Fr. Murray a Monsignor by Decree of Pope Paul II

The Rev. Fr. Francis J. Murray, a native of Tawas City, who has served the two Catholic parishes at Kinde since last August, has been made a Monsignor by Pope John Paul II.

In making the announcement, Bishop Francis F. Reh of Saginaw cited Monsignor Murray's "willing acceptance of difficult and challenging assignments for the Saginaw diocese."

The two parishes at Kinde, St. Mary of Czestochowa Roman Catholic Church and neighboring St. Edward Church, were scheduled to be merged into one parish based in the St. Mary building. St. Mary's parishioners successfully obtained a court order halting the merger until all appeal avenues within the church hierarchy were exhausted.

Monsignor Murray, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Murray, attended St. Joseph School here during the first nine years of his education. From 1938 to 1943, he attended St. Joseph Seminary at Grand Rapids. Going from there to the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C., he was ordained June 12, 1949, at St. Mary's Cathedral, Saginaw.

He has served numerous parishes since then, including Free-land, Marlette, Birch Run and Hemlock.

Corps OK's River Mouth Permit

Verbal notification was received Monday by the City of Tawas City that the Detroit District office of the United States Army Corps of Engineers had approved the city's plans for development of the mouth of the Tawas River.

Approval by the federal agency seems to be the last hurdle in the city's 11-month march toward obtaining Land Water Conservation funds for river mouth development.

A preapplication for the first phase of the project was approved last month by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and the final application is to be made to meet a December 1 deadline.

City Mgr. Lowell Thomas stated that approval of a pre-application by the state is considered to be the same as approval of the final application. Considerable support for the project has been received from the state's submerged lands division. Thomas said that details of the army corps approval would not be known until later this week when a verification letter is received. The United States Fish and Wildlife Service and the federal Environmental Protection Agency had both objected to the permit.

Federal officials inspecting the site last month were of the opinion that too much lake bottom land would be filled under the plan, but both city and state officials felt otherwise. As it now stands, $80,000

Governor's Task Force Eyes Problems of Rural Areas

Lowell D. Thomas, Tawas City manager, is one of 19 members of Gov. William G. Milliken's Task Force on Small and Rural Communities which meets December 2-3 at the MacMullan Conference Center at Higgins Lake.

Thomas, a member of the subcommittee on local government, is serving on the task force which will advise the governor on the needs of small and rural communities with populations up to 50,000.

"As a municipal administrator, I come from a management perspective that municipalities and rural areas face many serious problems with respect to local services they must provide residents," Thomas says.

"Obviously, a very crucial concern is the need for the diversification and stabilization of our economic base. As a task force member, I am interested in developing recommendations to the governor that would provide for the expansion and anchoring of the revenue base for our small communities in this state."

The task force was appointed last August by Governor Milliken and announced at the governor's Small and Rural Areas Growth Conference at Ferris State College, Big Rapids. Governor Milliken directed the task force to pinpoint the most pressing needs facing Michigan communities with populations of 50,000 or under.

At the time the governor made the appointments, he directed the task force to work closely with his Community Development Cabinet, chaired by Lt. Gov. James H. Brickley. The goal of the cabinet and the task force is to design a coordinated strategy to shape the future of the state's small and rural communities.

Tawas City was among 11

municipal areas in Northern Michigan which presented their particular problems in coping with growth at the August conference and at the first growth conference in 1978. In both instances, the Tawas City case study revealed severe problems with limited transportation services, economic development, employment, environment and recreation.

According to population projection data compiled by David Goldberg with the University of Michigan's Population Center, Iosco County, which includes Tawas City, will experience a growth rate of 136.4 percent between 1970 and 2000. Goldberg projects the county's 1970 population will grow to 45,827 in 1990 and 58,864 by the year 2000.

Thomas adds another dimension to the growth problems in Northern Michigan when he describes the difficulties small communities encounter when they are confronted with regulations that make no distinction between a small and a large community's ability to comply. "Small communities in Michigan are constantly rubbing up against regulations from state agencies that are more applicable to bigger communities," he says. Based on his experiences in other states, Thomas notes he is also concerned with what he calls the waste of taxpayers' money in this state which allows overlapping agencies to exist and results in duplication of services at the local, county and state level. He cites two examples: Law enforcement and planning agencies.

"Some rural areas have three levels of law enforcement—a township police unit, a county sheriff's department and state police — interfacing," Thomas says. "I see county planning agencies, village and township planning agencies covering the same areas that should be planned by one unit. This duplication of services wastes a lot of taxpayers' money and the results are very disjointed and im-

Business Association Makes Change in Election Date

In a surprise move, members of the Tawas City Business Association rescinded a bylaw change of last year and moved the date for election of officers back to the original date of the third Thursday of November.

The organization's nomination committee placed a slate of 1980 incumbents before the membership and election followed with Leonard Hosbach being named to another term as president.

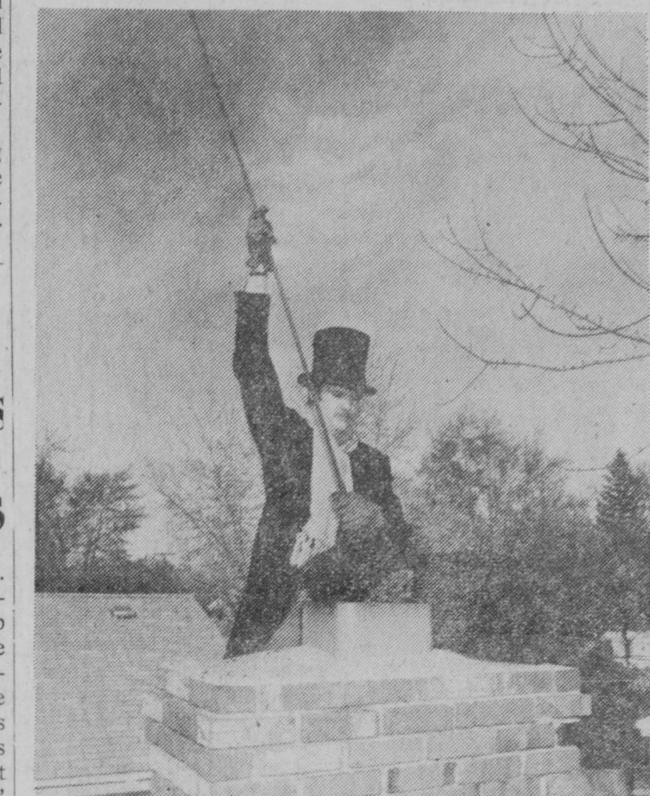

Other officers re-elected were Marshall Wood, vice president;

Brent Babcock, secretary-treasurer; James Shotwell, assistant secretary.

