been frozen by court order in the litigation with the townships and that nothing has been provided in the county budget; questioning if termination of the contract to provide funding should be considered. Proceedings of the Iosco County Board of Commissioners

APRIL SESSION

April 2, 1980
A regular meeting of the Iosco County Board of Commissioners held at the County Building in Tawas City on April 2, 1980, pursuant to published schedule.

Meeting called to order at 2:05 p. m. by Chairman Webb and the roll called.

Present: Stech (District 1), George (District 2), Merschel (District 3), Ulman (District 4) and Webb (District 5).
Absent: None.

Clerk D. Keith Papas reported briefly in reference to having received a letter under date of March 20, 1980, from the law offices of Cook, Nash and Deibel, representing St. Mary's Hospital, of Saginaw, demanding immediate payment of the sum of $3,427 for medical services provided for Gerald Putnam (injured while being apprehended by sheriff's personnel during the commission of a crime), and a letter dated March 21, 1980, from Doctor George P. Schanz, of Saginaw, relative to collection of his bill in the amount of $750.00 for treatment of Putnam; and further reported, with respect to a claim against the county for unemployment insurance benefits by a former employee of the Iosco Transit Corporation, on having contacted the M. E. S. C. by telephone and letter to inform them that the transit corporation is a separate entity.

The following committee reports were presented by board members:

Chairman Webb: Reported on a recent meeting of the East Central Michigan Planning and Development Regional Commission, at which the clean water program and solid waste matters were discussed.

Commissioner Merschel: Also reported in reference to the recent meeting of the East Central Michigan Planning and Development Regional Commission, adding his comments on the clean water program discussion. He further referred to an upcoming meeting on the AuGres watershed matter, which was discussed briefly by board members.

Commissioner George: Reported in reference to the operation of the Iosco Transit Corporation, indicating that it is becoming more efficient, that passenger usage is increasing, and that all officers were recently re-elected. In a brief discussion, Webb indicated that the program will still be 100% state funded for next year and that the funding formula has been revised for subsequent years, whereby the local share will not exceed one third of the cost.

In further discussion, Chairman Webb stated for public record that, although, regrettably, disagreements between himself and other board members and comments made relative thereto during committee work sessions have been aired by the news media in an unfavorable light, he feels they have a good board and that disagreements are normal, and that he respects David George and the other board members; further indicating that in the future, discussions with other board members of a private nature will be conducted in complete privacy.

Finance Chairman George expressed his concern in the matter of the county contractual obligation to fund the deficit for ambulance operation, noting that the payments-in-lieu-of-taxes (on federal forest lands) have been frozen by court order in the litigation with the townships and that nothing has been provided in the county budget; questioning if termination of the contract to provide funding should be considered. In discussion of the matter, it was pointed out that the Tawas Ambulance Service has been paid their anticipated deficit through March of this year, but that the Oscoda-Ausable ambulance operation has not been paid since last year; it being further indicated that the county has a legal obligation to the Tawas operation and a moral obligation to the Oscoda-Ausable program.

Upon call to order at 4:20 p. m., Commissioner Merschel presented and moved adoption of the following resolutions:

Finance Chairman George presented and moved adoption of the following resolution, motion being supported by Merschel and carried.

Your finance committee recommends that the 1980 Iosco County Budget be amended as follows: (on file in clerk's office)

Signed: David George and Carlton Merschel

The matter of a grievance filed by Sheriff's Deputy Jack Dobson with respect to seniority credit for CETA time was raised and discussed, whereupon it was moved by George and supported by Ulman that the grievance be denied, unless acceptance of same is recommended by county counsel in writing. Motion carried unanimously.

In discussion of the county equalization report, Chairman Webb advised that the report must be approved by May 5th, and that County Equalization Director John Rose is scheduled to meet with township officers and board members to review the proposed report.

The business scheduled for the day having been concluded, it was moved by George and supported by Stech to adjourn until April 16, 1980, 2:00 p. m., or subject to the call of the chair upon 24 hours notice to board members and the news media. Motion carried and meeting adjourned at 5:10 p. m.