In other business, members present gave the Christmas decoration committee authority to hold a tree lighting ceremony at the city park.

In addition to the lighting ceremony, local vocal and musical groups are urged to participate.

A short talk followed by John Pridnia who attended an Alpena meeting of Northeastern Michigan businessmen and citizens. This was part of a program requested by Gov. William Milliken and was one of 13 held around the state.

BUILD-UP of creosote and soot in chimneys from wood-burning can cause dangerous home fires. Depending on the amount of use, thorough cleaning is recommended at least once a year. Professionals, such as David Badovinac, do the job clad in traditional attire of tall hat, swallowtail coat and scarf—but the main thing is to do a thorough job.

Safety Stressed in Burning Wood

Michigan was struck by a disaster last winter that received few headlines. It claimed 18 lives, injured at least 235 other people and destroyed or damaged nearly 2,500 dwellings, businesses or other structures to the tune of almost $8,000,000.

It was not a tornado or explosion, it was uncontrolled fires stemming from wood-burning stoves, fireplaces or chimneys. Although no lives were lost in Iosco County as the result of such fires, considerable damage was reported by area fire departments.

"The sad part is that it could have all been avoided by proper care and caution," said Terry Buckles, president of the Michigan Association of Insurance Companies. "It is hard to deny the enjoyment that can be derived from a crackling fire in fireplaces and stoves, or the possible saving in heating bills."

"But, unless care is taken, such benefits also can exact a tragic and costly toll as evidenced by the state fire marshal's statistics for the November 1979 to March 1980 period. And, with the increasing numbers burning wood, the problem is becoming more severe each year."

Four basic guidelines for wood-burning safety include: 1. Buy only equipment approved by a recognized testing laboratory; 2. Have it installed according to authorized standards; 3. Learn the proper rules for operation and maintenance; 4. Have the chimney and stove-piping thoroughly cleaned at least once a year.

Not following the first two rules is a violation of Michigan law effective April 5 of this year. After that date, only stoves, fireplace stoves, factory built fireplaces and manufactured chimneys and stovepipe connectors tested and labeled by a recognized testing laboratory could be legally installed in Michigan.

It is equally important to keep the equipment in top working order. The latest statistics show that improper care and maintenance cause 54 percent of related fires.

"Another problem results from users not understanding the tremendous amounts of heat radiated in the immediate vicinity by wood-burning. These super temperatures, which can approach 2,000 degrees in the firebox, were the direct cause of more than one-half the accidental fires created by solid fuel stoves and fireplaces in the past heating season, said Buckles.

Firewood obviously stacked too close to the burning area was the type of material first ignited in about four of 10 cases.

Creosote deposits in stovepipes and chimneys are a serious fire hazard and the main reason for frequent cleaning. A by-product of burning wood that layers the interior of pipes and chimneys with a continued coating, heavy deposits of creosote become very hot and burst into flame.

Use of wood that has not been cut and stored in a dry location for at least a year produces the most creosote, but even seasoned wood produces some.

Saginaw Man, Now Dead, Showed 'Who Was Boss'

A 22-year-old Saginaw man, who told three friends that "we will see who is boss," died November 18 as the result of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head.

Dead is Francisco R. Llamas Jr., who was staying with three friends at 1493 Media Drive, East Tawas.

The witnesses, Michael P. McCoy, Mary J. McMahon and Mark Munro, told investigating Iosco County Sheriff's Department officers that the four of them were playing cards.

One witness said the victim went to a suitcase and pulled out a .22 caliber automatic pistol, racked a bullet into the chamber and placed the barrel against his head.

A member of the group told Llamas to "quit fooling around" and the victim took the clip of bullets out of the weapon and again placed the barrel back to his head, apparently in a joking manner.

Investigating officers ruled the shooting as accidental.

The weapon discharged and Llamas was struck in the head. An ambulance was called and he was rushed to Tawas Hospital where he was dead on arrival.

Investigating officers ruled the shooting as accidental.

Commission Appropriates to Iosco Ambulance Deficits

Appropriations were approved last week by Iosco County Board of Commissioners to make principal payments and depreciation for ambulance services of Iosco County.

Tawas Hospital received $7,452.57 and Oscoda Ambulance Service received $15,876. Depreciation amounts requested by each unit were not paid by the commission due to the lack of funds.

In line with its established policy, the commission announced that it would accept applications and recommendations for potential new members of boards appointed by the county commission.

Included would be one member of the road commission, two members of the regional library board, one member of the department of social services board, two members of the mental health board, two members of the county parks and recreation commission, four members of the county planning commission and one member of the county building authority.

The Iosco County Housing Commission was granted authority to administer a $400,000 HUD grant for housing rehabilitation. David George was named as the board of commissioners' liaison with the housing commission. Authority was also given to hire a secretary and office staff director.

A request to hold a public hearing on closing the AuSable River to snagging of salmon and other fish was turned over to Oscoda Township for review before final action is taken.

The hearing request was made by the county parks and recreation commission, which pointed out that snaggers pose a problem for law enforcement officials because there are not enough officials to patrol the area.

Home-Trailer Burn Near Hale

Fire Chief Duane Caverly said that no one was injured in the blaze. Fire started in the modular home and spread to the nearby trailer. Owners of the structures have not been identified as yet and the fire remains under investigation.

Irl Baguley's Book Tells of Boyhood Days in Tawas

An interesting autobiography by Irl L. Baguley of Caro, entitled "The Day Dreamer," is now in the collection of the Iosco County Historical Society Museum at East Tawas.

Born in Tawas City October 18, 1898, to John and Rebecca (Polly) Baguley, he followed in the footsteps of his father as a railroadman, first with the Detroit and Mackinac, later with the Michigan Central, Pere Marquette and other railroads in the Thumb area of Michigan.

His father also instilled in him a great appreciation of the out-of-doors; but his good humor and wit was inherited from his mother, who once served on the board of education of this community. The Baguley home, once surrounded by a decorative iron picket fence, still stands.

Attending the old Ward School in Tawas City at the corner of Court and River Streets, he sat in class on a warm day in June, "with flies buzzing in and out of the open door, watching the railroad tracks fading away in the distance, daydreaming of the day that I would follow those same rails to far-off places." He was awakened from fantasy, rudely called to realism again by the sharp voice of the teacher: "Irl, stop daydreaming and answer my question!"

A resident of Caro since 1920, he and his wife, Clara, have visited every state in the union with the exception of Alaska. Their vacation travels have also taken them to all of the Canadian provinces with the exception of Newfoundland and all of the continents except Australia.

During his lifetime, he explained, "we have seen an age of great accomplishment, taking us from the days of the horse and buggy to the age of the atom and to the landing on the moon."