Sunbeam's Power Plus Mixmaster Mixer.

The professional quality mixer even a weekend cook can love.

Baking my own made-from-scratch breads and cakes really is satisfying. But who's got the time—or the energy—for all that work?

That's where the Power Plus Mixmaster Mixer really helps out. It's the fastest, most powerful mixer Sunbeam's ever made. And it does what only a mixer does best: mixing, whipping, beating. The secret's in the heavy duty 16-speed motor and these deep, tapered stainless steel bowls. The new shape concentrates more ingredients into the beaters for better mixing.

There are nifty optional attachments, like a citrus juicer, a food grinder and a slicer/shredder. So I can do anything from angel food cakes to homemade breakfast sausage. Delicious!

Even the dough hooks and beaters are larger and heavier than ever. So the Power Plus can knead enough dough for three one-pound loaves of my favorite whole wheat bread in minutes. Impressive? You bet!

Trust the people who designed the original Mixmaster Mixer to come up with the extra help in the Power Plus Mixer. Now there's a Mixmaster Mixer in every price range, with styles and colors for everyone.

That's Sunbeam for you.

The Jogging Snob

By James Coyle

Today jogging is as in as tennis or tight jeans. It's estimated 18 million Americans of all sizes, colors and shapes have succumbed to the latest lunacy. Young mothers jog behind their prams. Grandfathers enter the Boston Marathon. While identically suited families are taking to the highways and byways in pursuit of weight loss, lowered blood cholesterol, and/or heightened sexual performance.

Who are these newest recruits to the jock chic cult? Some are normally solid citizens suffering a temporary aberration. But most hard-core joggers, research shows, fall into one of six or seven personality groups.

Most easily recognized is the Jogging Snob. He has his warmup suits designed by Gucci and his running shoes handmade in Italy of Spanish kidskin, facts he will casually mention at the drop of an arch. He sneers at followers of such lethargic activities as golf, bowling, weightlifting, and isometrics. "Non-aerobic exercise," he says loftily, "can hardly be expected to affect the capability of the cardiovascular and pulmonary systems — and that's what's important." Since attaining the eminence of 15 miles a week, he also looks down on mere mile-a-day duffers.

Did you ever see a Christmas tree jogging? That's Gadget Gertie. (She took to running to lose a few pounds, like ten or fifteen.) When Gert hits the road her radio headset is tuned to the Top 40; her shoulder bag is stuffed with quick-energy Hershey bars, and she wears a weight belt, a Cronius Olympus timing piece, and a pedometer and carries a baton to ward off unfriendly dogs.

If she's lucky and doesn't encounter obstacles en route — like meeting a friend or passing a malt shop or a French pastry boutique — Gert will log half a mile in seven minutes, give or take 60 seconds. She's just bought a treadmill jogger for rainy days. "Ten minutes a day equals two miles of outdoor jogging. $129.99 complete."

She'll probably never use it, but it should make a nice conversation piece.

Then there's Superjogger. You can recognize him by his air of grim determination as he slogs through his daily dozen miles. His motto is "If a little is good, too much is a lot better." He started with a mile a day; within a week he had worked up to six. He's given up smoking and drinking, eats nothing but organic foods, tries to get in a 30-50 mile marathon each week, and worries about whether all this activity will adversely affect his sex life (assuming he has time for such nonsense.)

Superjogger will argue for hours about technical points like how many layers of foam to put in your running shoes or whether drinking Body Ammo II actually increases the blood-sugar level. His idea of a fun time? "I like to run a 50-mile marathon," he says, "then sit down to a feast of Johnson grass, peach and apricot kernels, and apple seeds washed down with foaming mugs of liquid protein. Wow!"

And, of course there's the Jogger Groupie. She appears as if by magic wherever two or more joggers — male, that is — get together. If a pair of foot flappers drop into a bar for a couple of cold ones after their lopsided pre-sto! There's Groupie. "Hi, Guys!" she greets them as she sits down, orders a beer and enters into the conversation. She can throw around terms like pain barrier, triglyceride level, and transcendental high like a pro, recite the names and times of Boston Marathon winners for the past decade, and quote from the lead article in the current Runners World.

She owns seven jogging outfits — with Adidas to match. The bumper sticker on her Porsche 924 reads, "I'd Rather Be Jogging." Not that she ever actually jogs. She tried it once but gave up after finding it got her all out of breath, made her sweaty, and ruined her hairdo.

Sooner or later you'll run into Born Again Basil. Basil took up jogging three weeks ago and now it's his religion. He'll tell you with a mad gleam in his eye how it's transformed his life besides solving his irregularity problem and helping with the creative aspect of his work as a shoe salesman. If you don't walk away he'll offer to lend you a copy of his bible, Kenneth Cooper's Aerobics, and tell you where you can buy warmup suits and running shoes at discount prices. Listening to Basil you get the impression that if everyone took up jogging it would do away with inflation and unemployment, not to mention reducing world overpopulation and ending all wars.

And then there's Engineer Ed with his good old American instinct for improving, or at least changing things. Ed hadn't been jogging a week before he began figuring how to take the drudgery out of the sport. He's currently working on a jogging system which will do for running what the moped has done for bicycling. "If you want to sell the American public anything," he says, "put wheels and a motor on it. When my Motojogger is perfected, I'll have 50 million men, women, and children out there burning up the roads. Just think of the royalties!"

Perhaps you're wondering if the jogging craze will endure or simply fade away like a bad dream. Well, I have a feeling jogging is going to be with us for quite a while. Or at least until some other zany fad comes along.

Learning to Laugh at Life

By Roger W. Dana

I'm sure you will agree that life can be a pain in the neck. No, life isn't always a "bowl of cherries," and is sometimes more like a "can of night-crawlers." Some days it doesn't pay to get up in the morning. We all have that feeling quite often, especially nowadays. What can we do about it? There is always a solution to life's problems and the solution usually comes quicker if we face our problems with a smile or better yet, a good laugh. Here are a few examples:

You claim you are having trouble with your love life. Perhaps you are just not firm enough, like:

*"I'm just a pebble in your life,"
He said, as he would hold her.
She replied, "That's all your fault,
You should be a little bolder!"*

Even at weddings there are those that are happy and some that are unhappy. Take this case, for example. It had a happy ending that one of the people involved didn't even know at the time.

*Jack and Jim said they loved Mary,
A woman who was quite contrary.
Mary loved Jack and they were wed,
As the story ends, it could be said.
There was much happiness and
laughter,
As Jim lived happy ever after.*

You look in the mirror and say to yourself, gosh, I sure wish that I was better looking! Don't worry about it, pal. They said that Abe Lincoln wasn't very good looking either but on a five dollar bill, you'll have to admit, he sure looks handsome.

Then you think of all the shortages that we are facing today. We will overcome this shortage in time. It's just too bad that political gas is not of the illuminating or burning variety.

How about all the strikes and work walk-outs that we have to live with today. That even has a bright side, too. Have you ever stopped to think that every labor contract that's finally settled has a Santa Clause?

Do you complain that prices are too high? There is a bright side of that, too. Politics is still one thing that you can get a stomach full at the same old prices. Also, the way electric utility rates have been going up reminds me of one of my favorite books, The Charge of the Light Brigade. You see, one has to think on the bright side.

Yes, there are many things in life that are forbidding. I define the word FORBIDDING as the reason a bridge partner gets his shins kicked. It's really not hard to be entertained today if you stop to think about it. Some people are easily entertained. All you have to do is sit down and listen to them tell you about their golf game or the big fish that got away.

Do you worry about the stock market being down? Me too. There is a light side to the stock market, such as this:

*My secretary is a joker.
When I hollered, "Call my broker,"
She just answered, with a yawn,
"Right away, sir, stock or pawn?"*

Yes, I know, some days we all have a right to complain and it's just human nature to do so. Last week, I really had a bad day.

*Things were bad that day and night,
I had a right to holler.
The only thing that came off right,
Was the button on my collar.*

Did I really get depressed and angry at life? Gosh, no. It just doesn't pay. Smile instead.