Of particular local interest in his 157-page book are 11 chapters dealing with his boyhood and young manhood in Tawas City. Both his father and his uncle, James Baguley, were locomotive engineers for the rail-

Coho Should be Replaced With Trout

Iosco Parks and Recreation Commission has recommended that the county board of commissioners petition the Michigan Department of Natural Resources to close the AuSable River for all foul hooking (a nice way to say snagging) of any fish.

The petition also includes the proposed prohibition of overnight parking and camping in undesignated areas along the lower AuSable River downstream from Foote Dam.

This is good thinking, but this corner offers another suggestion: Petition the DNR to stop the planting of all coho salmon in waters of Iosco County and concentrate on the planting of steelhead trout, lake trout, brown trout and walleye pike.

Our suggestion probably would not get to first base with the DNR—the same thing was suggested a couple of years ago by Tawas Chamber of Commerce, a decade ago by the Tawas City Council and as far back as 15 years ago by this newspaper.

Local reasoning behind the proposed discontinuance of coho planting is obvious and has been obvious for the past 15 years. Salmon may be a sporty fish in deep water, but when they enter streams emptying into Lake Huron, the coho are headed for their deathbeds and attract swarms of human scavengers. (This newspaper once suggested that it import black bears for this purpose—jokingly, of course.)

At the present time, snagging is legal in the lower AuSable River, but it is illegal to snag fish in the Tawas River. That is an absolute joke in the eyes of the scavengers, who flout the law with careless abandon—throwing large weighted hooks across the river, then reef on the lines until a fish is caught.

There have been numerous arrests for this illegal type of fishing, but an army of DNR officers would be required to even suggest a reasonable attempt was being made to enforce the law. The heavy snagging hooks have taken their toll on other species of fish and it is really great training for youngsters to watch adults break a conservation law.

In Tawas City, there is an ordinance prohibiting overnight camping on streets. There was a reason for this when the council adopted the ordinance: Public parks, equipped with toilet and refuse collecting facilities, are located in the community.

The entire problem could be erased by planting more trout and walleyes and eliminate the coho planting program entirely. These fish do not enter Tawas Bay and the Tawas River on a migration of natural death, but offer great fishing from boats, piers and along the river; the fish escaping the anglers then return to deeper water, to return again at some future time.

We hope that the coho is not so ingrained into the DNR's past that it will close its eyes to local suggestions. Weirs were tried in the early days to catch migrating salmon, but that was an expensive alternative. Just quit planting the coho and the problem is solved.

road here and had emigrated from England in the late 1880s. Baguley's home was practically a stone's throw from the Tawas River. Like other boys growing up here, the river and Tawas Bay were his childhood playgrounds and he recalls vivid episodes from his "Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn" days.

The old Prescott lumber dock and mill east of the present day Tawas City Park also played a big part in his young life, along with the wooded areas which crept to the boundaries of the community. His book talks of duck hunting on Tawas Lake, attending picnics at Tawas Beach Park, his religious life and attendance at school. He was a member of the class of 1915 at Tawas City High School.

There have been many changes in this community since Baguley's formative

Hearing on Criteria for Services

In compliance with Public Act 323, Public Acts of 1978, the Michigan Health Planning and Resources Development Act, the board of directors of East Central Michigan Health Systems Agency, Incorporated, announces a public hearing on proposed criteria and standards for acute short-term psychiatric services and the 1981 annual implementation plan for the East Central Michigan Health Service Area which is comprised of the 14 Michigan Counties of Arenac, Bay, Clare, Gladwin, Gratiot, Huron, Iosco, Isabella, Midland, Ogemaw, Roscommon, Saginaw, Sanilac and Tuscola.

The public hearing will be held at 5:00 p. m. Monday, December 15, in the Ramada Room of the Ramada Inn, Saginaw, located at I-75 and M-46 exit. Individuals and organizations wishing to make oral and/or written comments are encouraged to attend. The deadline for receipt of written comments is the close of business (5:00 p. m.) Wednesday, December 17.

years, although the next two generations relived some of the same experiences as related in the book. Today, only the fun Baguley had on the unchanging Tawas River is recognizable.

Baguley started his long road career as assistant station agent in Tawas City (the building survives, but has been moved across the tracks along First Street). He later served other stations along the Huron Shore Route, including Linwood Park Station, before entering a long career with several other railroads.

Besides operating a grocery store at one time in Caro, he served that community in many capacities, one term as supervisor, a library board member, secretary-director of the Caro Chamber of Commerce, served on a committee to establish a new high school, was active in boy scouts, in the Presbyterian Church and, one year, was secretary to six different organizations.

He and his wife have lived to see their 11 grandchildren and two great grandchildren and, as he explains in the epilogue of his book, "we have lived life to the fullest."

Baguley's well-written book tells an interesting story of the active life of this native son and is available for loan at the Iosco County Historical Museum.

A CHECK for $2,000 was presented to Tawas Hospital's hearing clinic Monday by representatives of Iosco Quota Club. Accepting the check is Phyllis Langley, RN, director of nursing. properly planned growth." Part of the problem in planning for growth, he says, may be that small communities do not have the expertise of professionals to assist their efforts in taking advantage of grants from federal and state programs. Thomas says he would like the task force to come up with recommendations to make such professionals available to small communities.

Thomas urges all concerned local officials, interested community organizations and individuals to attend the public forum Tuesday, December 2, from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., in the main classroom of the MacMullan Conference Center at Higgins Lake.

The task force has been divided into four subcommittees. The subcommittee on human needs will look at problems in housing, human services and education. The subcommittee on economic development will examine transportation, job development and economic development. The subcommittee on resource use includes issues and problems in the area of energy, environment, agriculture and natural resources. The local government subcommittee will focus on local finance and services.

During the next five months, the task force will examine problems facing small and rural communities throughout Michigan. As part of this process, the task force is holding monthly public forums around the state. In April of next year, task force members will submit their findings and recommendations to the governor.

The local share of the project would be $79,810, depending on approval of funds from the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission. The city manager has suggested that the city issue general obligation bonds to finance its share.

The project would include a revetment across the outer channel, site filling, timber groins, parking lot and drive, lawns, picnic and play equipment, timber access ramp and engineering.

City-owned property on the east side of the river mouth would become a Gateway Park, the first site for northbound traffic on US-23 to view Lake Huron. A positive reaction was received from chamber of commerce officials on location of an information center on the site.

Film Slated at ET Church

The film, "In Remembrance," will be shown at the East Tawas Assembly of God Church Sunday evening, November 30, at 7 o'clock.

"In Remembrance" is a new motion picture that tells the unforgettable story of men and women who chose to follow a young lecturer from Nazareth and of the night that would change their world forever. It is a film about real people, who doubt as we feel, the fears, doubts, love and loneliness that are the common bonds of all humanity.