*I would think it's safe to say,
That if you snarl and bark all day,
Your energy is soon expired
And at night you'll feel dog tired.*

Life is more fun when you wear a smile. It's true.

*Everyone likes smiling faces,
Like the dog that wore teeth braces.
He had a smile that's sure to win,
And they called him, RIN TIN GRIN.*

Someone once said, "Laugh and the world laughs with you, cry and you cry alone." Let's do more laughing and less crying.

In Wisconsin: Master Wagon Wheel Maker

By Shirley Haugen

Inside an unpretentious, grey building in Baraboo, Wisconsin the art of wagon wheel construction is being kept alive by the skillful craftsmanship of Martin Bjornsen. Mr. Bjornsen makes authentic wheels of various sizes for wall decorations or light fixtures.

He has some in his shop that have been painted with a circus motif. One is red, white, and blue and even has a silver rim painted on. Mr. Bjornsen tells of a lady who rosemailed one of his wheels. "It was pretty," he says.

The wheels can be finished in many ways, but Martin usually sands them smooth as glass, stains them and varnishes them to preserve the wood. This method shows off to the best advantage Martin's skill. The grains and colors of the wood are faultlessly matched and radiate a warm glow. With Martin nothing is "good enough". Everything, involving his craft, is perfect.

The construction of a wagon wheel begins at the center — the hub. Although any hardwood can be used for the hub, Mr. Bjornsen prefers maple and often got the wood from old bowling pins. In recent years, however, the pins have been covered with a plastic coating that is difficult and time-consuming to remove.

Martin turns the hub on the lathe (machine in which the work is held and rotated while being shaped) then mortises it (cuts a cavity to receive a tenon).

Determining the length and width of the spoke comes next and the tenon is put on the spoke to fit the mortise in the hub. The spokes are shaped by holding them in a special tail-stock clamp on the end of Martin's workbench. They are then driven into the hub. Next he uses a spoke pointer and finally the hollow auger to turn the tenon.

Now he is ready to cut the felly. (A felly is the circular part of the rim of a wheel into which the outer ends of the spokes are inserted.) In Martin's workshop there are felly patterns for wheels from six inches in diameter to 39 inches. Mr. Bjornsen says he can make any size wheel if he can get the material. A felly for a 39 inch wheel would have to be three inches thick. Such big fellies were made from oak railroad ties and are really too heavy for one person to handle. Most of the decorative wheels Martin makes are 18 inches in diameter.

After Martin cuts a felly, he uses a special plane that adjusts to different radiuses, both concave and convex, to smooth the felly ready for the spokes. Next he drills holes in the felly for the spoke tenons and drives it on. The second and following fellies are cut slightly longer than necessary so Mr. Bjornsen can saw through it to get a tight joint.

When all the fellies are on, Martin cleans up the outside and knocks off any sharp corners. Now the wheel is ready to finish.

Mr. Bjornsen works on a mass production basis. He makes the parts for at least six wheels at a time. "It gets monotonous," says Martin, "but you've got the set-up, so it saves time."

When Martin finishes constructing a wagon wheel, it is ready for the metal rim. This work, in times past, was done by a blacksmith, but Martin explained the process. The wheel was placed on a wheel horse, which was a spike fastened into the floor, and measured by a unique tool which Martin's father made. When I asked Mr. Bjornsen what the tool was called, he said, a slow grin spreading across his face, "I'm not sure it has a name, but it does the job." It's a thin piece of wood, the size of a pancake, with a handle that permits it to rotate. It looks much like a large pizza cutter. Martin explains that "you mark where you begin and run it around the wheel, counting the rotations." A piece of metal is laid flat and measured the same number of rotations. The metal is bent, welded and then heated, red-hot, slipped on the wheel, and immediately submerged in water. This prevents the wood of the wheel from scorching and tightens the joints. Martin doesn't put the metal rim on his decorative wheels. "There's no need," he says, "and the wood might discolor."