It tells of a small group of friends who met for a last meal together. Today, almost 2,000 years later, that simple and distant event is celebrated by people around the world.

It begins among the shadows of the first Passover in Egypt and ends with the death of Christ at Golgotha.

"In Remembrance" is a motion picture experience never to be forgotten, states the Rev. Edward J. Fairbanks. The public is invited to attend.

CAREER GUIDANCE PROGRAM FOR JUNIORS

During the week of December 1, all juniors at Hale Area High School will have an opportunity to participate in a career guidance and educational planning program, the ACT Career Planning Program, designed to help young adults make better decisions about their educational and career plans. Joseph VanderVeen, counselor at the school, points out that national studies reflect that 11th grade students requested "help with career planning" as their most important need. Yet in many school settings, this need is not being addressed. It is in response to this need that Hale Area High School, and the other county high schools, instituted the opportunity to participate in the Career Planning Program through the assistance of Region 7B, CETA.

Participating students complete the Career Planning Program assessment instrument which measures the students' career related interests, experiences, abilities and plans. The information is developed into a report for each student to help them relate this information about themselves to career options and the world of work. The reports will be reviewed with students in group and individual counseling sessions following the administration of the program. VanderVeen stated that the Career Planning Program is more than an assessment experience, but rather a first step, or foundation for the start of each student's career journey.

About 60 percent of last year's seniors at Hale Area High School said they were planning further education after high school. Thirty percent were planning toward a technical/vocational program and 30 percent were aiming for four years or more of college attendance.

"The aim of the school's guidance program is to assist all of these students, regardless of their objectives, with the process of learning about and exploring career opportunities," said VanderVeen. "We feel the Career Planning Program will help us accomplish that aim."

THE LITTLE concrete arch bridge spanning Dead Creek at Sixth Avenue withstood some heavy pounding Wednesday afternoon before giving way to progress. A ball was dropped by the dragline several times before it finally punched through the deck, revealing a surprising amount of reinforcement steel was used when the bridge was constructed 68 years ago. Work has started on constructing a two-span wooden bridge as a replacement.—Tawas Herald Photos.

Good Friends and Turkey are Featured Thanksgiving Traditions

Home for the holidays... and the house should smell good with the promise of turkey, apple pie and homemade cookies. Be sure to use plenty of real butter in all the holiday cooking and baking, for the best taste ever.

When the snowball fight is over and the troops come indoors, chilled and in need of something good to eat, offer them hot chocolate made by warming fresh chocolate milk from the carton. A drizzle of whipped cream and a dusting of cinnamon makes that chocolate taste just right.

'Tis the season for eggnog. Serve it half and half with fresh wholesome milk as a mealtime beverage. For festive occasions, serve eggnog in a punch bowl with a garnish of red and green cherries. As a before bedtime treat, try eggnog warmed gently... 'tis the season for good things from the dairy.

Good friends and good food go together but often we need something simple instead of the rich feasting of the season. A tray of cheese in all its wonderful variety is perfect. Put wedges of cheese and plenty of buttery crackers out for casual entertaining... and always serve cheese just at room temperature for best flavor.

Final thought: My bank account is here today and drawn tomorrow.

AMERICA'S EAGLES

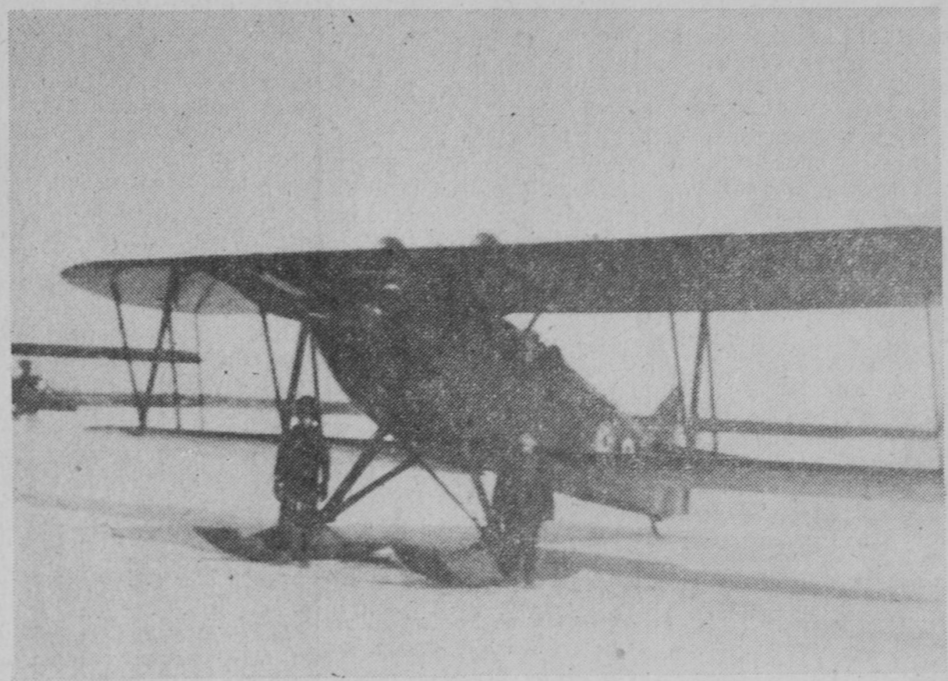

A SQUADRON of Seversky P-35s is lined up along the runway at Camp Skeel, Oscoda, in 1940. At left, Col. Charles

Lindberg is shown with other army pilots at Oscoda shortly after his historic flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

To many Josco County residents, it "seems like only yesterday" when they paused to watch a squadron of 13 Seversky P-35s pass overhead on the way to Oscoda. Little did they know that a young Detroit captain leading the group would soon become a hero of World War II—one whom Gen. Douglas MacArthur was to recall "was one of the finest air officers I have ever known and much of the success of our air force in the Southwest Pacific area was due to his brilliant attainments and leadership."

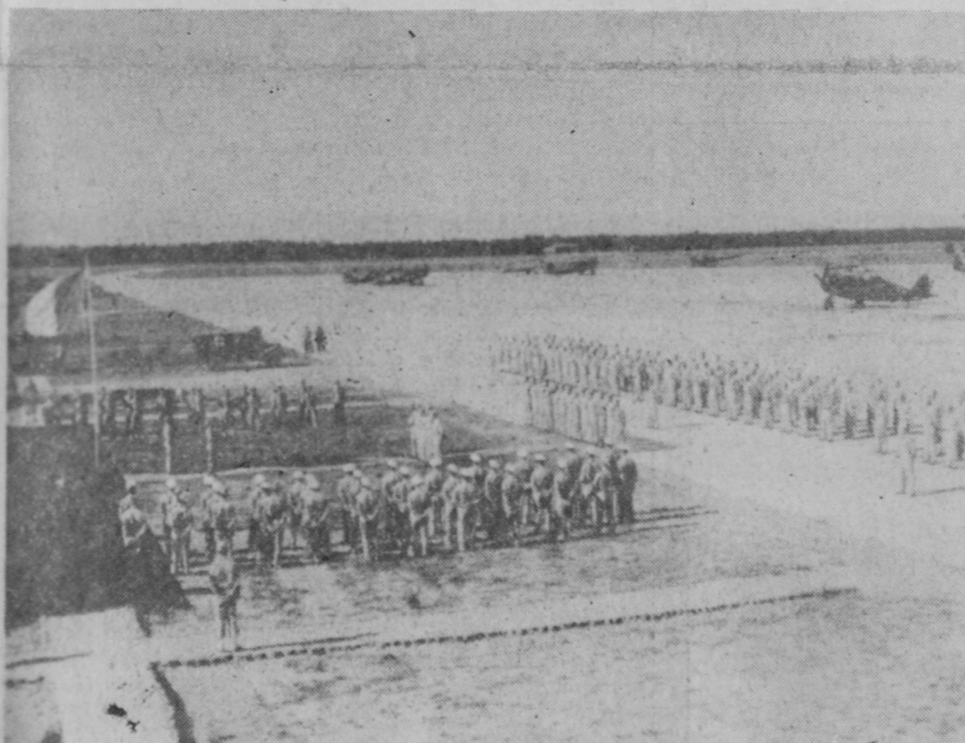

Leading that squadron was Capt. Paul H. Wurtsmith. To aviation-minded youngsters of 1940 in the Oscoda-Tawas area, the P-34 Seversky represented the "hottest" pursuit plane in the service of the United States.

It is truly fitting that today's United States Air Force base west of Oscoda is named Wurtsmith in honor of a Michigander, who once was an altar boy at Detroit's Holy Redeemer Church, rose to the rank of

OSCODA RESIDENTS pitched in to help clear a landing field and provided needed facilities for army pilots participating in winter maneuvers at VanEttan Lake in 1924. This Curtis pursuit plane, admired by two Oscoda kids, was equipped with skis.

MORE THAN 125 fliers received gunnery training at Oscoda Army Airfield during a three-month period in 1944, including this contingent of Free French pilots, who salute their captive country's tricolor flag. In the background are fighter planes.

brigadier general and, at the age of 36 years, received the Distinguished Service Medal for leading the 49th Fighter Group in its defense of Australia during the dark days of 1942. The planes he commanded later helped to win control of the air during the long road up the "steppingstone" islands to ultimate victory in the Pacific.

Young Wurtsmith was first and foremost a fighter pilot and there are a few Oscoda residents today who recall when the first pursuit group in this country's entire air service chose VanEttan Lake for winter maneuvers in 1924-25; a year or so later, townspeople raised funds to clear 40 acres of jack pine land bordering VanEttan Lake for an airfield with a sod runway to be known as Camp Skeel, named in honor of Capt. Bert Skeel, a pursuit pilot killed during a national air show.

That group of Oscoda residents—Nada P. Mills, James Hull, Joseph Amley, Charles and John Flanders, Charles Hennigar, Warren P. (Win) Vaughn and Judge Alfred R. Weir—have all passed on but their efforts left a legacy of cooperation and interdependence between the air base and the neighboring communities. Some of the names connected with those early days when Curtis pursuit planes were equipped with skis to land on the frozen surface of VanEttan Lake have become familiar to all air-minded citizens—names like Whitehead, Spaatz, Lindberg, Tourtellot. The names of even some of the lesser-known young pilots landing on the ice in 1924-25 are recalled by a few Oscoda residents—Maj. T. G. Lamphier, Lts. T. E. Tillinghast, Leland Hurt, T. Thad Johnson, Frank Hunter, S. L. Thomas, Cyrus Bettis, Alfred Lyon; 2Lt. Russell Minty; Sergeants Wasser, Manning and Wisley.

Expressing the newly-formed base's gratitude for all that the townsfolk had done, Major Lamphier told Oscoda residents: "When the war department had made no arrangements for our summer target practice and when we were literally down and out and hopeless of having such accommodations, Oscoda worked for us and made us welcome."

Camp Skeel continued to offer fliers the near-arctic conditions sought on winter maneuvers through the days when the young captain from Selfridge, Paul Wurtsmith, led squadrons up to the north country to test the mettle of pilots and aircraft alike.

Camp Skeel was still a subsidiary of Selfridge Field when

A YOUNG MICHIGANDER, Capt. Paul Wurtsmith, led squadrons of fighter planes to VanEttan Lake for winter maneuvers in the late 1930s. With the advent of World War II, he rose rapidly in rank and had a brilliant record in the Southwestern Pacific. He was killed on a routine flight following the war and the base was renamed in his honor.

Churches of the area participating are Church of the Nazarene, Tawas City First Baptist Church, Tawas United Methodist Church, Lake Huron Community Church and East Tawas Baptist Church.
 The Rev. Edward Fairbanks, pastor of the host church, extends an invitation to all members and the public to attend.

 The congregation is also planning weekly Advent events and will begin the season with a pot-luck dinner Sunday, November 30, 5:30 p. m. Program for the evening will be on how individual families can observe Advent. Suggestions for all age levels will be presented.
 The youth of the congregation will present three puppet acts Sunday, December 7, at 7:00 p. m. at the second Advent observance.

First Church of Christ, Scientist
 A special Thanksgiving service will be offered Thursday, November 27, at First Church of Christ, Scientist, 919 East Bay Street, East Tawas.
 Scriptures selected for the occasion point to Christ Jesus' example of gratitude as something deeply felt and lived day by day in healing, regeneration and brotherhood.
 Related passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, the denominational textbook, will be read by Alma Holtenbeck, first reader, and include the statement: "Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks. Action expresses more gratitude than speech."
 A familiar passage from Psalms, "O come, let us sing unto the Lord . . . Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms. For the Lord is a great God" — along with other selections from the Old and New Testaments—will be read by Ellen Wayne, second reader.
 The 11:00 a. m. annual service also includes hymns, prayers and a time for church members to express gratitude for God's goodness and care.
 All are welcome to attend and care will be available for very young children.

Zion Lutheran Church
 A Wednesday evening, November 26, worship service with distribution of Holy Communion is slated for 7:30 o'clock at Zion Lutheran Church, Tawas City, in observance of the Thanksgiving holiday. The Rev. Bernhard Kube will officiate.

 The Rev. James Rockhoff will officiate at the Thanksgiving morning service at Emanuel Lutheran Church, Tawas City. The service is scheduled for 10 o'clock and the choir will offer a selection under the direction of Robert Koch.