Martin Bjornsen learned how to make wagon wheels, along with his other wood-working skills, from his father, Hans Bjornsen. Hans came from Norway at the age of 19, after a six year apprenticeship in wood working. He got a job at Mueller Brothers' wagon shop. Mueller Brothers made circus wagons for Ringling Brothers' Circus. It is reported that Mr. Mueller said of Hans Bjornsen, "When I saw his tools, I knew I would hire him." Woodworkers were required to have their own tools and Hans' were perfection. Many of those tools are now on display at the Circus World Museum; however enough are visible in Martin's workshop to understand Mr. Mueller's meaning.

Along one wall, polished, hardwood handles protrude from a rack. These are chisels. Hans Bjornsen made them and a friend tempered the steel for the blades. Martin takes one out to show me how the blade is attached. "Now they use an electric torch and it goes faster," he says.

On a shelf above the workbench are a dozen or so blocks of wood. Displaying the same exact workmanship as the other tools, these planes are each designed for a specific job. Mr. Bjornsen reaches for one and brushes the sawdust from it. "Pa made this for me when I was a boy," he exclaims with pride. "That's why it's longer than the rest."

Hanging from a beam close to the ceiling are a dozen wooden clamps. These are of several sizes and all hand made. Martin likes to use wooden clamps because they don't leave marks on the pieces they are holding together; however, he also uses metal clamps with blocks of scrap wood between the teeth of the clamp and the furniture piece. The wooden clamps are not practical to use for every job because the materials for repairs are hard to get and taps and dyes for wood are too expensive, since there is little call for them.

These and other tools were likely used when Martin, as a boy, helped his dad make wheels. He recalls turning tenons "til I was blue in the face." He had his own work shop—smaller, but complete—next to his dad's. When his father died, Martin sold the duplicate tools and moved into the larger shop. The shop he used as a boy now stores lumber and other materials.

When he was a young man, Mr. Bjornsen worked in a furniture factory and a machine tool factory in Rockford, Illinois. When he returned to Baraboo, he joined the police force and served for 27 years. He retired from the force in October of 1976.

He has worked with wood all of his life. Martin and his father built the house where he and his wife live. The tables, dressers, desk, and other furnishings in the house are made of black walnut and constructed with the unique craftsmanship displayed by Mr. Bjornsen, who made them all. He uses no nails to hold pieces together. All are dove-tailed and glued to fit each other exactly. Since his retirement, he can devote more time to his craft.

Besides the intricate wagon wheels, Martin Bjornsen makes pipe stands, salt boxes, cradle magazine racks, wheelbarrow planters, fish pole holders, foot stools, plant stands, all sorts of small furniture, always using his skill with perfection. In the summer he sells these pieces at craft fairs in the area.

He will also build to special order. Standing with his back to the wood-burning stove, Martin tells of some of his special order requests. "A man came in and wanted me to make 12 wheels. He asked how long it would take and I told him I didn't know—that it would depend. I never made them. He didn't leave any faith money."

"Last winter I made two special order storm windows. A man came in and told me the size he wanted and asked how much it would cost him. I said I didn't know. He left $40 to show his good faith, so I made the windows. It cost $40 for the glass alone; but the man paid for them when I was finished."

"You can't just start on a special order without some faith money. Materials cost and chances are what the people want made couldn't be sold to anyone else; so you are out the money."

Martin was once commissioned to make a fainting couch for an antique doll. His only pattern was a picture of a full size couch. He made it as authentic as possible with curlicues and scroll work. When it was finished it was upholstered with velvet and was an exact miniature of the one pictured.

Where does Mr. Bjornsen get the wood to make his magnificent works of art? Over the years he has accumulated black walnut, cherry, butternut, and maple lumber by buying direct from farmers or at auctions. Whenever possible he buys standing trees, has them sawed down, cut into boards, and dries them in his storage area. The drying process takes three years or more.

How long does it take to craft one of his masterpieces or one of his intricate wheels? "I don't count the hours," he says. "All of a sudden it's all together."

If you are in Baraboo, Wisconsin and pass a neat, grey and white workshop with a small, wheel-shaped sign that says "Woodwork", you are observing the shop where Martin Bjornsen, probably the only wheel maker left in Wisconsin, makes his beautiful, decorative wheels—a craft his father learned in Norway nearly 100 years ago.