(Read Psalm 95:1-7)
 Susan had been taught to end her prayers with thanksgiving. One night she said, "Thank you, God, for this nice day. Thank you for my friend, Jeanie. Thank you for my home and food. Thank you for the sunshine. Thank you for the little ducks I saw in the park." She paused a moment, then in happy exuberance exclaimed, "Thank you, God, that there are so many things to thank you for!"
 How long has it been since such a joyful thanksgiving welled up in our hearts? We are prone to lose the fresh awareness of the wonder of God's gifts. We begin to take things for granted, instead of bowing in awe at God's continued grace.
 God asks us to love Him with all our being, with no divisive interests, no selfish, cautious restrictions. When we awaken to God's love, we, too, will offer exuberant prayers of thanksgiving.

PRAYER
 We love you, God. Thank you for all the blessings you give us so freely. In Jesus' name. Amen.
THOUGHT FOR THE DAY
 Giving thanks produces a thankful heart.—Dorothy Enke (Nebraska)

An Educational Experience

Down at the Railway Station

A collection representing the efforts of three generations of one family is providing an unusual educational experience for all ages in its new home. It also provides an alternative means for raising funds to benefit charitable organizations of Iosco County.

Michael Reed of Monument Road has finally found a home for his collection of model railroad equipment which he, his father and grandfather have been assembling for nearly 50 years.

Reed and his wife, Janell, recently established the Railway Station in Scoot's Mini Mall, a centralized location in the Newman Street shopping center at East Tawas.

There, amid 300 feet of tracks, 200 electrical props and more than 2,000 separate electrical connections, the Reeds have assembled their collection of toy trains, representing such familiar names as Lionel, American Flyer and Markland.

Reed got the idea for this new venture five years ago and established an exhibit in his garage. A number of different organizations were invited to view the antique train operation and out of this grew the Railway Station. A steady stream of Little League teams, boy scouts, brownies and other youngsters enjoyed watching the trains and listening to Reed as he explained the different types of locomotives and the historical background relative to railroads in the local area.

The Railway Station is an educational experience for old and young alike, not just a place of amusement. With his large collection of complete train sets, Reed is able to change the exhibits every two weeks.

As an example, Michigan's lumbering era is featured in one exhibit during November. This shows how steam engines were used to bring timber out of the woods and it even has an operating sawmill.

Invitations have been extended to 100 different organizations to participate in the fund raising project being sponsored by Reed. Tickets are sold at a discount to the organizations, which will also share in actual profits of the Railway Station. Reed also hopes to get about 500 different local business organizations involved in the project.

A check for $513.46 was presented to Iosco Association for Retarded Citizens, representing a share of receipts which the exhibit received while it was located in Reed's garage. He also donated a 1970 Lionel train set in like new condition to the organization and this will go to some hand-capped child.

The Railway Station is open from 6 to 8 o'clock weekday evenings and from 12:30 to 4:30 p. m. on Saturdays. Reservations are also taken for special showings at other times.

P-40s swept low on practice strafing runs.

With a steady stream of young people leaving the county for military service, many of those remaining here felt it was their duty to channel their energies to the airfield. On September 18, 1942, The Tawas Herald reported that construction workers were urgently needed at the airport construction project of the United States Army Air Base, Camp Skeel, Oscoda.

"Workers are needed for the construction of a landing field, barracks, hospital facilities and other miscellaneous building, road and street work. Construction laborers are being paid 60 cents an hour. Plenty of overtime work is available as the project is working seven days a week. Carpenters are paid $1 an hour, with time and a half for overtime."

The airfield continued to grow and on July 12, 1944, Camp Skeel became known as Oscoda Army Airfield, when it was designated as an independent base and no longer a subsidiary of Selfridge.

On July 17 of that year, a new era started with the arrival of one lieutenant and 34 Free French enlisted flying students, followed shortly by the almost complete transfer of personnel from Blackstone Air Force Base. In three months, base personnel figures were more than doubled. The 134th AAF Base Unit (Fighter) consisted of four sections: Medical, supply, administration and the French group.

With Col. John C. Crosswhite and, later, Lt. Col. Andrew J. Reynolds commanding, a training program was set up that consisted of subjects designed to prepare personnel for shipment to combat zones.

In the course of one three-month period, more than 125 fliers received gunnery training—the Oscoda field was geared for all-out war. During subsequent months, the base's mission was expanded even further to include combat zone training. By October 1944, 92 French army personnel completed the required training.

But by April 12, 1945, the course of the war had changed and a bulletin was received redesignating the base a subgroup of Selfridge and directing that Oscoda be utilized in the future as a bombing and gunnery range by Selfridge Field. An almost complete transfer of base personnel to other stations resulted with only a "housekeeping" force remaining behind.

With the arrival of the jet age and establishment of the Department of the Air Force in September 1947, the installation was revitalized and in January 1950, the Continental Air Command's 2475th Base Service Squadron, commanded by Maj. George W. Orr, received formal authorization. Air National Guard units utilized the facilities, along with the 62nd and 63rd Fighter-Interceptor Squadrons of the 56th Fighter Group.

On June 25, 1950, the base was placed on alert status prompted by the start of the Korean War. The nation's military machine again went into high gear, including Oscoda Air Base. New construction followed as the base was expanded to meet the needs of the 63rd Fighter-Interceptor Squadron moved from Selfridge under the command of Lt. Col. Charles W. King.

Lt. Col. George Dawson assumed command on October 28, 1951, and 4,000 people were on hand July 11, 1953, to witness the activities dedicating the base to the memory of Maj. Gen. Paul Wurtsmith. After a brilliant record during World War II, the Detroit'er returned stateside in July 1946. After all of his combat flying missions overseas, he lost his life on a routine flight, crashing to his death on a North Carolina mountain top.

With its new name, the base continued its status as a fighter-interceptor facility, its jet aircraft providing a strong defense of the North American continent during a long period of watchful waiting during world unrest.

Another era was entered with the start of the 1960s when the Strategic Air Command took over the base. The 920th Air Refueling Squadron from Carswell Air Force Base, Texas, arrived at Oscoda in July 1960, followed by the 524th Bomb Squadron, first equipped with B-47 medium bombers.

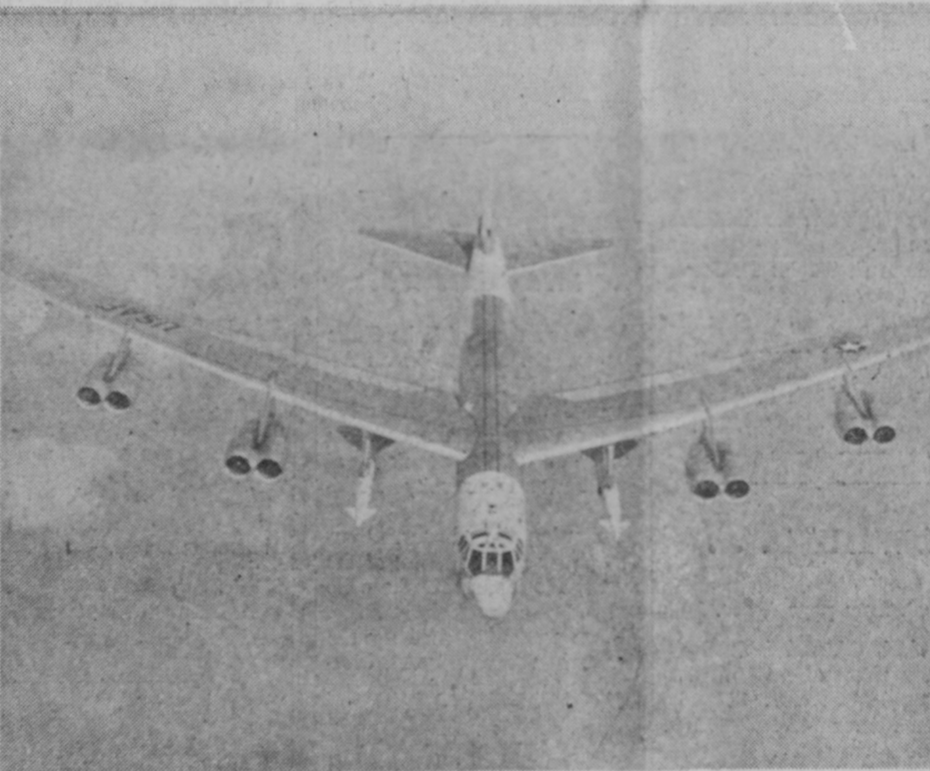

In a matter of months, the face of Wurtsmith was entirely changed as its role as a fighter-interceptor base was expanded

IN 1944, Oscoda Army Airfield replaced the name of Camp Skeel and national efforts turned into high gear as the base trained pilots for combat operations over Europe and in the Pacific.

IN THE MID-1950s, Wurtsmith Air Force Base was a key link in the chain of United States fighter-interceptor squadrons protecting North America from possible enemy attack. This picture was snapped during a 1955 open house when citizens were given the opportunity to view tax dollars at work.

to handle the landing and maintenance of giant B-52 Stratofortresses.

April 1, 1960, marked the end of the fighter plane era at Wurtsmith—one of the last exclusive fighter bases in the United States Air Force. During its long history, the base had seen the transition from the "flying crates" of World War I vintage to the sleek supersonic F101 jet interceptors.

As had been the case for 36 years, the fraternalism and kinship between the civilian and military community was continued in April 1960 when the first 40th Air Division commander, Brig. Gen. Harold E. Humfeld, was given a full "red carpet" welcome to his new assignment. He asked local citizens to "open their hearts and homes" to personnel of his command and the neighboring communities responded immediately and continue to do so to this day.

The mission of SAC as a retaliatory striking force has continued to the present day, including wartime alert status again during the Vietnam conflict. Within three years after General Humfeld's arrival, the government spent more than 300-million dollars at Wurtsmith and there was an influx of more than 4,000 military personnel.

Because of technological developments in military striking power through the use of intercontinental missiles and revised defense plans, the future of this air base and its manned bombers is uncertain. But, for the present, it is dedicated to the preservation of world peace.

Iosco County is proud of the role it has played as being the location of a mighty military installation and of the long years of close personal friendship it has maintained with its military neighbors. It all started 55 years ago when jack pine was cleared by townspeople for a primitive sod runway west of Oscoda along the shore of Van-Ettan Lake.

Slip into the Yuletide spirit

Age-old customs, traditions shape contemporary holiday

For all of the many symbols of Christmas—a welcoming wreath upon a door, gaily wrapped packages spilling out from under a tree, twinkling lights dancing upon tinsel—seldom is the special significance of the holiday season obscured.

From large cities to remote country villages in lands both near and far, a spirit of good cheer prevails among the people.

There is great excitement as age-old customs are followed in preparation for the holiday celebration. And, though the customs may differ from land to land, the holiday sentiment remains much the same in many cultures.

Midwinter had always been a season of joyous celebration in ancient civilizations. The Romans paid tribute to their deity of agriculture, Saturnus, during the winter season of Saturnalia.

A Roman holiday

It was a week-long festival marked by processions, gift-giving, feasting and decorating the home with laurel and evergreens.

In winter also, the Hebrews celebrated the Festival of Lights, or Hanukkah, which is still observed today by people of the Jewish faith. It is a holiday which commemorates the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem by Judas Maccabeus in 165 B.C.

The Temple had been pillaged by the Syrian army, and only a small amount of sacred oil remained. Although it was judged to be enough to last for only one day, the oil burned for eight days. Therefore the Jews observe Hanukkah for eight days in honor of this miracle.

Winter rites

Similarly, wintertime festivities took place in early Egyptian and Greek civilizations. The Goths, Saxons and Druids of the northern lands all celebrated the arrival of the winter solstice with great feasting and sacred rituals.

These pagan rituals eventually melded with the Christian celebration of the birth of Christ, and the season's festivities took on an international character as Christianity grew in acceptance throughout the centuries.

At first, the Church resisted observation of pagan rituals but, failing in that attempt, it incorporated the forms into the Christian celebration.

Custom of gift-giving

Perhaps the most well-known and widespread of all Christmas traditions is the practice of giving gifts.

The early Romans made gifts to their emperors during Saturnalia; the three wise men, or Magi, brought gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh to the Christ child; and an Archbishop from Lycia brought the gift of faith to many.

This generous Archbishop from Asia Minor was the good Saint Nicholas, or Santa Claus, the patron saint of girls and boys.

Children all over the world write to him at his home at the North Pole with their gift requests, a practice which has been abstracted from a Germanic legend.

The symbols of Christmas are both sacred and secular. From special holiday cakes to the star on the Christmas tree, from sidewalk Santas to the scene of the nativity, the mix of pagan and Christian symbolism is thorough.

Celtic traditions

Kissing under the mistletoe stems from ancient Celtic tradition. Decorating the tree—in early times, with fruits and sweets—stems from an early Germanic worship of vegetation.

Sending Christmas greetings to friends and associates to express friendship and good-will first came about in Victorian England.

An English first

Queen Victoria's husband, Prince Albert, introduced the first Christmas tree in England from his native Austria in 1841.

Centuries-old customs have been handed down in a spirit of heart-warming brotherhood. Children grow excited at the thought of Santa's visit, of the chance to sit on his knee at the local department store.

Singers both young and old venture out into the crisp night, filling the air with the sweet sounds of Christmas carols.