Banjoes and Bluegrass at Bean Blossom, Indiana

By Bill Nelson

During mid-June each year, the sweet strains of banjo, fiddle and mandolin fill the air at—what more bucolic name for a bluegrass capital?—Bean Blossom.

This hilly, crossroads Hoosier town (pop. 150) is so small you dare not blink or you'll miss it. But the magic of mountain music . . . the close-to-earth sound or, as some describe it, hillbilly music . . . draws many thousands of pickers and gridders and just plain curious.

The "yeehaws" and "yaaaaahoos" that echo around the grounds come from Midwesterners, Appalachian folk and even Southerners who journey here. They listen to twice daily, marathon stage shows, sitting on crudely fashioned, weathered wood plank seats in an amphitheater in the middle of a woods on the 94 acre Jamboree grounds. The park is little more than a field . . . as unpretentious as the music it showcases . . . a place filled with down-home people and a down-home music.

The nine day Bean Blossom Bluegrass Festival is a sociologist's delight. It has much of the flavor of the old time revival meeting, a kind of evangelistic fervor.

The younger set is well represented, too; after all, bluegrass is catching on big with the under-30 crowd. You'll see headbands, tie-die shirts, muddied jeans, pretty halter tops, long haired guys and braless gals—as well as just plain straights here simply to strum a guitar or pluck a banjo.

This (the 1980 version) will be Bean Blossom's 15th annual bluegrass shindig—the creation of the father of bluegrass, the fabled Bill Monroe. The virtuoso of "finger pickin' good" music, Monroe gathers his people each June and stages a musical marathon that is an entity unto itself.

Two years ago I drove 400 miles to witness it myself . . . a skeptic, simply wanting to see the Monroe mystique. Soon—rather amazingly—I found myself acquiring a taste for this old time music that is so alive and full of surprises.

As Monroe says:
 "Bluegrass is a music built around my style of mandolin playin' and singin'. It's got a hard drive to it. It has Methodist and Holiness and Baptist Church sounds in it, and blues and jazz, too. It has a high lonesome sound. It's a clean music, and it tells a good story. It's played from my heart to your heart."

Hill country music . . . folk music with overdrive . . . yet full of contradiction. Bluegrass lyrics often lean toward themes of country poverty and mountain isolation, but the music itself is anything but sorrowful. It's a rich, flowing sound with catchy harmonies and plucked or bowed counterpoints. Full of instrumental licks and runs; a sound rarely bolstered by electrified instruments or percussion. Music that pulsates with a built-in intensity that sets toes to tapping, feet to stamping.

And all the while the musicians remain poker faced and stone steady.

Monroe himself is a delight. Musicians clamor around him, like students at the foot of the master. He often wears a gleaming white outfit with a broad-brimmed Western hat and he's all over the park, talking to people in that quiet spoken, polite way of his. His music and his scorching mandolin are unforgettable. And his voice is like no other. It's an unearthly tenor that sounds like the wind, lonely and powerful and piercing, yet possessing grave dignity, too.

A 35 year star of the Grand Ole Opry, Monroe is in his mid-60s now, prosperous and comfortable, but the memory of his lean years in Kentucky never leaves him. There's been a re-birth of bluegrass in recent years, he says proudly—and the music is emerging from the backwoods, far beyond what he'd dreamed back in 1939 when he invented it.

If you doubt a bluegrass festival's appeal . . . if this sounds like Madison Avenue hype . . . try a jamboree just for curiosity's sake, and settle back and listen while the musicians show their stuff. You're in for a surprise.

The Bean Blossom festival is a circus. In its muddy fields you'll see a tent and trailer city, popping up helter-skelter everywhere, along with scores of concessions (selling everything from guitar strings to second hand cookware to bluegrass records).

Impromptu concerts and jam sessions can be heard from dawn until 3 the next morning. Strangers wind up forming bands, playing for anyone who'll listen — from the tailgates of station wagons, from lawn chairs set up in front of trailers, through the flaps of open tents.

It's the common folk, without a doubt, and that's a big part of Bean Blossom's charm.