College students gather in the dorm lounge, surrounded by bowls of popcorn, needles and thread, red and green ribbons, and an eight-foot tree waiting to be decorated.

Heart-warming season

Very few hearts escape being touched by the spirit of Christmas. Bustling commuters don't seem as easily bristled during the holiday season.

The mailman steps a little lighter, despite the increased weight in his bag. Teachers give less homework. Mothers allow their babes an hour or two longer before bedtime.

Christmastime is time to take stock of the good things in life: the simple pleasures, the comforts, the blessings of family and friends.

Pleasures of memory

And, when the 12 days of Christmas have passed, and the decorations return to their boxes until next year, there is always the lingering pleasure in remembering all those smiling faces and dancing eyes, the true symbols of holiday happiness.

Everybody loves the holiday season—it's the time of year when friends and family are busily preparing special mouth-watering goodies to share with other.

Old-fashioned peanut brittle is one tempting treat that has been a yuletide favorite through the ages.

"Even nicer," say home economists from Whirlpool Corporation, "delicious peanut brittle can now be made quickly and easily in a microwave oven. No more stirring constantly and checking closely until the mixture reaches the proper temperature."

Spiced Popcorn Balls Make Happy Presents

Spiced Popcorn Balls are fun for under-the-tree gifts, to hang on the tree and, best of all, to eat. Making them is a nice project on a chilly afternoon, and children love to help. These popcorn balls are quite special tasting 'too, with their holiday flavors of cinnamon and cloves. They'll keep fresh, wrapped tightly in plastic wrap, for several weeks.

SPICED POPCORN BALLS
 1 cup sugar
 1 cup light corn syrup
 4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
 1 teaspoon cider vinegar
 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
 8 cups popped popcorn (unsalted)

In a small saucepan combine sugar, corn syrup, cinnamon, cloves and vinegar. Place candy thermometer in pan (end of thermometer should not touch bottom or sides of pan). Boil over medium heat until 250°F. is reached (do not stir). Remove from heat, stir in butter. Pour over popcorn, mixing quickly. For each ball pack popcorn into a greased 1 cup measure. Using mitts or rubber gloves to protect hands, turn out and form into balls. Set aside on greased waxed paper, let cool. Wrap with plastic wrap.
 YIELD: 5 balls.

THE POINSETTIA: A BRIEF HISTORY

Although the poinsettia plant is not indigenous to the United States, Americans have come to associate its brilliant red bracts with the Christmas season.

The plant was actually introduced here in 1828 by Dr. Joel R. Poinsett, at that time the U.S. Ambassador to Mexico, for whom the plant was named.

Poinsettias grow wild in Mexico, reaching the height of their splendor just around the third week of December.

Their Spanish name, Flor de la Noche-buena (flower of the holy night), derives from a Mexican legend which holds that the poinsettia originated in a miracle.

A poor peasant child, with nothing to take to the service honoring the birth of the Christ child, sadly picked a few weeds to give as an offering.

Kneeling at the altar with this humble gift, the child's earnest prayer and tears of reverence transformed the weeds into the beautiful scarlet flower we know so well.

Today, poinsettias are imported from both Mexico and Hawaii, but a careful planter-lover can keep the plant from one season to the next.

Once all of the brilliant leaves have fallen, the plant should be trimmed back to the wood.

It will flourish outdoors in the summer in most parts of the country, becoming more hearty as the weeks of sunshine pass.

From the first week of October to the second week in November, poinsettias require equal amounts of daylight and darkness to ensure the brilliant red bracts at Christmastime.

Lighting of Christmas Tree Starts Salvation Army Drive

The lighting of the traditional Christmas "tree of lights" will signify the start of the Salvation Army's annual "Sharing is Caring" campaign. The ceremony will be held at 12 noon Wednesday (today), November 26, on the Kern block in downtown Detroit.

Celebrity bell ringers, media personalities, will be honored for their past years of assistance in helping to make the Christmas appeal a great success. City officials and leading citizens from the community will present donations which will launch the fund raising effort.

Lt. Col. Raymond Carroll, divisional commander for Eastern Michigan, announced the goal this year of $650,000 which will be used to care for thousands in the Tri County area this holiday season.

Last Christmas, over 100,000 lives were touched during the Christmas season through the many services of the army by feeding, clothing and visits to hospitals, nursing homes and prisons.

On Thanksgiving Day, November 27, 10:00 a. m. to 2:00 p. m., 1,500 men, women and children are expected to enjoy the traditional turkey dinners served at The Salvation Army's Harbor Light Center, 415 Brainard at Cass, Detroit. Many volunteers will assist the staff as personnel prepare and serve anyone who may drop in, the lonely, homeless people from the area along with residents of Harbor Light Center.

Friday, November 28, the traditional red Christmas kettles will appear throughout Eastern Michigan. The 96th Congress of The United States has requested by joint resolution that the president declare this day as "Salvation Army Day" nationally honoring the army's 100 years of selfless service in the United States.

General Assistance Recipients 'Earn Back' $10-Million for Michigan

More than 10-million dollars were "earned back" or saved last fiscal year as a result of work projects for state general assistance recipients and benefit sanctions for those who were able to work but refused, John T. Dempsey, Michigan Department of Social Services director, said recently.

Citing preliminary figures from a year-end review of the GA work relief program, Dempsey said the estimated value of work actually performed by GA clients plus the amount of money not spent on grants to those who did not report for work totaled $10,562,752.

According to the report, GA recipients were assigned jobs on 7,823 work projects around the state between October 1979 and September 1980.

The study showed that $9,945 GA clients actually reported for work and provided almost two-million hours of employment that was valued at $6,222,577.

The GA recipients were asked to work sufficient hours each month at a prevailing wage (usually at or above the minimum wage) for the job until the value of the GA grant was earned. The average GA grant last year was about $189 per month.

GA recipients who were mentally or physically unable to participate were not sanctioned as long as they were able to obtain an excuse from work from a doctor. MDSS paid for physical exams of GA recipients who stated they had health problems.

Nevertheless, 18,519 GA clients who were determined capable of working but who refused to participate in the jobs program had their cases closed during the last fiscal year. The estimated savings of the sanctions for noncooperation was $3,607,389—a conservative projection based on a one month savings per sanctioned individual in each instance.

Another 2,445 GA clients entered regular jobs during the same 12 months and left the welfare rolls, resulting in a savings of an additional $413,342—again based only on the month of closure.

One of the most encouraging results of the study was revelation of a pattern of dramatic increases throughout the fiscal year in the number of GA cases closed for noncooperation.

During the first three months of fiscal year 1980, for example, about 600 cases per month were closed when clients refused to participate in the program. But by the last quarter of the year (July, August and September), closures had risen to more than 2,300 per month.
